That this intimation has caused a tremendous sensation in Catholic ecclesiastic circles was generally expected. The editors of the Review are three learned professors of Dunwoodie Seminary, the institution built and endowed by the friends and admirers of Archbishop Corrigan shortly before his demise. They are Rev. James F. Driscoll, a former member of the Sulpitians, and his associate editors, Father John F. Brady and Father Francis Duffy. All these priests are held in the highest veneration, not only in the New York archdiocese but throughout the country, where their zeal and ripe scholarship universally have been acknowledged.

The articles recently condemned by Rev. Mgr. Lepecier in the pages of Analecta, a publication of Rome, which contains the list and reviews of the works condemned by the congregation of the Index, are a series by Rev. Edward A. Hanna on "The Human Side of Christ," and some articles dealing with philosophical and theological teachings by such eminent Catholic writers as Father McSorley, the Paulist, and the well-known Father Clifford. Father Tirrell, the former Jesuit, recently excommunicated for his modernistic writings, also has been a frequent contributor. The review was considered the most scholarly and advanced publication of the Roman Catholic church in this or any other country.

ARTICLES UNDER BAN.

News also has reached Washington that the same number of the Analecta which condemned the Catholic Review of Dunwoodie Seminary also has repudiated an article on absolution by the author by "The Human Side of Christ," Rev. Edward A. Hanna, and has expressed strong disapprobation of several other articles which have appeared in the Catholic Encyclopaedia.

There was a rumor that the editors of the Encyclopaedia, Revs. Edward Pace and Thomas J. Shahan of this city and Father Wynne, the Jesuit of New York, had gone to Rome to endeavor to straighten out the Encyclopaedia matter before the committee appointed by the pope to examine all recent publications accused of modern tendencies. This rumor could not be confirmed, as Drs. Pace and Shahan reside in an obscure part of Nova Scotia during the summer, off the telegraph route, and no recent news has come from them. Father Wynne sailed a week ago from New York.

MORE CAUTION WANTED.

It has come to church circles that the sentiment of Rome toward the American church is that more caution must be exercised by clerics in publishing articles relating to faith and morals. It is understood that every archbishop and bishop who went to Rome from this country received this intimation, and that hereafter a strict supervision of all such articles must be exercised by dioceseans which will be established for the purpose. It is understood that specific instructions on this subject will be published when the new papal constitution is enforced in November.

Wrong Food

Causes World of Trouble

If we only realized it, we are the principal cause of our misfortunes, and eating improper food is a large factor in the make-up.

By giving a little thought to the question of what we ought and ought not to eat, we can make things much more pleasant for ourselves and others.

"Some time ago I was in the habit of eating buckwheat cakes, sausage, fried potatoes and coffee for breakfast," writes a New York lady.

"I was troubled with headache and indigestion, but though medicine would relieve me. Finally I saw my mistake and made up my mind that the cause of my trouble was in the food I was eating.

"About this time I saw Grape-Nuts mentioned in our paper, and I began to eat it with cream for breakfast and to drink Postum instead of coffee.

"I not only found them delicious but they corrected the headache and indigestion, and I feel like a new person. My mind is clearer, nerves steady, my step has spring in it, and I feel like singing all the time."

"There's a Reason."

A COMMON SENSE VIEW

No sane person will contend for one moment that West Peterborough made a mistake four years ago when it sent a government supporter to Ottawa. There are many evidences of the fact, that by having a good live representative from Peterborough at Ottawa, Peterborough has received many benefits which they otherwise might not have received. The Times does not say for one moment that it was a case of "send a government supporter and you will get this and that; send an opposition member and you will be punished by getting nothing." That is not the policy of The Times. This journal believes that a government can only undertake a certain amount of expenditure each year, and that no matter how badly certain works are needed in certain sections, these works will be overlooked unless the constituency has a good live aggressive man to press the requirements of his constituents upon the ministers of the various departments. And it is a generally accepted fact that if a member is friendly to the government, his chance of getting what he asks for are a thousand times brighter.

There seems to be no doubt that the present government will be returned to power, and it would certainly be an unwise act on the part of the people of West Peterborough to return any other than a government supporter. In Mr. Stratton the Liberal candidate, Peterborough will have a good live representative who can carry on the good work which was accomplished for the riding by Mr. Hall.

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 50 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for alterations and addition to Office Building, Experimental Farm, Ottawa," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m. on Tuesday, September 29, 1908, for alterations and addition to office building, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Plans and specifications can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with their actual signatures.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, made payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering declines to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or if he fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

VARICOCELE CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worried hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as fakirs whose only purpose was to get hold of my money. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much, and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week before I took the New Method Treatment, now I am earning $30 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumbrance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its premise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 30 feet wide for a distance of 180 feet at 170 feet depth extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $26.00 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

PRENTICE BOYS WILL CELEBRATE RELIEF OF LONDONDERRY

Movement on Foot to Hold a Monster Celebration here on August 12th, 1909--Many Years Since Prentice Boys Celebrated

The Relief of Londonderry will be celebrated in Peterborough on Aug. 12th, 1909. The "Prentice Boys are planning now to hold a monster demonstration here on that late and their object is to make it equal to or even greater than the big Orangemen's celebration of July 12th last, when probably 20,000 people were in the city and left a lot of money. These demonstrations, when properly conducted as the Orangemen's holidays always are, are a good thing for the city and community, as well as a big advertisement for the Order. It is almost certain therefore, that the Prentice Boys will have the hearty sympathy of every citizen of of Peterborough, regardless of creed or anything else.

It is many years since Derry Day was celebrated here, and it is the opinion of every member of this flourishing order that it is time to do public honor to that great historical event. The movement is underway now, and the Times learned that no stone will be left unturned to make it a complete success. Invitations will be issued to every lodge between Toronto and Kingston, as well as to all in this immediate vicinity and there is no doubt but that the great majority will not only accept the invitation, but will come to the city in great force.

The Relief of Londonderry celebration in Peterborough on August 12th, 1909, will be something for everyone to look forward to for the next eleven months.

The First Real Royal Wrestler

Hassan Abdullah who will Meet Hartshine is in the City

Hassan Abdullah the first real royal wrestler from the Sultan's court will arrive, along with Manager W. B. Napier on Tuesday morning, in Peterborough fit and ready to meet Gene Hartshine on Wednesday night. On Tuesday the quiet man from the Orient, the man who has been all over Palestine, over the Balkans, who has seen the wonderful Alps, the charming señoritas of Southern American and the graceful olive Parisian chanteuse, will be here.

Mr. Napier says he intends to have this man down at Joe Hays bowling alleys during the evening, and does not think Hassan will take a chance and do any stunts a la Fritz Mobi. Still he will be on hand in his quaint Arabain costume ready to say, "How do," to any Philistines, Syrians, Medes, Persians who may like to give him the glad hand. By the beard of Toronto and Lindsay also and will watch carefully for "dope."

READ WHAT HE OWES TO

Zam-Buk

Mr. R. C. Horton, a prominent Salvation Army worker, who occupies the proud position of Deputy Head Master at the Temple, Toronto, bears testimony to the truly great healing power of Zam-Buk balm. He says:—

"Pimples and sores broke out all over my face and neck and notwithstanding all I did to try and cure them they spread. In places the skin was inflamed over big patches and caused me great pain and annoyance. I was advised to try Zam-Buk and for several days I applied it to the sores continuing it often with the healing balm. It soon began to soothe the pain, and in a short time the sores ceased to be so angry and painful! With perseverance Zam-Buk healed the sores completely and made my skin as smooth and clear as possible. I strongly recommend Zam-Buk to all who suffer from unsightly skin troubles, sores, ulcers, etc. It is a wonderful healer!"

Zam-Buk cures eczema, itch, blood poison, festering, chronic and suppurating sores, burns, cuts, barber's rash, female rashes, skin injuries and diseases. It is also a specific for piles. All druggists and stores sell, a box or 3 for $1.25. Send 1c. stamp to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto for sample box.

Foot Bridge at Normal School

Connects Conger St. with School Property

The new foot bridge being constructed over the deep cut on the old Grand Trunk Railway line is nearly completed ready for use. The bridge is for the convenience of the Normal School students. It connects the west end of Conger street with the east side of the Normal school grounds and reduces the distance from the Normal School to the Queen Alexandria school considerably. Going by the bridge the walk is about five minutes while it would take a good twenty minutes to go round by the main road. The structure is 72 feet long by 6 feet wide, with a railing 3 1-2 feet high. Over the cut it is 17 feet from the ground. It will be greatly appreciated by the Normal students.

Did Not Pay Performers

Manager of Special Attractions Left the City with All the Proceeds

Life is not all what it seems, and sometimes traveling performers realize the fact beyond a shadow of a doubt. Such was the experience of the acrobats, who did the stunt with the trick house at the Peterborough fair last Friday and Saturday. The performance had been contracted for for Friday afternoon and evening and Saturday afternoon. The price was $27.5. On Friday night, however the trick house artists failed to appear, and the show was somewhat marred on that account. When it came to settling up the fair directors deducted $100 from the manager of the performers and settled. To get even the manager took the first train out of the city Saturday evening, and left the acrobats here without any money and free to do as they pleased. The performers however got some money together, paid their board and left at midnight Sunday.

Council Should Offer Reward

For Discovery of Persons Who Send in False Fire Alarms

False alarms and alarms for little grass fires have recently become so frequent that the fire department and the city council is becoming tired of the joke. On Sunday four alarms were sent in, one was false and three were for fires which anyone could have put out with a pail of water or so. Those people who are so clever in finding little grass fires and who manipulate so successfully the alarm box should also considered themselves capable of carrying a pail of water from a nearby well and extinguish the blaze. Any person with any interest in the town's welfare would certainly exert themselves to that extent.

On the other hand the man or boy who deliberately turns in a false alarm, just for the pleasure of seeing the brigade turn out is almost too mean to be allowed to run at large. The habit is becoming too common for the good of the town. It is time for the council to offer a reward for evidence which will convict the person who sends in a false alarm. It will be the only way the authorities will get hold of the guilty parties. A fine of $25 will soon put a stop to the practice.

Mothers Must Have Abundant Strength

No Mother Can Bear a Healthy Child Unless She is Strong Herself

A woman's anxieties multiply tenfold about the time the new baby is expected.

If her strength is exhausted and her blood weak, it goes hard in the hour of trial.

Ferrozone should be used because it makes the blood nutritious and rich. By instilling new strength into every part of the body, it uplifts your spirits at once.

Childbirth is certainly made easier by Ferrozone. The following statement expresses the earnest gratitude of Mrs. M. E. Duckworth, of Durham. It is a woman's story,—of her own case—told that other women may profit by her experience:

"Before baby was born I was in a weak, miserable, nervous state. I had no reserve strength. I tried to build up, but nothing helped me. I looked upon the coming day with dread. Knowing I was unequal to the occasion.

"Ferrozone braced me up at once, gave me strength and spirits, brought back my nerves and cheerfulness. From my experience with Ferrozone I recommend it to all expectant mothers."

There is more concentrated nourishment in Ferrozone than you can get from anything else. It supplies what weak systems need. Simply take one tablet at meals and you'll feel benefitted in a thousand ways.

Ferrozone makes healthy, virile, vigorous women; try it. 50c. per box of fifty tablets, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

Will Organize Kennel Club

All dog fanciers in Peterborough are requested to bear in mind the meeting called for Thursday in the Y.M.C.A. parlors. The object is to form a Kennel Club, and as there are now some 15 or 20 well known lovers of canines willing to help along an association, there should be no trouble in getting things started. It is intended to hold a dog show in the not distant future, and some of the enthusiasts are now looking for premises in which to hold the exhibition. It is hoped that there will be a large turn out that night.

—Mrs. James Kendry is in Toronto attending the meeting of the Board of Managers of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, which is meeting in Carlton street Methodist church, Toronto.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the diseases grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound.

If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

Despairing Lover's Self Destruction

Locked Himself in Lion's Cage and was Horribly Mangled

New York, Sept. 20.—A cable despatch to the World from Laval, France, says:—For a truly spectacular suicide the self-destruction of a young countryman here this week is almost without parallel. The youth, who was only nineteen years old, and whose name was Jean Grollier, became enamored of a pretty young girl acrobat in a small traveling show. Every night Grollier would go to the show and applaud the girl, and he soon became acquainted with her and with all the members of the troupe.

The rest of the performers liked the country boy and were friendly, but the girl turned a cold shoulder upon him, and would give him no encouragement when he protested his love for her.

One night, after having been repulsed by the object of his love, Grollier walked back of the little arena where a small menagerie was kept. His presence there attracted no particular attention, for he was so well known that he had the run of the show and could go and come as he pleased. He walked straight to a cage in which were three lions, unlocked the door, entered the cage, turned and locked the door.

The members of the troupe were horrified and for a moment were paralyzed into inaction by the youth's boldness. When they sprang forward it was too late to assist him, for one of the lions had made a rush at the boy and seized him by the throat.

Grollier shrieked in agony and terror, but he was borne to the ground, and the lion bit and mauled him dreadfully. When at last the beast was driven off his victim was dead.

In one of the youth's pockets was found a letter of farewell to the girl he had loved in vain, and then it was understood that he had deliberately chosen that horrible way of committing suicide.

Fashion and Fat

Isn't it fortunate that when fashion demands slender gracefulness of women who have to break corset laces to make themselves even presentable that science steps in and makes their task easy?

For dieting and exercising it has substituted a pleasant wholesome mixture that can be obtained at small cost from any druggist, viz: 1-2 ounce of Marmola, 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 4 3-4 ounces Syrup Simplex.

One teaspoonful of this mixture after meals and at bedtime will take off four to seven pounds of fat a week without causing wrinkles, interfering with the diet, or distressing the stomach in the slightest.

Successful Sale at the Barracks

The sale of goods at the Salvation Army barracks last night was a decided success. A large crowd of eager purchasers were present and the many articles offered were practically all sold. The barracks was very nicely arranged and decorated for the occasion and a good sum of money was raised. The Army Band was present and rendered several selections which added much to the pleasure of the evening.

"The Pale Girl"

Did Not Know Coffee was the Cause

In cold weather some people think a cup of hot coffee good to help keep warm. So it is—for a short time, but the drug—caffeine—acts on the heart to weaken the circulation and the reaction is to cause more chilliness.

There is a hot wholesome drink which a Dak. girl found after a time, makes the blood warm and the heart strong.

She says:

"Having lived for five years in N. Dak., I have used considerable coffee owing to the cold climate. As a result I had a dull headache regularly suffered from indigestion, and had so "life" in me.

"I was known as 'the pale girl' and people thought I was just weakly. After a time I had heart trouble and became very nervous, never knew what it was to be real well. Took medicine but it never seemed to do any good.

"Since being married my husband and I both have thought coffee was harming us and we would quit, only to begin again, although we felt it was the same as poison to us.

"Then we got some Postum. Well, the effect was really wonderful. My complexion is clear now, headache gone and I have a great deal of energy I had never known while drinking coffee.

"I haven't been troubled with indigestion since using Postum, am not nervous, and need no medicine. We have a little girl and boy who both love Postum and thrive on it and Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

War on Consumption is Now in Order--Medical Men Now in Session

Washington, Sept. 22.—Enemies of the white plague from every civilized nation of the earth and from every state of the Union assembled in Washington to begin a world-wide warfare that is expected eventually to result in the wiping out of this terrible scourge of humanity. The fifth International Congress on Tuberculosis, which met yesterday, represents beyond all doubt the largest aggregation of scientific and educated humanitarians ever gathered in a single city. Backed by the medical and sociological science of the age, with unlimited funds at its disposal and a definite object in view, it seems hardly possible that the congress can fail of attaining its end. The convention opened yesterday to last until October 13, will likely be a historical event and will be remembered when other more spectacular events are forgotten.

Every important commonwealth of the Union has sent committees to the congress, and the nations of Europe and South America are represented by their most distinguished physicians, savants and humanitarians. Upon his return to Washington President Roosevelt will take an active interest in the congress and will probably preside at some of the sessions.

The last International Congress on Tuberculosis was held in Paris in 1905, and three years before that a similar congress was held in London. That the present meeting will be far more important than any of its predecessors, both in attendance, influence and practical results, is generally admitted. This is the first congress to be held in the United States, and will probably be the last for many years to come.

Representatives of forty-six foreign countries are here and there is eager competition for the honor of securing the next congress. Addresses will be made by some of the most prominent scientists of Great Britain, Canada, France, Sweden, Germany, Holland, Russia and Latin America.

The list of papers to be presented includes contributions to scientific research on the subject of the cure and prevention of tuberculosis by the following distinguished savants.

Dr. K. W. Philip, of Edinburg, founder of the first tuberculosis dispensary.

Dr. Theodore Williams, of London.

Dr. Arthur Newsholme, health officer of Brighton, England, director of King Edward's sanitarium.

Dr. C. H. Spronck, of Utrecht, Holland.

Dr. Turban, of Davos-Platz, Switzerland, the originator of the scheme generally followed at present for the classification of tuberculosis.

Dr. Gotthold Pannwitz, of Berlin, secretary-general of the International Conference of Tuberculosis.

Dr. Emil von Behring, of Marburg, the originator of the diphtheria antitoxin.

Dr. Calmette, director of the Pasteur Institute at Lisle, France.

Dr. Letulle, of Paris, secretary-general of the last International Congress on Tuberculosis.

The exhibition and the congress are housed in the National Museum, adjoining the Smithsonian. The exhibition is practically a world's fair on the subject of tuberculosis. It shows what is being done around the globe in the fight against tuberculosis, from Alaska down to the Cape of Good Hope, from the Steppes of northern Russia to the diamond fields of South Africa.

A prize of $1,000 is offered for the best evidence of effective work in the prevention or relief of tuberculosis by any voluntary association since the last international congress in 1905. In addition, two gold medals will be awarded, and will be accompanied by diplomas or certificates of award. Evidence is to include all forms of printed matter, educational leaflets, reports, etc.

A prize of $1,000 is offered for the best exhibit of an existing sanitarium for the treatment of curable cases of tuberculosis among the working classes. Medals of gold and silver with diplomas or certificates also will be given. The exhibit must show in detail, construction, equipment, management and results obtained.

A prize of $1,000 is offered for the best exhibit of a furnished house for a family or group of families of the working class, designed in the interest of the crusade against tuberculosis. This prize is designed to stimulate efforts toward obtaining a maximum of sunlight, ventilation, proper heating, and general sanitary arrangement for an inexpensive house. A model of the house and furnishings is required. Medals and diplomas also will be awarded.

A prize of $1,000 is offered for the best exhibit of a dispensary or kindred institution for the treatment of the tuberculosis poor. The exhibit must show in detail construction, equipment, management, and results obtained. Medals and diplomas also will be given.

A prize of $1,000 is offered for the best exhibit of a hospital for the treatment of advanced pulmonary tuberculosis. The exhibit must show construction, management, and results. Medals and certificates will be awarded as well.

The Hodgkins Fund Prize of $1,500 is offered by the Smithsonian Institution for the best treatise that may be submitted on "The Relation of Atmospheric Air to Tuberculosis."

LORD BISHOP OF MONTREAL DIED OF HEART FAILURE

Seized by Attack at Close of Morning Service --Assisted to Vestry by Rev. Dr. Symonds

Montreal, Sept. 21.—Right Rev. James Carmichael, Lord Bishop of Montreal, died at seven o'clock this morning at Bishop's Court. He preached at the morning service in Christ Church Cathedral yesterday, and and was attacked by a sudden heart weakness at the close of the sermon. In the afternoon he took another attack.

The medical men who were summoned, saw that it was a very serious attack of heart failure, and the Bishop was carried to bed, and the members of his family were summoned.

The bishop retained consciousness until six o'clock this morning, but was unconscious for the last hour.

Christ Church Cathedral was crowded yesterday, when Bishop Carmichael preached the sermon that was to be his last. His theme was "The Pan-Anglican Congress and the Lambeth Conference."

It was the first sermon which his lordship had preached since his return from England. His voice was clear and firm, and it did not appear that the sermon was taking his lordship a strength. Almost immediately after pronouncing the benediction, however, he turned to the vicar, Rev. Dr. Symonds, who was standing close to his lordship at the altar, and said, "I think I am going to faint."

The vicar assisted the Bishop to the vestry, where a glass of water was brought to his lordship, who revived at once, so much so that he said the closing prayer with the choir in the chapter house at the close of the service. He remained in the chapter house for some time, chatting with various people, and Dr. Symonds thought the attack had passed away.

The bishop returned to bishop's Court. In the afternoon was again seized with heart weakness, from which he has suffered at intervals in the past. His son, Dr. Carmichael, was summoned at once, and also Dr. Finley, and Dr. W. F. Hamilton.

Right Rev. Dr. Carmichael, Anglican Bishop of Montreal, was taken suddenly ill while conducting service at Christ Church Cathedral yesterday morning.

Bishop Carmichael returned only a few days ago from London, where he attended the Anglican Conference. He returned apparently in the best of health and spirit, and his sudden illness created quite a shock. He was one of the best known Anglican divines in Canada.

By the death of Bishop Carmichael Montreal loses one of its most lovable clergymen. In his passing away Catholics, as well as Protestants feel that they have lost a loving friend and a hearty sympathizer. Certainly few, if any, ministers possessed the regard of the members of other faiths that did Bishop Carmichael. Right through his life, both as pastor of St. George's and later as Bishop, he was, above all, the minister of the people, always interesting himself in their temporal as well as their spiritual welfare. Possessed of a most benign countenance, he always brought a ray of brightness and sunshine into the house or heart that was troubled. In a word, he went about, day in and day out, doing good and only seeking more opportunity to do a greater good. Among his fellow-ministers he was always regarded as a specially holy and godly man; who, early in life, had set for himself a very high standard of life and daily strove to live up to it.

His lordship had pulpit engagements for every Sunday until well on in the coming year.

The deceased was born in Dublin where he received part of his education. He was ordained a priest nearly fifty years ago, and in 1859 was located at Clinton, Ont. He was made assistant at St. George's Montreal, in 1868, and ten years later took a parish in Hamilton. In 1882 he became the rector of St. George's. He was made Dean of Montreal the next year, and in 1902 became Bishop in succession to Archbishop Bond. He was a lecturer at the Diocesan College, Montreal, and past president of both the Montreal Microscopical Society and the Natural History Society.

The C. P. R. Absorbs Chicago, Great Western

Chicago, Sept. 21.—A special despatch to the Inter-Ocean, from Minneapolis, says that the Chicago Great Western Railroad Company, together with all of its terminal facilities, rolling stock and motive power, and equipment, will soon be the sole property of and a subsidiary line to the vast system of the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company, seems to be a certainty, according to unofficial information from headquarters of the Great Western in St. Paul.

The Chicago Great Western Railway controls 1,467 miles of line, has 300 locomotives, and 10,000 freight cars. It fell into the hands of receivers last January "pending the formation of a plan for financing its requirements due retiring the 6 per cent. gold notes, maturing between 1909 and 1912, and providing for improvements."

The stock issued total $107,685,917. Dividends of two per cent., semi-annual, are paid on the 4 per cent. debenture stock.

The gross earnings totalled $11,618,729 last year, and the net earnings $3,407,151.

The company owns a line from Chicago to St. Paul.

NEWS TO SHAUGHNESSY.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—When asked about the reported sale of the Chicago Great Western to the C.P.R. by a newspaper correspondent this morning, Sir Shaughnessy said;

"I have heard nothing whatever about it."

INDIA'S PROTECTION OF HER FORESTS

The recent destructive conflagration in British Columbia has in England as well as here called renewed attention to the subject of protection of forests against fire. The British Government has had a problem similar to ours to meet in India, and as a result of long experience has adopted a system which has been proven by two score years of trial to be successful. To this system The Spectator directs the attention of the Canadian Government and people as a means of preventing a recurrence of the disaster in the Kootenay.

The broad outlines of the system in use in India are not very different from the methods of fighting forest and prairie fires the world over. But the careful and systematic manner in which these principles are applied justifies giving an account of it in some detail. The Spectator thus describes the Indian system of "fire-lines" :—

Early in the season, before the prairie-grass has reached an inflammable condition, a pair of parallel paths some five or six feet wide, and at a suitable distance apart, are cut along the margin of the forest. These are joined at intervals by cross-paths which divide the intervening strip of ground into sections, the whole forming a ladder-shaped system of paths upon the future fireline. The grass cut from the paths is thrown inwards, on to the sections between the rungs of the ladder. As soon as the grass growing on the fireline is dry enough to burn, even partially on dangerous ground, it is burnt off by successive sections. sections. The burning is a somewhat delicate operation, requiring skill and experience; but hundreds, indeed thousands of miles of fire lines are thus successfully burnt annually.

The burning operation is performed at evening, when the dews will act as assistants in preventing the spread of fire, and it is watched by men armed with branches of trees to beat out the incipient fires which may catch from sparks carried outside the area to be burned. "Blades and seed-stems of grass dry from the top downwards, and if a first burning be carried out when the herbage is half dry, the fire is of course much less fierce and is more easily controlled than if the entire crop down to the roots had been dry enough to burn. In the former case, a second burning becomes necessary when the unconsumed remnant has become dry; and then, again, the strength of the fire is very much less than it would have been had the first burning not been effected. It is true that a double burning increases the cost; but it reduces the risk, and there are circumstances under which it is to be recommended . . . The width of the burnt line will depend on the height and density of the grass through which it runs, and on the strength and direction of the wind usually prevailing during the dangerous season", in India they run fifty to one hundred yards or more. "As regards trees growing on the fireline, the

IRISH LEAGUE'S DEMANDS

If anyone imagined that the demands of the United Irish League would be satisfied by what has been done for Ireland during the past few years, he will have been undeceived by the speech of Mr. John Redmond in Dublin a few days ago. Although the legislation in regard to the compulsory sale of their lands by the landlords which Mr. Balfour passed has involved a burden of many millions on the tax-payers of Great Britain, that fact has little regard from the Nationalists leaders. The Liberal Government ever since it came into power has been most subservient to the demands of the Nationalist members in Parliament, but only with the result that every grant given, every concession made, simply emboldens them to make new demands and utter threats if there is any delay in complying with them. And at the same time little or no protection for life or property is given by the Government to the minority. Cattle driving is carried on almost without any attempt by the Government to check it. Mr. Birrell apparently thinking he has done all that is necessary when he refers to these outrages as "regrettable incidents."

The following subjects have been added to our already large assortment of final year cards; Normal School, High Hall and equipment, Water carnival, Holiday scenes from Brock street, C.P.R. Station, Post Office, Custom House, Y.M.C.A. Auditorium, Western Cattle and Ontario River, St. Peter's School, etc. These are all colored cards of the very finest finish. Times Bookstore.

INFANT PARLIAMENT

A man must be a diligent student of world politics at the present time to keep informed on the many parliamentary bodies that are coming into existence. They spring up in the most unlikely and unexpected places and amid such surroundings as make them appear, if not ridiculous, at least inappropriate and fantastic. Russia, Persia, Turkey, China — a curious procession; and it would not be a cause of surprise to us if the new Sultan of Morocco crowned his present, although possibly only temporary, success by giving the tribes some sort of parliamentary institutions. This class of rulers seems to have become imbued with the idea that they have not complete regal attributes without some sort of parliamentary attachment, just as some of the "kings" of the West Coast of Africa forgot the scantiness of their wardrobes if they received the British representative with the regal insignia of a top hat and an umbrella.

A LABOR COLONY

The labor colony bill to be introduced in the New York Legislature next winter is described by the philanthropic weekly Charities as an interesting attempt to reduce vagrancy. This bill framed by specialists in charitable work, in New York State, has already received much attention from the press and is supported by charitable organizations and railways.

Briefly, it purposes an organization for a labor colony to which habitual vagrants shall be committed, their terms to be indefinite. Good care, good food, a reasonable amount of work, reformatory influences, a parole system, and a chance to learn a trade are among its principle features. The bill is modelled in many respects upon compulsory labor colonies which have already proved their success in Europe. Of course, one labor colony will not solve the vagrancy question, but it will make a good beginning and will be watched with great interest as an important experiment.

The vagrancy evil has not yet afflicted Canada gravely; may never do so, if we give heed to the lessons conveyed in the economic histories of older countries. But we may find some profit in observation of the measures taken elsewhere to the determination and application of effective remedy. Some day a knowledge of such matters might come in handy.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The veil of smoke which has been over the face of all things during the past few days is composed of exceedingly valuable material. That which has hidden Montreal and cloaked the river in this vicinity, the result is of a peculiar brown variety, the result of the contained ashes and gases derived from the peat beds in the Lake St. Francis district. These were fired, it is supposed, by sparks from locomotives, and will continue to burn until checked by heavy rains. The public loss will be heavy, and as far as can be seen now complete so far as the burnt area extends. There is nothing to spring up and furnish a covering to the ruin, which might in time become valuable. A burnt out peat bed is simply a bed of ashes, of some slight value in themselves as sources of mineral potash, and nothing more. The actual direct loss is not capable of estimation at present, owing to the many undeveloped discoveries which have lately drawn attention to the value of peat. But beyond a doubt the present fire will be a cause of very deep regret, when the damage comes to be realized later on.

In spite of a good deal of wild talk by those who wisely insist upon the necessity of forest preservation, we venture the assertion, which will be supported by all experienced lumbermen, that lumbering operations as ordinarily conducted, will never completely destroy the forests. On the contrary, if the trees suffered from nothing but the timber cutters' axe, there would always be timber to cut. But, unfortunately the dry tops of the felled trees, the branches and the twigs destroyed by their fall, these make the work of the axeman to be a curse,—a source of danger to the woods. It is in this kind of dry brushwood that the forest fires gain their headway. When a fire has been allowed to obtain full force, whether in a city or a bush, the draught it creates by the action of its own heat upon the atmosphere, makes it to be a demon of destruction to all in its way, even to limestone houses, or green hardwood trees. The danger in the woods is terrific because, generally speaking, there are no trained fire-fighters with well adapted appliances to check it before it attains its full power. In the vicinity of Drummondville, a not unimportant railroad junction in the Eastern Townships, a great saw-mill is approaching completion with the object of converting into money the hundreds of thousands of trees, now going up in smoke, threatened by fire. The saw-mill men on the Magog River and at Sherbrooke, Brompton, Windsor and Melbourne see the material wasted by fire which they could and willingly would turn into hard cash for their workmen and shareholders. On the Ottawa and its tributaries the same thing is happening, and in many another section of the country also. It is idle, perhaps, to attempt to set a valuation upon the loss, but our experience would suggest that there is no extravagance in setting it at from half a million dollars to a million a day. The Dominion is that much poorer for the smoky veiling which disfigures Nature just at this writing.

The worst of it is that much of the damage is caused by someone's fault. Fishermen's and hunters' camp fires, looking places, which have been neglected, started some of the fires. Smokers' matches, or tobacco refuse have caused others. Gun wads are to blame sometimes. Settlers clearing land are perhaps somewhat responsible, though it is rather early in the season for burning "slash." The fact is, we are far too slack in our fire prevenitve measures. Laws are not enforced as they should be, and do not go far enough in any case. A system of licensing guides, involving the compulsory use of them, and attaching responsibility to them, would perhaps help to mitigate the camp fire risk. A heavy penalty for one who has robbed the country of its patrimony by burning it, appears to be necessary also, and some teaching ought to be instilled into the minds of all who are ever likely to visit the woods, whereby a sense of the value and the beauty of these blessed sanctuaries of rest and freedom, might instinctly guard them against profanation by fire. The rightly instructed man will be just as careful with fire in the woods as he would in a church or a house. Others, the law of the land should, as we have already suggested effectively guard us against.

There has been considerable discussion of the part that is to be played by the airship in war which seems to be based on the assumption that the limit of offensive tactics would be reached with the use of the new device. That is assuming very much for the airship and against all possible means of resisting it. If the guns now made are not adequate for bringing down such a bird we may be sure that invention would not stop with them and that aerial navigation over a hostile ship or camp would be made very unpleasant.

However, it is a long way to that crisis, and we may at least acknowledge an indebtedness to the military authorities of the world for the impetus they are giving to the work of the inventors, which may have a decided value in peace if it should have none at all in war. If we pursue the parallel of the automobile, the most certain use of the ship would seem to be that of the pleasure craft. An automobile trip in the air should be far more exhilarating than one on land, but as carriers of freight the advantage would seem to be distinctly with the land machine. If a very high rate of speed could be attained, however, the airship would be an excellent machine for a special delivery service for long distances. Assuming less far than the military enthusiasts do, it might come to have a high value as a mail carrier.

But no living man can foretell the exact course the developments will take. The precedents justify us simply in believing that there will be great and rapid progress, that one invention will lead to another, that improvement will be added to improvement, that needs will be created and supplied until people wonder how the world ever got along without airships.

Science has camped many times close on the trail of a fairy tale. Frequently it has seemed to take the lead from wonder stories purely imaginary. There was instance the other day when Prof. Francis Darwin told the British Association of his conviction that plants have memory and habits and at least a suggestion of consciousness. Prof. Harold W. T. Wager continues on this striking line of new thought in natural history. He displays proofs taken from leaves in support of a claim that plants have to some degree the sense of sight. At least they can see where to turn for the light most favorable to life and growth.

The practical trend of these discoveries is not apparent. Just now the new ideas of plant consciousness may impress most laymen as being especially pretty conceits, having their charm heightened by the possibility of a shade of truth.

But the two professors who have spoken already have not swept the whole range of hypothesis. Shall we not hear from a third man, subtly wise, who shall tell us that the growing things can also talk among themselves? That when we speak of "whispering trees" and of grain that sings in the breeze we are dealing with more of fact than we realize?

We ought to desire something of this sort in positive revelation. The manifestations of actual voices of the woods pleading and raging against the forest-killers of our times is a miracle to be prayed for.

The wise farmer will wait. That is the opinion and the advice of Professor Elliott, head of the Department of Agriculture at Washington State College, regarding the latest wheat monstrosity, says the Monetary Times. Away in Idaho, famous for mining and agriculture, sprinkled with a little lawlessness, a farmer claims to have discovered wheat, a perfect prodigy in the agricultural family. It will yield 222 bushels to the acre of Number One Hard, so the story goes. A name was given—Alaska wheat. With much judicious advertising it sold as high as twenty dollars a bushel.

The farmer's imagination is seldom tickled with agricultural get-rich-quick schemes. You may tell him in vain of boats you have for sale, some that will grow as long as the giraffe's neck and provide enough sugar to sweeten the whole town's teeth. He turns away from your story—for a good reason. He knows what you are. With mining schemes, it is different. Bring forward an assertion that from a hole, ere has taken assaying fabulous wealth. Arrange a statement of dividends paid by the really rich mines of the country. Buy something of the properties which immediately join the new bonanza. And the best suspiciousness immediately gives place to mineral confidence. That is because the farmer knows a best when he sees it; but ore and agriculture are not of the same family.

It is thus the more remarkable that a large sale of Alaska wheat should have been effected. The seed was advertised to grow in any climate; hail and frost mattered little. Alaska wheat was proof against the whims of the elements. The discoverer of this stuff toiled on like the inventor of old. Finally, after planting seven pounds in the spring of 1905, 1,235 pounds were brought forth, or 222 times the original sowing. And it all graded Number One Hard. The Canadian grower has bitten the bait with the rest. Much Alaska wheat has found its way across the border from Idaho. The Alaska brand was to have revolutionized wheat-growing in the United States; probably—if results and advertising permitted—in Canada also. This particular wheat is said to have one single head, around which are nine other short heads. Professor Elliott, quoted above, says he knows of a seven-headed variety, grown extensively twenty years ago. It yielded no better than other common varieties. He has visited some of the fields of the so-called Alaska wheat, which are located in Whitman and Latah Counties. The wheat, he says, was studied while growing and ripening in the field and a large selecting of heads taken for closer study in the laboratory. These tracts of wheat were badly mixed with other varieties, among which were found little club Winter Fife, red Russian and Wolf's hybrid. Fully twenty-five per cent. of the growing wheat was not Alaska, and any one purchasing such for seed would have a sorry mixture. He also examined two other varieties grown by farmers in the vicinity and claimed to be new discoveries. Placed side by side it is impossible to distinguish the samples from the three fields apart, and they are apparently of common origin.

The plants of this variety are inclined to grow tall and have good foliage. By nature it is a spring wheat, but under favourable winter conditions, it may, like many other spring varieties, succeed when sown in the fall. It stools sparingly and will not occupy the ground as will little club or red Russian. The heads are large, since they are composed of a cluster of smaller heads springing from a common stem, and, as they ripen, they weight causes the stems to droop heavily. In fact, the very size of the heads is a most serious objection to the variety, as it cannot stand erect and in spite of a fairly stiff straw is sure to lodge badly. The heads are not uniform in character.

As is well known, says Professor Elliott, not only the Bluestem, but also the Poulard and Durum wheats show composite forms quite frequently, and the evidence is strong that the so-called Alaska wheat is in reality a composite Bluestem. When it is recalled that nowhere are the Bluestem considered valuable for milling purposes and have never gained favor as stock, feeds among the farmers of America, the value of this wonderful new wheat of fairy tale origin may well be questioned.

Years ago the famous scientist, Sir John Lawes, said that if a man should leave the earth wheat would follow him in three years. It is a plant that cannot subsist without cultivation, and is never found growing wild, even in the balmy climate of Alaska. In all the history of the world's wheat the highest recorded yields barely exceed 100 bushels and the claims of the promoters of Alaska of 222 bushels an acre are little short of preposterous. The fields examined by Professor Elliott would not exceed 35, although doubtless better results could have been secured. The claims that it will grade with No. 1 are based only on a laboratory test. The millers have yet to speak. Bluestem, Poulard and Durum varieties will show equally as good gluten tests. So the wise farmer will wait.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else can fit. All head, as says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—causes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

SAILORS' UNIFORMS.

Copied From England and Not Representative of America.

All are familiar with the American man-of-war sailor's suit, but has any one ever stopped to consider how he comes by it? With the exception of the fit itself and the stars in the collar the whole suit is copied from the English. One would have thought that by this time the American nation would have fallen upon some original costume for its navy in some way more representative of America.

In the early days of the British navy it was still the custom to tie the hair in a cue after well greasing it, but much annoyance was felt by the men in consequence of the oil getting on the rough serge of their jumpers or blouses. This caused the blue collar of the same material as the jumper to be added, but without much success, as the collar looked quite an untidy, so at length the idea of putting the blue drill one over the serge was adopted, the drill collar being a separate appendage and therefore easily washed and kept clean. The lanyard was worn to represent the ropes and rigging of the ship, and the jackknife inserted that (to be paradoxical) the sharpshooter's object in life was death—to his enemy.

In these days the neck was exposed, but as time went on and more thought was given to the welfare of the men this was found to be injurious to the health; hence the substitute of the white neck flannel, white being used to give the effect of the uncovered neck.

The two rows of white braid at the top of the cuff represent England and Ireland, the one row at the bottom showing that Scotland had not become annexed. The rows of braid on the collar represent wholly and solely the victories of Nelson.

THE LAND OF GRAVES.

Ancient Egyptians Believed in Constant Reminders of Death.

To the Egyptian death was but the beginning of a career of adventures and experiences compared with which the most vivid emotions of this life were tame. He lived with the fear of death before his eyes. Everything around him reminded him of that dreadful initiation into the mysteries of the tremendous after life for which his present existence was but a preparation. His cemeteries were not hidden away in remote suburbs; his dead were not covered with mere grassy mounds or a slab of stone. The whole land was his graveyard; its whole art was of the mortuary. "Are there no graves in Egypt that thou hast brought us into the wilderness to die?" asked the Israelites in derision, and we may believe that Moses winced at the sarcasm.

Egypt is the land of graves, and the whole energy of the people that could be spared from keeping life together was devoted to death. The mightiest tombs in the world—the pyramids—were raised upon the deaths of multitudes of toiling slaves. The hills were honeycombed passages and galleries, chambers, pits, all painfully excavated in honor of the illustrious dead and sculptured and painted with elaborate skill to make them fit habitations for his ghost.

Wherever he looked the Egyptian beheld preparations for the guilt turning point of existence. The masons was squaring blocks for the tomb chamber; the potter molded images of the gods or bowls and jars to be placed in the grave for the protection or refreshment of the Ka, exhausted with the ordeals of the underworld; the sculptor and painter were at work upon the walls of the funeral chamber, illustrating the means through which the ghost was to pass or depicting the industrious life of the departed.

The very temples which cluster along the levels beside the Nile were in a sense but vestibules to the tombs in the hills behind. The sacred lake, now the weedy, picturesque haunt of waterfowl, was then the scene of solemn ferryings of the dead. The temple walls were covered with the terrors of the judgment to come. The houses of the living, indeed, were built of perishing mud, but the houses of the dead and the shrines where supplication was made to the gods who ruled their fate were made to last forever. On them all the strength, the science and the artistic skill of the ancient Egyptians were constantly lavished.—London Standard.

No Hitch.

"How did the wedding come off today?"

"Without a hitch."

"Glad to hear it."

"I said without a hitch. The bride backed out at the last minute."

Not Written.

"How do you write 'horn?'" asked the teacher of a small boy at the blackboard.

"A horn isn't written at all," answered the little fellow. "It's blowed."—Exchange.

Like a Bicycle.

"What does the doctor say is the matter with Miranda?"

"He says she has pneumatic tendencies and that she is threatened with wheel trouble."—Baltimore American.

FEMININE VANITY.

The Jewish and Egyptian Women Were Arrant Coquettes.

Feminine vanity is not the product of our effete civilization, but is as old as the history of the world.

The Jewish and Egyptian women were arrant coquettes and well versed in the artificialities of the toilet. When Jezebel learned of the approach of Jehu she sought to enhance her charms by painting her face and blackening her eyes with antimony.

Judith before she proceeded on her murderous mission to the tent of Holofernes bathed and perfumed her person with infinite care and wrapped herself in a splendid veil, in whose voluminous folds she concealed her cruel weapon. The Roman belles of the empire dyed their hair blond, red and even blue, according to the caprice of the moment. They used cosmetics of every kind to whiten and, like the Moorish women, augmented the luster of their eyes by means of antimony. They also penciled their eyebrows with a bodkin blackened in the smoke of frankincense.

Wealthy women bathed in asses' milk and slept with their faces poulticed with bread steeped in asses' milk in order to efface wrinkles. Even poets sang the praises of certain cosmetics, and Ovid wrote a laudatory poem on the merits of a preparation which, he asserted, preserved the freshness of the skin to old age. It was a curious mixture and was compounded of lily roots, yolks of eggs, hartshorn, gum benzoin, flour and honey, which were all boiled together.

Pliny mentions a species of face powder made of earth from the island of Chio dissolved in vinegar. Juvenal writes that the countenances of the Roman women were disfigured with this supposed beautifier. Among the Roman ladies it was the fashion to be very pale, as red cheeks were not deemed aristocratic. To attain this desirable pallor a quantity of chalk was rubbed on the face.

Many of the cosmetics in use in Greece and Rome have been discovered among ancient relics. Antimony, the oldest of them all, has been found in the utensils belonging to the stone age.

A Rather Novel Complaint.

An English traveler once met a countryman sitting in a state of the most frantic despair and apparently near the last agonies by the side of one of the mountain lakes of Switzerland. He inquired the cause of his sufferings. "Oh," said the latter, "I was very hot and thirsty and took a large draft of the clear water of the lake and then sat down on this stone to consult my guidebook. To my astonishment, I found that the water of this lake is very poisonous! Oh, I am a gone man; I feel it running all over me. I have only a few minutes to live! Remember me to"—

"Let me see the guidebook," said his friend. Turning to the passage, he found, "L'eau de lac est bien poisonneux" (The water of this lake abounds in fish).

"Is that the meaning of it?"

"Certainly."

The dying man looked up with a radiant countenance. "What would have become of you," said his friend, "if I had not met you?"

"I should have died of imperfect knowledge of the French language."

A Great Man's Simple Speech.

I was lately told a delightful story of a great statesman staying with a humble and anxious host who had invited a party of simple and unimportant people to meet the great man. The statesman came in late for dinner and was introduced to the party. He made a series of old fashioned bows in all directions, but no one felt in a position to offer any observations. The great man at the conclusion of the ceremony turned to his host and said in tones that had often thrilled a listening senate: "What very convenient jugs you have in your bedrooms. They pour well." The social frost broke up, the company was delighted to find that the great man was interested in mundane matters of a kind on which every one might be permitted to have an opinion, and the conversation, starting from the humblest commonness of daily life, melted insensibly into more liberal subjects.—Arthur C. Benson in Putnam's and the Reader.

An American Admirer.

In a small way an American figures in the journal kept by Rosalie Lamothe during the revolutionary days of 1793 in France and published under the title, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

Rosalie Lamothe, a girl of Picardy, was servant to the queen in the conciergerie. "One day," Rosalie has recorded, "M. de Saint Leger, the American, who was coming from the register's office, noticed that I was carrying a glass half filled with water.

"'Did the queen drink the water that has gone from the glass?' he asked.

"I answered that she did.

"With a quick gesture he uncovered his head and drank the water that remained with every indication of respect and reverence."

Corrected.

A little girl in Rhode Island, the daughter of a clergyman, once sat at the table with a bishop who was visiting her father.

When they had finished she observed that he did not fold his napkin. Dismissed, she said:

"We always fold our napkins here."

"Yes, my dear," said the bishop. "But that is because you use them again. In the case of a visitor you don't do that."

"Oh, yes, we do," said the little girl.—New York Life.

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and new hope quickly pain will depart. Rub-my-tism never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes, by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this Remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid, sold by all dealers.

A BAD PLAN OF TRAVEL.

The Scheme That Worried One Woman on Her Trip Abroad.

"When I hear of people joyfully making plans for their first trip abroad," said a man who has made many a transatlantic voyage, "I am tempted to give them a little bit of advice, based, of course, on my own observations, but particularly upon a remark made to me by a middle aged woman whose seat in the saloon was next to mine on my return trip last summer. This woman had a husband, and it was to him that she referred in answering my question one day. I asked her what she had been doing on the other side. She looked half quizzically, half reproachfully, at her spouse and said, 'Well, my principal occupation was trying to keep track of John.'

"It developed that her concern was not over what John might do in European capitals, but simply related to the difficulty each had in meeting the other after pursuing their several ways in a strange city, she to browse among the shops and he, an inveterate sightseer, to visit this, that and the other spot of interest. Their general scheme, as I was informed, was to diverge, say, in the morning, following their respective bents and arranging to meet at a certain place at a certain time. The plan sounds feasible, but it is experimental, and, as both of them found, it was an experiment that didn't work well. First one would be delayed and then the other, and if you have ever waited for a person in a foreign city you can appreciate the particular variety of anxiety that comes in about ten minutes. There's a feeling that something has happened to the missing person, for one thing, and, for another, there's an increasing realization that you yourself are wasting time. If you start out to look up the delinquent, the case becomes practically hopeless. The needle in the haystack is easy compared to that search. When the reunion does come at dinner time in the hotel or pension, explanations are received with tears or haughty disdain. Oh, I know; I've been through it."

A Kaleidoscope of Fashions.

For my part I commend a quick changing fashion and could I have chosen my period would have fixed on the fickle years of the first empire, when fashions shifted from week to week, and that, too, with such fine shades of difference that only the most frivolous could follow them. Then the great conqueror brought to Paris finery from the ends of the earth, muslins from India, garlands of roses from Bengal, stuffs shining with gold and silver from Cairo; from Turkey, of course, turbans, and from the far east shawls—shawls from Kashmir, from Persia and from the Levant; shawls particolored, blue—bright blue—and red and green and black and the clear yellow of the sun; shawls patterned with all the intricacies of Asian caprice and fit not only to hang from the shoulders of the fair, but to give a coquette of eastern fancy day long visions of the orient. From the past, for all time as well as all the earth was then Napoleon's, came the fashion of the troubadours—chaperon à Orsenaux, sleeves à la manelak, chevaux à Penthat, leading to a very modern period who can say what charming Gothic airs? How do not such revolutions of fashion enlarge the feminine heart and teach it to live in all ages and all climates!—Lucy M. Donnelly in Atlantic.

Practical Scolding.

"Look here, Lucy," exclaimed Mr. Hardapple; "this is no time to be practicing on the piano. It's time to prepare dinner."

"But, pa, I am interested in scales," pouted Lucy as she pounded the keys.

"Interested in scales, eh? Well, I've a task for you. Go down in the kitchen and help your ma scale fish."—Detroit Tribune.

Their Achievements.

"He had three daughters. One married a French chauffeur"—

"I see! Quite romantic."

"The second married an Indian, a descendant of a chieftain"—

"I see! Quite aboriginal."

"But the third married a plain American business man."

"I'm! Merely eccentric, I should say."—Puck.

Accounted For.

Mrs. J.'s patience was much tried by a servant who had the habit of standing around with her mouth open. One day as the maid waited upon the table her mouth was open, as usual, and her mistress said:

"Mary, your mouth is open."

"Ferever," replied Mary; "I opened it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Long Story.

Arrem—Say, old man, what did your wife say to you when you got in last night?

Wrenale—Oh, are you just starting on your two weeks' vacation?

Arrem—No. Why?

Wrenale—Then you won't have time to listen. I can't talk as fast as she did.—Houston Post.

The Mighty Amazon.

The estimated length of the Amazon from its source in the Andes to where it debouches in a mouth forty miles wide into the Atlantic is 4,000 miles. The story is told of a wrecked vessel which was drifting, with her crew on board suffering intense torment for lack of fresh water, which entered the mouth of the Amazon and the sailors could have had fresh water abundantly by putting a bucket over the side, but did not know where they were and if they got in sight of the land. This mighty river, up which the tide runs 600 miles, is known in the upper part of its course near the Andes as the Marañon, then in the middle courses from Tabatinga to the mouth of the Rio Negro, as the Solimoens, while for the rest of its course its name is Amazonas or Amazon. A thousand miles from the sea it is four miles in width. Vast and often impassable forests line most of its banks.

RAWHIDE-DULZURA

1 CENT A 2 SHARE

Send us your name as a subscriber in this new company, with your remittance for as many thousand shares as you can take at $5 per thousand.

This is a short-time offer on a hurry-up proposition. Our vice president is up at Rawhide now putting the miners at work. We want to raise the necessary funds for development as quickly as possible. Therefore, we offer the first block of stock at $5 a thousand shares. This subscription must be all cash. We want the money in hand. We mean to work without take up, and we have made it an ironclad rule not to run in debt. Cash counts now.

Our prospectuses are out, send for one.

Make reservation of stock, if you do so more. But, remember, this present offer of stock at Half a Cent a Share is now open, and will be closed as soon as enough cash subscriptions are in hand. Don't wait, or you will get left.

The gold mining property owned outright by the company consists of 7 claims, 5 in the Rawhide district of Nevada, and 2 in the Dulzura district of Southern California.

The Rawhide district to-day is more famous than Goldfield, Tonopah, Bullfrog, or Bonnie light were at the same stage of exploration and development. The Dulzura discovery is one of the most sensational in the history of California.

Ten samples of ore which were among the first assayed, run as high as $7,402.10 to the ton, and all ran averaged over $5.00 a ton.

In both camps we located carefully, and our locations are claims. Our own officers will superintend the mining.

STEAMER PASSENGERS.

Cornwall, Sept. 12.—Bush fires are very numerous throughout this district, but most of them in the vicinity of Cornwall are well under control. The smoke, however, is very dense, and navigation is at a standstill on the St. Lawrence. The R. & O. steamer Brockville was eleven hours late yesterday, and transferred one hundred and sixty passengers for the West to the G.T.R. The Kingston came down through the canal, and transferred sixty-five to the Grand Trunk east.

BARNS BURN IN DUFFERIN.

Shelburne, Sept. 12.—The dry spell has caused considerable loss by forest fires in Dufferin county. William McGhee, Grave of Melancthon, and a former Parliamentary candidate for Dufferin, lost his house, all the furniture (implements and this year's crop.

Mr. Jeffries, a farmer in the north end of the same township, also lost his buildings a few days since.

Appetite Gone Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and wore out—winter surely tried her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and dressed. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Waltmare, P.Q., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headaches. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health was been perfect. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring, vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essences in vegetable life—are safe for young and old, and guaranteed to bestow renewed activity and strength to every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Many Flies

The city was full of small flies yesterday. The little things were so small and so numerous that it was impossible to keep them out of one's eyes. One economical, or wise merchant on George street, said that he kept his mouth open all the way home at noon and when he got there he found he needed no meat for dinner.

Filling Hollow

The hollow at the Normal School grounds is being rapidly filled in and when the contractors have completed their work the old residents of the city will not recognize it. Contractors John Hayes and C. E. Wade have fourteen teams hauling gravel from the Chamberlain street pit and the Taylor pit, and they will be another month yet.

Going to Toronto

Carney Burns is going to Toronto this morning to arrange games for the championship of Ontario between the Peterborough baseball team and the St. Andrew's, champions of the Toronto Amateur League, of Toronto, and also with the Park Nine or St. Mary's, whichever win the championship of the senior ague. It is proposed to have three games with each team, one in Toronto, one in Peterborough, and a third game if necessary, in a neutral place. The games should draw well here.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumbrance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 60 feet wide for a distance of 180 feet at 170 feet depth extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $58.06 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrificed price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

Had Warm Debate Over S.A. IMMIGRATION WORK --Blamed B. W. League

Col. Howell Says They Kept Men in Cities-- Have no Desire to Injure the Conditions of the Working People

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 22.—Yesterday afternoon's session of the convention of the Trades and Labor Congress here will pass into the history of the Canadian labor movement as one of the most stirring and exciting of many meetings of representatives of labor from all parts of Canada. The question of immigration was discussed in the presence of Colonel Lamb and Col. Howell, who have charge of the immigration work of the Salvation Army, and the methods of that organization were subjected to severe criticism from the delegates.

Mr. W. R. Trotter, the special representative of the Congress, who visited the United Kingdom to lecture on labor conditions in Canada, presented the report of his work, and Col. Lamb and Col. Howell were given the opportunity to defend the policy of the Army.

CARE ON ARRIVAL.

Col. Lamb expressed the opinion that Mr. Trotter had selected exceptional cases to prove that the Army had not conducted their immigration work along right lines. He thought the question should be considered in its broader aspects, and that the object of the Army in handling the immigrations to Canada should have been considered.

"Because of the international character of our organization," said Col. Lamb, "we thought we could direct the emigration to Canada so that emigrants would be well looked after when they arrive in a new country. We thought the way to independence was through the cultivation of soil and were prepared to continue our work, providing it was beneficial to the immigrants and not detrimental either to the country they left or to the country to which they went. We realized that if we failed in one we failed in all.

MAKE NO APOLOGY.

"We make no apology for doing business on a business-like basis," said Col. Lamb, "and we are out for all the margins we can get, so long as they are not used for personal advantage. We are charged with carrying on the immigration business because of the profit we make out of it, but what have we done done with the profits? We have applied all we have made to assist the immigrants by making them loans, and in this we think we are doing some practical Socialism. We send immigrants to Canada under guarantee of work, and do not interfere in any way with strikes. We take certain risks within reason, and in all our efforts we have refused to enter into any arrangements with the manufacturers or employers' associations of Canada."

BRING FEW MECHANICS.

Col. Howell said it was his duty to distribute the immigrants throughout Canada after Col. Lamb had sent them out. He denied any responsibility for flooding the cities with mechanics, and stated that the Salvation Army could not be blamed for the work of immigration agencies in England, which did not assume any responsibility for the distribution of immigrants when they arrived in Canada. He cited instances to show that the Army had not interfered where strikes existed, and said that only a small percentage of mechanics had been brought to Canada under Army auspices.

SUPPLIED SHIPWRIGHTS.

In reply to a question from James Simpson, vice-president of the Congress, Col. Howell admitted that the Army had sent a number of shipwrights to Collingwood, Ontario, without making any inquiries as to the conditions of labor there. Mr. Simpson also referred Col. Howell to the labor conditions in Toronto during last winter, and asked the attitude of the British Welcome League towards the work of the Army.

Col. Howell charged the British Welcome League with offering inducements of work to immigrants who would otherwise have settled on the land, and when winter came the Salvation Army were compelled to assist many people who had been held in the city by the British Welcome League. He also stated that there were three employers of labor at the head of the British Welcome League.

"I would be willing to have a committee of fair-minded labor men go into our immigration work with me," said Col. Howell, "with a view to placing it upon a proper basis. We have no desire to injure the conditions of the working people of Canada."

A CIRCULAR PRODUCED.

Mr. Trotter produced a circular issued by the Salvation Army, which not only invited farm laborers to Canada, but made a special appeal to stockmen. He said it had been in circulation till April, 1908, notwithstanding the fact that the Canadian Government had repeatedly warned all the immigration agencies to discontinue sending mechanics to Canada.

Mr. Simpson of Toronto, said that if it had not been for the work of the Salvation Army and other immigration agencies there would never have been a strike on the C.P.R. system from the West to the East of Canada. He charged the Army with trying to effect a remedy for poverty in the Old Country through immigration, when the cause of poverty was in the private control of land and other means of producing and distributing the necessities of life.

STUDHOLME IS HEARD.

Allan Studholme, member of the Ontario Legislature for East Hamilton, cited several cases of mechanics who had been brought to Canada by the Salvation Army, and who were unable to obtain employment. He said the Army did not understand the immigration business, and should never have taken it up.

"I doubt the advisability of a religious organization, conducting an immigration business," said James Simpson of Toronto, "and I am thoroughly convinced that religious men cannot possibly do the good for the poor they desire to do without making a careful study of economic and industrial conditions of people and their bearing upon their social conditions and their morality."

"I will promise Mr. Simpson that I will take up the study of economic subjects," said Col. Howell.

"And I think I will confine myself to spiritual work," said Colonel Lamb.

"I will supply Col. Howell with the right kind of books," remarked Mr. Simpson.

Mr. Frank Sherman of Fernie, B. C., stated that many of the mine owners had refused to accept immigrants brought to Canada by the Army, because they were physically unfit to do the work in the mines.

Magnus Sinclair of Toronto, spoke in behalf of farm laborers brought to Canada by the Salvation Army, and said that many of them were ill-treated and had to work for starvation wages. He thought there was almost as strong an objection to the policy of the Army in bringing farm laborers to Canada as there was to bringing mechanics here.

USED BY EMPLOYERS.

Mr. R. P. Pettipiece of Vancouver said the Salvation Army had been blamed for too much, and held the Dominion Government responsible. He said the Army had merely been used by the employing class to glut the labor market, and lower the standard of living for the workers in Canada.

P. M. Draper, secretary of the Congress, condemned the policy of the Dominion Government in granting loannes to immigration agencies, and advocated the discontinuance of this policy.

Mr. Trotter advised the Army to confine their efforts to spiritual work, and not to trafficking in human flesh. He expressed the opinion that the Army had lost the support of many who believed they once did a good work.

WILL CONDEMN BONUSES.

The probability is that the Congress will go on record as strongly opposed to the bonusing of immigrants, and the Army will be asked to co-operate to have the system stopped.

Col. Lamb and Col. Howell left Halifax last night, and stated to a newspaper representative that they had never been subjected to such straight talk as the delegates to the Congress had indulged in. They thought that great good would come from the conference.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 21. — The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada opened in the Legislature Chamber this morning at 10 o'clock with about one hundred delegates present from Victoria on the west, to Sydney on the east. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Hon. G. H. Murray, Premier of Nova Scotia; Mayor Crosby of Halifax, and President Scott of the Trades and Labor Council. Alphonse VVerville, M.P., President of Congress replied in behalf of convention.

Following the addresses the Credentials Committee presented their report and the various committees for convention purposes were appointed.

TO HEAR SALVATIONISTS.

The Executive Council reported that Col. Lamb and Col. Howell, representing the Salvation Army, were in the city and had asked the consent of convention to address the delegates on the immigration work of the Army. The delegates decided that the Salvationists should be heard at the afternoon session, and that the report of Mr. W. R. Trotter, the Congress representative to Great Britain, to lecture on labor conditions in Canada, should be read before the visitors were heard. The delegates manifested a keen desire to hear the representatives of the Salvation Army, and a most interesting session this afternoon was anticipated. The delegates from Western Canada, were strongly opposed to the immigration policy of the Army, and state that they intend to ask Col. Lamb some pointed questions.

In discussing their visit to Halifax, Col. Lamb and Col. Howell stated that they had been advised to appear at the convention in view of the fact that representatives from all parts of Canada would be present. They stated that they had no desire to enter into a prolonged debate with the delegates to the congress, but merely wished to remove some of the erroneous impressions about their work that had been made by press reports.

A MINER'S SPLIT.

Keir Hardie, the socialist leader in the British House of Commons, is present at the convention, and on Saturday night addressed a mass meeting of miners in Springhill. Addresses were also delivered by Alphonse Verville, M.P., of Montreal; James Simpson of Toronto and P. M. Draper, of Ottawa. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Miners' Organization of Cumberland County, which has recently decided to secede from the Provincial Workmen's Association and join the United Mine Workers of America. There are about 1,500 miners in the county. There is considerable excitement among the miners throughout the mining districts of Nova Scotia, owing to the recent action of the Executive Board of the Provincial Workmen's Association in repudiating the referendum vote of the miners, which decided in favor of affiliating with the United Mine Workers of America. The action of the Executive Board has created a serious split in the ranks of the Provincial Workmen's Association, which is a purely national association, and an organizer of the United Mine Workers of America is now in the Province to organize the miners under the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers of America.

BACK UNITED MINE WORKERS.

The Executive Council of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada are assisting the representatives of the United Mine Workers, because the breaking up of the Provincial Workmen's Association will lead to the affiliation of all the miners in Eastern Canada with the Congress. The miners in Sydney to the number of about 5,500, have also decided to unite with the United Mine Workers of America.

A resolution will come before the convention asking the endorsation of the Congress to the movement of the railway organization to place candidates in the field at the approaching Federal elections in all railroad centers.

KEIR HARDIE'S DENIAL.

In an interview with a newspaper representative Keir Hardie gives an emphatic denial to the story from New York that was published in all the Toronto papers to the effect that he was the occupant of an automobile that ran over and nearly killed a boy in that city.

"The story was the imaginative production of a newspaper man Man who saw the automobile collide with the boy, and then reported to the editor of his paper that the man in the automobile had given his name as Keir Hardie," said Mr. Hardie.

Reiterate Story of C.P.R.s Purchase

Winnipeg Says Absorption of Great Western Would be a Great Thing

Winnipeg, Sept. 22.—A merger of the C.P.R. and Great Western roads is a certainty, no matter what the officials in the East may say. And this merger surely marks a new era in the transportation facilities of Western America. It places the great Canadian road in a commanding position, from which nothing would seem to be able to move it in transportation affairs. The purchase is believed to have been made in the name of the Soo road, for which, it is well known, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy is anxious to obtain Chicago connection. Great interest in the proposed merger is taken throughout the city by business men and other citizens.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—The fact that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy got fast night for Minneapolis has caused a revival of the rumor that there may be something in the story that the C.P.R. is to purchase the Chicago and Great Western road. Although Sir Thomas denied the rumor, his visit there at this time looks significant. He travelled west via Toronto.

Will be no Registration This Fall

Those who did not register at the last registration in May cannot vote at the forthcoming Dominion election. Deputy Sheriff Hall stated that there could be only one registration in the year. The same voters' lists will be used as in the provincial elections.

A number of young men who did not register in May were of the opinion that another registration would be held before the Federal election, but such is not the case. Another but such is not the case. Another opportunity to exercise their franchise will have to go by.

Fifteen Hundred People Comprise Divorce Colony

How the "Colonists" Spend Their Time at Sioux Falls

While Awaiting Their Freedom

Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 22.—The divorce colony of Sioux Falls, S. D., are an interesting study. Of the 15,000 residents of the place, ten per cent. are applicants for divorce, according to a man who has returned to the east after having secured his decree. "The colony" he continues, "was 1,500 strong when I was enumerated. The business is so strong that none of the natives pay any attention to it. Half the litigants are from New York, where divorce decrees are almost impossible except for the most flagrant violation of the marital vows.

"It is no trouble to pick out the divorcees. They are divided into two parts—the newly come and the old residenters of two weeks and more. When the train brings in a new squad the latter rushes to the leading hotel, registers, goes into immediate retirement, and remains in seclusion for a few days or more. Most people before the first week is ended are out in public making the best of their exile. The timid woman, who thinks it is awful and does not want to get her picture in the home papers, is discovered by some other woman who has got over being timid and then the excitement is on. It is horseback riding and rowing with other plaintiffs, mostly women, but enough men to go round.

"Before I was 24 hours in the colony I was put on to the ropes. I was told that the proper thing to do was go around the livery stables and watch the women looking at the horses. They do that to get an invitation to go for a ride. I had to take two out one morning for being inquisitive, one a New York broker's wife, and the other a Kansas City woman who was throwing off a railway man for a freak I didn't think much about when I saw him. She had been in Sioux Falls five months and was chaperoning the tenderfoot regular. The broker's wife was a tenderfoot, 11 days at the Falls and accepting invitations to go horseback riding after five minutes' acquaintance.

"But we have to do something up there, you know, for it is a change from home and the home acquaintance to a village and six months' exile staring you in the face.

"There are two women divorcees to one man divorcee up there. The native woman can be told from the imported one by her features. The divorcees are blondes, with expensive shoes. The natives are demure enough. Nobody invites them to go horseback riding. The cafes are poor, but the colony makes the most of them.

"There are a few churches for the natives, no children with the divorcees and the blandest lot of lawyers ever gathered within the corporate limits of a town. All of them are specialists on divorces. Everybody on being introduced askes or is asked 'when does your case come up?' and nobody gets lonesome after meeting the barbers, the manicurists or the old residenters, who know the folly of grieving where nobody else grieves."

Building Concrete Retaining Wall

Messrs. T. Brightman & Co. Making Big Improvement to Their Property

A big improvement is being made to the banks of the creek which comes down through the city and across Brock and Hunter streets.

Since the new concrete bridges have been built the parties owning the property along the course of the stream have been getting busy. A concrete wall was built at the Hunter street end last year, and now Messrs. T. Brightman & Co., are constructing a wal through their property which will complete the work on the west side of the creek from one bridge to the other. The appearance of the waterway is thus greatly improved and it is now up to the owners on the other side of the creek to do likewise.

Took Out Permit for School Room

The trustees of the St. James Methodist church have taken out a building permit for the Sunday School building of the new church to be erected at the corner of Romaine and Aylmar streets. As already stated, the Sunday school building will be built first and the church later. It is proposed to have the Sunday school ready for opening early in 1909. The cost is to be $11,000 and Fennie & Gardiss have the contract. The architect is Mr. J. E. Hunter. The building permit provides for a building 66 feet by 45 feet. The foundation will be of stone and the walls of brick with stone trimmings. The permit was taken out by Mr. H. C. Stabler on behalf of the trustees.

A permit has also been taken out by Mr. W. C. Ackerman for a brick dwelling on Park street south of Simcoe street. The cost is to be $4,000.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

IN THE GRASP OF ASIATIC CHOLERA

St. Petersburg Cannot Bury Its Dead Fast Enough--Extreme Efforts Being Taken Now--Civic Officials to Blame

St. Petersburg, Sept. 21.—St. Petersburg is in the grasp of Asiatic cholera, which already has exceeded in severity the visitation of 1893. The disease is increasing daily at an alarming rate, and unless the authorities show in the future a much greater degree of ability to cope with the situation than they have in the past, there is every reason to fear that it will get out of hand.

There were 349 cases and 122 deaths officially reported between Friday noon and Saturday noon. Unofficial, but reliable reports show the actual number to have been far greater. From Saturday noon until Sunday noon there were 288 cases and 141 deaths. Between noon Sunday and noon today the municipal hospitals reported the entrance of 320 cases and 155 deaths, and the adding of the statistics from the military and suburban hospitals for the same period will swell the total to formidable proportions. There are 34 cases of policemen alone in the Seminofisky Military Hospital.

Despatches received here from three provinces report 488 new cases and 201 deaths in 24 hours. Rostov-on-the-Don furnishing 182 cases and 99 deaths.

The government's threat to declare martial law has driven the municipality to greater energy in clearing the city of the scourge. The aldermanic council today voted $250,000 to enlarge the hospital space to purchase and distribute disinfectants, and to expedite the interment of bodies. The dead-houses are overcrowded, and many corpses lie unburned. The Prefect of St. Petersburg has prohibited the sale of liquor here until Sept. 22, to order to diminish alcholic excesses, which very materially increase the liability to cholera infection. So far, however, the precautions have had little effect.

A beginning was made yesterday, when several Public schools were transformed into hospital wards, and 4,000 of the students were sent to their homes. The Department of War has opened stores to supply immediate needs, and army field kitchens have been despatched to the poorer quarters to dispense free food.

The situation, which has always been serious since the very first case was reported, assumes a graver cast past from the appearance of a very virulent type of the disease in two cases, in which death followed within 15 minutes of the first symptoms.

All varieties of Asiatic cholera have now developed here, there being numerous cases of the Algid type, which is accompanied by the greatest suffering.

Premier Stolypin has sharply reprimanded the municipal officials for the appalling conditions. At Obouchoff Hospital, where he visited on Saturday, he found that three bath-rooms were doing service for 300 patients. The mortality at this hospital has risen three times that at other hospitals.

Practically nothing has been done up to the present to put the filthy city market places in a sanitary condition.

As a city, St. Petersburg is wholly unsanitary, and the dread disease finds here the conditions most suitable for its propagation.

As an example of the inefficiency and negligence displayed, it is sufficient to cite the fact that many cholera cases have been conveyed to hospitals in cabs, after which these same cabs were permitted, without disinfection to return to their work on the streets.

Germany and Austria have taken precautions to prevent the plague crossing the frontier, and other nearby countries have declared a quarantine against Russia, and France is ready to meet any exigency that may arise.

NEW LIEUT-GOVERNOR TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

The Public, in the Form of One Woman, was Not Admitted to the Ceremony

"I John Morrison Gibson, do swear that I will bear faithful allegiance to His Majesty, King Edward VII. and to his heirs and successors. So help me God."

In these words Ontario's new Lieutenant-Governor took the oath of office yesterday morning in the Council Chamber of the Executive at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Following the oath sworn by the new Lieutenant-Governor in person, there came to others, administered by Chief Justice Sir Charles Moss. They were;

"You shall well and truly execute the office and duty of administering impartial justice.

You swear that you will execute the office of keeper of the Great Seal according to the best of your ability.

To all three his honor responded by kissing the Bible handed to him by the Chief Justice.

There was a complete absence of any parade or display about the installation of the new Lieutenant-Governor. A few moments before 10.30 two open carriages containing Sir Mortimer Clark, his Honor Mr. Gibson, and several members of the Cabinet drove up to the court side entrance of the Parliament Buildings and the party mounted at once to the Council Chamber.

The general public was represented by only one lady, who was refused admittance. Those present were Sir Mortimer Clark, Sir Charles Moss, Aemilius Irving, K.C., Gen. Cotton, J. J. Foy, Geo. Goodertham, Geo. D. Fyse, Hon. Dr. Reaume, Hon. Mr. Cochrane, Colonel Macdonald, A.D.C. to the Lieutenant-Governor, and Mr. Rodolphe Boudreau, clerk of the King's Privy Council, who bore the writ of appointment from Ottawa.

The small group stood clustered around Hon. Mr. Gibson while M. Boudreau read the writ and the Act contained in it.

Hassan Abdallah Has a Record

Hassan Abdallah, the Sultan of Turkey's premier wrestler, who will meet Geno Bartubico in the Brock street rink tonight, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon and registered at the Hotel Oriental. He arrived on the 4.35 C.P.R. train from Montreal, and all evening a big crowd of anxious people filled the hotel rotunda anxious to have a look at the wonderful man of whom so much has been heard. Abdallah is a big man and any one would know him from the pictures of him which have appeared in the press. Garbed in his native costume he makes a picturesque figure and attracts attention wherever he goes.

Early in the evening Bartubico met the wonderful Turk at the hotel and had a friendly chat with him. Geno compares favorably with the foreigner, but does not possess the hard determined look. Just what the result of tonight's battle will be is hard to guess. Those who are anxious to learn and who desire to see a good wrestling match will go to the rink tonight.

Lindsay May Secure Two New Industries --Seeking Locations

Lindsay, Sept. 22.—The cry of the town for many years past has been for new industries. Lindsay citizens feel that they can offer inducements to factories who intend locating here, that cannot be presented by any other town. At the present time the town has before it a proposition to deal with which may turn out all right, and in a short time have a boot and shoe factory, and another good factory of some description, but the kind has not yet been disclosed.

The first letter was received from Mr. J. W. Elsworthe of Toronto, formerly superintendent of the J. D. King Shoe Co., and afterwards manager of the Nursery Shoe Co. He said in his letter that the company he was at the head of, intended locating near Toronto, and as he had received offers from different towns he thought he would write to Lindsay to see what inducements they could offer. The samples he said, were out on the road, and a factory had to be started at once. They would employ about fifty hands and would make a very fine shoe.

The next letter was received from Mr. D. S. Mullen of Chatham, who wrote for a friend of his in the United States, who was a manufacturer of a staple article, whose imports to Canada each year amounted to $150,000, the duty being 35 p.c. If this industry was brought into Canada the manufacturer could have the monopoly for a number of years. The factory would require about 25,000 feet of floor space, and the building should be a brick or concrete structure.

What the writer wanted was some capitalist to take hold of the factory, and his friend in the United States would come over and manage it for a salary and a small portion of the stock. This tempting offer, to put such a fine concern in the town, did not look very good to the aldermen, but the clerk, however, was instructed to write those gentlemen and have them come down and lay the matter before the council.

The offer of the boot and shoe factory seems very business-like, and the aldermen looked very favorably upon it.

Skiddoo Night at the Roller Rink

Big Crowd, Lots of Fun and Many Prizes

Skiddoo Night at the roller rink was a decided success. It exceeded all expectations and goes to prove that roller skating is still very popular in Peterborough. It is also strong evidence in favor of Prof. Geano and Miss Patterson's management. Skiddoo night was to have been on the 23rd, but had to be changed to last night on account of other attractions. Nevertheless a most gratifying crowd of spectators turned out as well as some 250 skaters. From start to finish everyone had fun and the twenty-three selections furnished by the band delighted the skaters. Those who won the races and prizes were as follows;

Mr. Hays, Miss Bowden, Mr. Bellington, Mr. Collins, Miss O'Dette, Miss Ray, Mr. Williams, Miss Sebult, Mr. Tovey, Mr. Terril, Miss Marshall, Miss Kennedy, Miss Cavanagh, Mr. Lang, Miss King.

Mr. Bellegrem and Miss Stevens captured the prize for graceful skating.

Mr. Davis won the one mile race

Smith won the one mile boys' race.

A lady's race was on the program but the girls were too shy to start.

Tea Room to be Opened by King's Daughters

The King's Daughters will on October 1st next open tea rooms in the old Bank of Montreal buildings, situated at the corner of Water and Simcoe streets. The rooms will be neatly and tastefully fitted up, tea will be served from 4 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, and City Ladies in charge will do everything in their power to make their guests comfortable and eager to pay a return visit.

A Discovery of Great Value

Because a Cure was Found for Inflammatory Rheumatism

There are many types of rheumatism, but none worse than inflammatory.

It was this kind that almost killed Mrs. Edward Warman, of Kent Jct., N.B.

Every known remedy she tried, different doctors gave their advice, but the disease increased.

Weak and despairing she was at last wife and when the remarkable cure of Thos. Cullen was published. This gentleman was cured of rheumatism by "Ferrozone." Consequently Mrs. Warman used the same remedy. Here is her statement;

"For years I have been rheumatic. I tried various forms of relief without success. The disease increased, settled in my joints and muscles; these swelled, caused excruciating pain and kept me from sleeping. My limbs and arms stiffened, my shoulders were lame and prevented me from working. Work by week I was losing strength and despaired of finding a cure. It was a happy day I heard of Ferrozone. Every day I took Ferrozone I felt better; it eased the painful joints, gave me confidence and a feeling of new life. Ferrozone cured my rheumatism, cured it so that not an ache has ever returned. Even damp weather no longer affects me."

Ferrozone has power to destroy Uric Acid, neutralize and enrich the blood, and therefore does cure the worst cases. Mrs. Warman's statement proves this.

By removing the cause of the disease and building up a reserve of energy Ferrozone is certain to cure. Sufferer, isn't it about time to stop experimenting? Ferrozone is a cure. We guarantee this. Sold by all dealers, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50. Remember the name—Ferrozone."

THE IMMIGRATION RETURNS

Although for reasons generally known, immigration into Canada during the present year has not equalled that of the previous twelvemonth, it is satisfactory to note that the Dominion is still the destination most favored by emigrants from the United Kingdom. The returns show that during July over half the English, nearly two-thirds of the Scotch, and over three-fourths of the Irish emigrants came to the Dominion.

With the improvement in general business that we now believe has set in, and the larger demand for labor that will follow, the agencies which have been successful in turning the stream of emigration in this direction of Canada will again resume their activity and send to the Dominion the larger proportion of the men and women who see in the conditions existing in this country opportunities for advancement not open to them under those that are found in their native lands.

OVERWORK IN SCHOOL CHILDREN

In Canada, as we have had occasion to point out, the question of reducing the daily school session in just beginning to attract attention, and generally in connection with overcrowding and the necessity of putting many pupils on half time. But in Germany, Austria, France and Russia the question of overwork in the school is a distressing and burning one. In the first-named country suicides of school children have been increasing at an alarming rate. One professor has investigated over a thousand cases of child suicide, and he finds that over 60 per cent. are due to excessive strain and failure to pass examinations.

A Vienna physician has made a similar investigation and reports that in many middle-class and well-to-do families children are driven to despair and self-destruction by the demands on their minds and their industry. If their certificates indicate backwardness the parents are angry and harsh toward them, and compel them to do a great deal of extra work in the evening.

In Russia about 600 school children committed suicide last year, and the same "forcing system" is held to be responsible for most of these tragic cases.

The problem of overtaxation of the bodies and brains of the school children has been treated even in novels and plays, especially in Germany. It is more complex than may appear at first sight. The time spent in the schoolroom is one element. The studying of "lessons" at home is another. The lack of facilities for play and recreation is a third. Light, ventilation, the kind of desks and benches or chairs used in the schools furnish another element. The demand of the age is for efficiency and thoroughness in education. Complaints are heard from many directions that the graduates of the primary and high schools are deplorably ignorant even of the fundamental studies. The tendency everywhere is to more and better education. In view of this tendency the matter of school hygiene is growing in importance, and that of overwork in the largest sense of the term, which includes the age at which children should be sent to kindergarten or school, will demand increasing attention. Journals of medicine and hygiene, as well as educational periodicals, are watching the European developments in this field with great interest and applying them to the Canadian situation.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Science has ranged many times since on the trail of a fairy tale. Frequently it has seemed to take the lead from wonder stories purely imaginary. There was instance the other day when Prof. Francis Darwin told the British Association of his conviction that plants have memory and habits and at least a suggestion of consciousness. Prof. Harold W. T. Wager continues on this striking line of new thought in natural history. He displays lessons taken from leaves in support of a claim that plants have to some degree the sense of sight. At least they can see where to turn for the hedge an independence to the military authorities of the world for the impetus they are giving to the work of the inventors, which may have a decided value in peace if it should have been at all in war. If we pursue the parallel of the automobile, the most certain use of the ship would seem to be that of the pleasure craft. An automobile trip in the air should be far more exhilarating than one on land, but in certain of fonight the advantage would seem to be distinctly with the land machine. If a very high rate of speed could be attained, however, the airship would be an excellent machine for a special delivery service for long distances. Assuming less for than the military enthusiasts do, it might come to have a high value as a mail carrier.

The recent destructive conflagration in British Columbia has in England as well as here called renewed attention to the subject of protection of forests against fire. The British Government has had a problem similar to ours to meet in India, and as a result of long experience has adopted a system which has been proven by two score years of trial to be successful. To this system The Spectator directs the attention of the Canadian Government and people as a means of preventing a recurrence of the disaster in the Kootenay.

The broad outlines of the system in use in India are not very different from the methods of fighting forest and prairie fires the world over. But the careful and systematic manner in which these principles are applied justifies giving an account of it in some detail. The Spectator thus describes the Indian system of "fire-lines" :—

Early in the season, before the prairie-grass has reached an inflammable condition, a pair of parallel paths some five or six feet wide, and at a suitable distance apart, are cut along the margin of the forest. These are joined at intervals by cross-paths which divide the intervening strip of ground into sections, the whole forming a ladder-shaped system of paths upon the future fireline. The grass cut from the paths is thrown inwards, on to the sections between the rungs of the ladder. As soon as the grass growing on the fireline is dry enough to burn, even partially on dangerous ground, it is burnt off by successive sections, sections. The burning is a somewhat delicate operation, requiring skill and experience; but hundreds, indeed thousands of miles of fire lines are thus successfully burnt annually.

The burning operation is performed at evening, when the dews will act as assistants in preventing the spread of fire, and it is watched by men armed with branches of trees to beat out the incipient fires which may catch from sparks carried outside the area to be burned. "Blades and seed-stems of grass dry from the top downwards, and if a first burning be carried out when the herbage is half dry, the fire is of course much less fierce and is more easily controlled than if the entire crop down to the roots had been dry enough to burn. In the former case, a second burning becomes necessary when the unconsumed remnant has become dry; and then, again, the strength of the fire is very much less than it would have been had the first burning not been effected. It is true that a double burning increases the cost; but it reduces the risk, and there are circumstances under which it is to be recommended * * * The width of the burnt line will depend on the height and density of the grass through which it runs, and on the strength and direction of the wind usually prevailing during the dangerous season". In India they run fifty to one hundred yards or more. "As regards trees growing on the fireline, the

If anyone imagined that the demands of the United Irish League would be satisfied by what has been done for Ireland during the past few years, he will have been undeceived by the speech of Mr. John Redmond in Dublin a few days ago. Although the legislation in regard to the compulsory sale of their lands by the landlords which Mr. Balfour passed has involved a burden of many millions on the tax-payers of Great Britain, that fact has little regard from the Nationalists leaders. The Liberal Government ever since it came into power has been most subservient to the demands of the Nationalist members in Parliament, but only with the result that every grant given, every concession made, simply emboldens them to make new demands and utter threats if there is any delay in complying with them. And at the same time little or no protection for life or property is given by the Government to the minority. Cattle driving is carried on almost without any attempt by the Government to check it, Mr. Birrell apparently thinking he has done all that is necessary when he refers to these outrages as "regrettable incidents."

A man must be a diligent student of world politics at the present time to keep informed on the many parliamentary bodies that are coming into existence. They spring up in the most unlikely and unexpected places and amid such surroundings as make them appear, if not ridiculous, at least inappropriate and fantastic. Russia, Persia, Turkey, China — a curious procession; and it would not be a cause of surprise to us if the new Sultan of Morocco crowned his present, although possibly only temporary, success by giving the tribes some sort of parliamentary institutions. This class of rulers seems to have become imbued with the idea that they have not complete regal attributes without some sort of parliamentary attachment, just as some of the "kings" of the West Coast of Africa forget the scantiness of their wardrobes if they received the British representative with the regal insignia of a top hat and an umbrella.

The labor colony bill to be introduced in the New York Legislature next winter is described by the philanthropic weekly Charities as an interesting attempt to reduce vagrancy. This bill framed by specialists in charitable work, in New York State, has already received much attention from the press and is supported by charitable organizations and railways.

Briefly, it purposes an organization for a labor colony to which habitual vagrants shall be committed, their terms to be indefinite. Good care, good food, a reasonable amount of work, reformatory influences, a parole system, and a chance to learn a trade are among its principle features. The bill is modelled in many respects upon compulsory labor colonies which have already proved their success in Europe. Of course, one labor colony will not solve the vagrancy question, but it will make a good beginning and will be watched with great interest as an important experiment.

The vagrancy evil has not yet afflicted Canada gravely; may never do so, if we give heed to the lessons conveyed in the economic histories of older countries. But we may find some profit in observation of the measures taken elsewhere to the determination and application of effective remedy. Some day a knowledge of such matters might come in handy.

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Sheop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-on's never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Sheop's Rheumatic Remedy goes by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this Remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. Sold by all dealers.

THE NEW RURAL MAIL BOX

Thousands of boxes for rural mail delivery will soon, in accordance with the promise contained in the Postmaster-General's speech at Niagara Falls, Sept. 15, be seen on the concession lines of Ontario and other Provinces. The following sketches show the operation of the box adopted by the Government. It is so contrived that the position of the box on the arm to which it is attached can be easily changed from lying lengthwise along the arm to directly across the end of it. The arm itself should lie along the road in the direction of travel either way. When the position of the box on the arm can be easily changed from lengthwise to crosswise. The series of illustrations serve to show the relative positions of the box and the arm when the box is empty and when mail matter has been deposited therein, either for collection by the courier or for delivery to the patron, as the case may be

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust, Hearty, Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel dragged, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state, read what J. W. Jervell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed by spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—at very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.—They possess mystic power surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health gain. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills which revitalize delicate glands, scrarch out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today. 25c at all dealers.

It's a pity when sick once drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak Stomach means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

—Mr. Dudley Waring, formerly of the general furnishing firm of Chas. Livingston, Kingston, has accepted a similar position with Messrs. H. LeBrun & Company.

Wedding Bells

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. C. Purcell, 111 Queen street west, when her youngest daughter, Mattie H., was married to Mr. Arthur B. Upton, of Campbellford, by Rev. Geo. Edwards, pastor of the Western Methodist church. The bride looked very beautiful in a lace gown over taffeta and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. She was given away by her cousin, ex-Reeve Merrill, of Hamilton, and was unattended, save for her flower girl, little Miss Irene Tucker, niece of the bride, who looked sweet in white silk and blue ribbons. The bride and groom left on the 10.45 train for Toronto, Peterborough and Campbellford. On their return they will reside at 11 Queen street west. The bride received many beautiful and costly presents.—Ottawa Citizen.

LUSH—BEATTIE.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized yesterday morning at seven o'clock at St. Luke's church when Miss Edith L. Beatty, youngest daughter of Mr. Wm. Beattie, 247 Concession street, Ashburnham, was united in marriage to Mr. John Lush, son of Mr. N. Lush, 599 Aylmer street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. Major, of All Saints' church, in the absence of the rector, Rev. Dr. Langefeldt, from the city. The bride and groom were unattended.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lush left on the eight o'clock train for Toronto where they took a steamer trip. On their return to the city they will reside at 586 Bethune street.

FOREMAN—PUGSLEY.

At noon on Saturday, Sept. 19, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Josephine, youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs. John Pugsley, at her residence, 137 Bloor street west, to Mr. A. E. Foreman of Vancouver, B.C. Rev. Mr. Matthews, brother-in-law of the groom officiated. Owing to a recent bereavement in the bride's family, only the immediate relatives were present. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Foreman left for Vancouver, where they will in future reside.—Toronto Globe

Mr. Foreman was formerly connected with the C.G.E. Company in this city and has many friends here who will extend best wishes.

CROWE—OKE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday at Port Hope, when F. W. Crowe, of Toronto, was united in marriage to Mrs. Carrie Oke, of Port Hope. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Pedlar, 174 Walton street, with Rev. W. G. Clarke, B.A., officiating. There were many beautiful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Crowe left on the evening train for Toronto. Mrs. Crowe will be at home to her friends after Nov. 1st at 151 Beatrice street.

Pathetic Missive

From a Lonely Father to His Far Off Children

Smith, May 16th, Special.—At a small post-office in the County of Monaghan, Ireland, on the 23rd day of June, 1864, the postmaster placed the stamps of that office on a letter addressed in a clear and legible hand to

PETERBOROUGH,
ONTARIO,
AMERICA.

The envelope bearing this address was rather a small one, being only 3 1-4 x 4 1-4, and had three of the old red one penny stamps affixed in the proper position, which would indicate that Imperial Penny Postage was not the vogue in those days. The letter, which was thus started on its long and tedious journey was a remarkable one in more ways than one, it was a father's message directed to his daughter, but written as an expression of his love to his children and friends in the far distant and almost unknown country of America. Such a letter in common, every day prose would be quite ordinary, but it became extraordinary when the greater portion was written in verse. After spending 5 weeks in various mail bags the letter arrived in this city, then only a village, to convey to those concerned that a father in the home land had not forgotten those who had gone to endure the hardships of a new country. This is the pathetic message in its entirety:—

A few lines of gratitude to my beloved children and friends in America:—

O, children, truel was that day
You parted me and went away,
And left me here for to deplore
And say my face you'd see no more.

But farewell, friends, and children, too,
I now must take my leave of you,
The time is fleeting on so fast,
Perhaps these lines may be my last.

O, may you all by God be bleat,
With happy days in Canada West,
With peace on earth and comfort, too,
This is my prayer and care for you.

And these remaining part at home
May they enjoy that hour to come,
When all shall reach that happy home
Where friends do meet to part no more

Dear friends there is another thought
That often grieves my heart full sore
The place where once we all were known
Will soon are long be known no more.

So now my dear friends when I had made an end of these my midnight thaughts—

I was like that good old king when told
His days on earth would soon be no more.
I turned my face unto the wall
And there indeed, I wept full sore.

Dear children, when you get these lines I pray you read them o'er,
And bear them in your hearts and minds
When I'm be no more.

Dear children and friends these lines are not intended for the purpose of fretting or grieving any of you, but are intended in my mind rather in a loving way and I do sincerely hope they will be kept in memory as such.

FAREWLL AND FAREWELL.
SAMUEL STEWART.

The third line of the sixth stanza later had a very significant meaning as only a few years afterwards the author died in his bed with his face turned to the wall.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope 'Tender for Construction,' will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 29th day of September, 1906, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E.' — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Pauquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 104.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E,' in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Pauquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 160 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners. A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E,' $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E,' $150,000.

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, labourers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,
P. B. RYAN,
Secretary.

The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway,
Ottawa, 12th Sept., 1906.

find abundance of the necessary tissue-building and energy-storing material in

Grape-Nuts

This food is quickly absorbed by children as well as adults, and contains all the nutritive elements of Whole Wheat and Barley.

Nature has placed phosphate of potash in a certain part of these grains for man's use in building the gray substance of brain and nerve cells.

Adults require this to repair natural waste from mental and physical effort; children, because the nervous system grows so rapidly in early years,

This part of the grain is included in Grape-Nuts.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumberance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its premise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide for a distance of 180 feet at 170 feet depth extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $58.00 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

FIFTY MEN INJURED IN COLLISION IN FOG NEAR PHILADELPHIA

Two Cars Crashed Into One Another--One Carried Seventy Two Employes of Locomotive Company

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—Fog was responsible today for a head-on collision between two cars on the South-western Traction Company's line between this city and Chester, in which about fifty persons were injured, several probably fatally.

A car leaving Philadelphia with workmen employed by the Baldwin Locomotive Company at its out-of-town plant, and known as the Baldwin tripper," was speeding along the single track with 72 men on board when suddenly a car coming from Chester loomed up in the fog. Before brakes could be applied there was an awful crash.

Men were hurled in every direction and both cars were wrecked. Those most seriously hurt were:

Edward Smith, leg cut off and shock, may die.

Wm. Mullen, ribs crushed in, may die.

Philip Shanagan, George A. Caffrey, Harry Potter, and N. Pascovitch, hurt internally.

In addition a score or more are in various hospitals with broken legs and arms and other injuries.

Five New Bridges Built, Tax Rate Not Raised

The Roads and Bridges Committee of County Council Had Busy Session

Construct Permanent Bridges

The past year has been a particularly busy one and also a successful one for the roads and bridge committee of the County Council. The whole season has been taken up with the construction of new bridges and repairs to others. That the work has been well and economically done will be proven by the statement of expenditures at the end of the year and also by the fact that the tax rate will not have to be raised. At the same time the residents of the county are enjoying the benefit of new bridges, while the permanency of the structures will greatly reduce repair expenses in the future.

To give the county ratepayers an idea of what has been done The Times has secured the following information;

Early in the season the roads and bridges committee decided to construct what is known as Armstrong's bridge over the Indian river in Otonabee. Two substantial concrete abutments with steel superstructure will make a fine bridge and the best of it is the work is now nearly done.

Another bridge over Victoria St. in the town of Norwood was decided upon, and the work was put in charge of Mr. A. Breault, reeve of Norwood, and he is having the work done very satisfactory. The abutments are now nearly completed and are ready for the steel superstructure.

Another bridge was also built over North River in Belmont, and is in charge of Mr. Jas. Russell, reeve of Belmont and Methuen. This structure is a short one, but is nevertheless important. It was decided to built it at a point a little further up the river from the old one and by so doing the county was saved at least $2,000. Had the new bridge taken the place of the old one it would have been 100 feet long, while the present one is only 32 feet long. The move means a little jog in the road. The approaches may cause a little difficulty but under the capable supervision of Mr. Jas. Russell, these will no doubt be satisfactorily over come. The abutments are of quarried stone and are ready for the steel superstructure.

It has also been decided to rebuild the bridge at Bear Creek in Harvey, and was put in the hands of Mr. James Ingram, the reeve of that township. The material to be used will be cedar and Mr. Ingram will no doubt do the work as satisfactorily as he did Gannon Narrows bridge, which was carried away last spring by the ice.

Another bridge in Cavendish township over Black Lake creek has been authorized. It has not yet been started by Reeve Osben of Galway and Cavendish has secured some of the material and reports that he will have it ready before the frost comes.

In Dummer the bridge over the canal was in a bad state of repair, and Reeve Darling secured authority from the County Council to either have it repaired or rebuild whichever he considered advisable.

The Lakefield bridge, the only county bridge that village can boast of has been replanked and reppainted. Chemong bridge was repaired and the Pigeon Creek bridge which suffered somewhat from the ice last spring has been replaced and put in good shape again.

Other ordinary repairs have been made throughout the county, but the council has adopted the policy and it must be commended by all ratepayers, of doing as little repair work to old wooden bridges as possible as they will all be replaced by either concrete or steel structures in the near future.

It would appear to the average ratepayer that the above extensive works would necessitate raising the tax rate in the county, but it is the same as it was in 1905, 1905, 1904 and 1903. Yet five new bridges have been built and extensive repairs made to others, as well as the regular repairs. Only $11,000 will have to be raised by debentures to meet the payments. This does not include the $3,000 (which will have to be raised to pay for the new bridge over the new Buckhorn dam which the former council succeeded in getting the Dominion Government to build at a cost of $10,000, the county to pay $3,000 and the Dominion $7,000.

The chairmen in charge of the special committees in charge of the construction of the above bridges are as follows;—

Armstrong's Bridge—John Fife, reeve of Otonabee.

Norwood Bridge. — A. Breault, reeve of Norwood.

North River Bridge—James Russell, reeve of Belmont and Methuen.

Deer Bay Creek Bridge—Jas. Ingram, reeve of Harvey.

Black Lake Creek Bridge—O. Osben, reeve of Galway and Cavendish.

The other bridges are in the hands of the reeves of the various municipalities.

Will Pass By-Law to Raise Funds

County Council to Issue Debentures for New Bridges--Special Session

A special meeting of the County Council will be held here on Tuesday night, September 29th, for the purpose of giving the final reading to a by-law to raise $6000 by debentures to pay for the several bridges being built this year. Wm. Ward and Thompson, M.P.P., will likely call the council together in regular session to discuss the matter of school boundaries in the township of Douro. The solicitor has been instructed to look into the matter so that the council can deal with it intelligently. It is also probable that the finance committee will meet next Tuesday, to deal with all outstanding accounts against the county.

Wedding Bells

HOLDSHIP—O'LEARY.

Douro, Sept. 24.—A very pretty wedding was celebrated yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Church, Douro, when Miss Maggie O'Leary was united in marriage to Mr. John W. Holdship of Montreal. The ceremony was begun at nine o'clock, and was somewhat out of the ordinary. From the fact that two of the bride's brothers assisted in the celebration of the nuptial mass. Rev. P. J. O'Leary said the mass, and was assisted by Rev. Michael O'Leary, Rev. W. J. Kielty, parish priest of Douro, was present in the sanctuary. The bride was attired in a handsome suit of gray, brocaded silk trimmed all over lace and silk tassels. She was attended by Miss Mary McCaffery, of Armadale, Toronto, who wore a very becoming suit of mauve silk trimmed with all over lace and ribbon. Mr. Maurice O'Leary, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride's travelling suit was of green lady's cloth with hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Holdship left on the noon C.P.R. train for her new home in Montreal. A large number of the friends of the bride gathered at the station to bid her farewell and to wish her every happiness in her married life.

After the ceremony at the church about fifty guests assembled at the home of the bride's mother, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. Among those who were invited were, Rev. Father Kielty, Rev. Father P. J. O'Leary, Rev. Father Michael O'Leary and Mrs. Kelly and Miss Holdship of Ottawa, sisters of the groom; Mr. John O'Leary and Mrs. Mikenesky of Jackson, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Barry, of Hastings.

Greatest Country in the World Requires Highest Standard of Government

Excellent Sermon by Rev. W. B. Heeney at St. Luke's Harvest Festival--Canada Compared to Palestine

St. Luke's church was well filled last night to take part in the Harvest Festival, and to hear Rev. W. B. Heeney, M.A., vicar of Holy Trinity church, Barrie. The church was very prettily decorated with sheafs of grain, vegetables, fruits and flowers, and the choir rendered an exceedingly fine program of music led by Mr. R Gliddon. The clergy assisting in the service were Rev. Wm. Major, of All Saints' church, Rev. J. H. Teney, of Omemee, Rev. W. B. Heeney and Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's.

During the service, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt made a feeling reference to the loss the Church had sustained by the death of the Lord Bishop of Montreal, Rev. Dr. Carmichael, rector of Christ's church cathedral, who passed so suddenly away last Monday morning.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt also referred to the departure from the city of Rev. Wm Major, who has so successfully looked after All Saints' church for several years past.

THE SERMON.

Rev. Mr. Heeney, M.A., is one of the brightest divines in the Anglican Church, and he delivered one of his best Harvest Home sermons to the congregation in St. Luke's last night. He took as his theme, "Praise Ye the Lord." In opening the reverend gentleman referred to a trip he made into the country north of this town and to the beautiful and fertile valley which exists there. When he preached to one of the congregations in that neighborhood he asked them if their heart ever warmed towards God while they were working in those harvest fields. Do the people recognise the presence of God which is so important in the success or the failure of the harvest. Away back in the old days when Palestine was at last Lent, the people there acknowledged God, and realized the fact that everything depended upon Him. If the people of that country could be thankful to God how much more so should Canadians sing His praise. Compare Palestine of those times to Canada of today, and compare their methods of gathering in their harvests with the methods in use here.

Palestine is only a speck alongside of Canada. Her resources were as nothing compared to ours, while the farmers of that distant land gathered their grains and did all their work by hand. Yet that country taught the world the lesson of "Gratitude to God."

Canada is the land God has given us to possess and it is our duty to improve it and develop it for our children. If we fail in this we fail in our duty as citizens of the greatest country in the world and our duty to God.

The reverend gentleman stated that there was one thing the people of today were not doing as faithfully as their fathers did, and that was reading the Bible and teaching it to their children. This was the most important duty a citizen of this country has and it is also a privilege which the men of years past gave up their lives to secure.

Another great duty was to govern the country properly. There was no use developing the natural resources or in improving and beautifying the country and then ruin everything by misgovernment. If corrupt government is existing today, as in the city from one end of the country to the other, then it is the duty of every good citizen to elect new men at the next election who will give us a government upon the highest moral standard.

ONE HUNDRED AND TEN LIVES LOST IN ALASKAN WRECK

Star of Bengal Went to Pieces Near Coronation Island--Tugs were Powerless--Left Vessel to Her Fate

Wrangel, Alaska, Sept. 23.— One hundred and ten out of a total of one hundred and thirty-seven persons aboard the cannery ship Star of Bengal were drowned last Sunday afternoon when the vessel was torn from the hold of protecting tugs and dashed ashore at Helm Point at the southeast end of Carnation Island. The news was brought by the tug Hattie Gage, Captain Farrer, which carried the survivors, 27 in all.

The survivors before leaving Carnation Island, buried the bodies of fifteen white men on the beach.

VESSEL A TOTAL LOSS.

The cable ship Burnside which left for the scene of the wreck at midnight Monday as soon as the news was received, returned last evening with the news that the Star of Bengal was a total loss only the ends of the masts showing above water.

The ship was being towed to sea from the Wrangle cannery by the tugs Hattie Gage and Kayak, Captain Farrer of the Hattie Gage gives the following account of the disaster.

As we came within reach of the gale we could see we were making sea-way and drifting toward Coronation Island. The Kayak was light and could do nothing. The Hattie Gage could not handle the ship alone. At four o'clock the Star of Bengal drifted into a narrow bight and we could feel and on both sides abreast. We sounded and found eight fathoms. We could see the vessel dimly by the phosphorescent rocks which were all around. We cast the tow line and steamed out into open water, but could not see anything in the driving rain except one blue light burning on the ship. The storm increased, and the tugs steamed away to Shipley Bay, 26 miles away.

BROKE INTO THREE PIECES.

Two survivors, Muir and Olsen, said the ship sank about nine o'clock after breaking into three pieces. The surf was full of salmon cases and mason-ic drums.

Muir says he and Olsen got a boat off and went ashore through the wreckage. They helped several ashore and pulled Captain Wigmer out of the wreckage. He could not speak. The breeches buoy was rigged to a tree, but the ship was swaying so that the line was alternately loose and tight, making it impossible to use. The ship's books and papers were were found on the beach. One man had matches and a fire was built with kerosene from the wreck. This fire kept the survivors from freezing.

Eczema Again Overcome

Zam-Buk Cures a Case which for Two Years Had Defied Every Remedy Tried

A FARMER'S GRATEFUL TESTIMONY

No case of eczema, skin disease, or affection, should be despaired of while Zam-Buk has been applied. The case of Mr. Francis Benoit, of St. Anne's (Man.), is a powerful illustration of Zam-Buk's efficiency. He says:—"I suffered from eczema for two years, and tried a great number of remedies. None of them, however, seemed to do me any good.

"The ailment was mostly in my legs, and both these were actually raw from the knees down. A small sample box of Zam-Buk was given to me, and even so small a quantity as that did me a little good. I then obtained a proper supply, and by the time I had used a few boxes I was completely cured."

Zam-Buk differs from ordinary salves and embrocations in containing no animal oil or fat. It is compounded from rich, healing, herbal essences, and is an ideal natural combination of power and purity. It is highly antiseptic, and instantly kills bacilli and disease germs, which settling into wounds and skin diseases, set up festering, blood poison, etc.

For cuts, burns, bruises, ulcers, abscesses, pimples, boils, skin eruptions, scalp sores, spreading sores, children's skin troubles, chafing sores, etc., Zam-Buk is unequalled. It also cures piles. All druggists and stores at 50c. a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 3 boxes for $1.25.

Autumnal Equinox

We are now approaching the time when the autumnal equinox occurs. Some months ago there was a discussion as to the exact date and time that the sun would cross the equator on its southward journey. It will actually crossed on Wednesday last, about six a.m., so that the autumnal equinox is at that time.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bowden have returned from a visit through the Canadian West.

Cheese Sold at 12 9-16c. Highest for the Season

The price of cheese went up another notch yesterday when 12 9-16 cents were obtained for almost the entire board. The make, however, has considerably decreased which explains to a great extent the increase in price. Altogether 3,485 boxes were boarded as compared with 3,985 at the last sale, which was three weeks ago. On 8 st. 18th, 1907 there were 2,829 boxs boarded, the best price being 12 5-16 cents.

Before beginning the business President Caughlin welcomed the return of Mr. Whitten, buyer, who has been ill for some time.

The following cheese were boarded;

To Play First Game Here

Baseball fans in Peterborough will be glad to learn that a series of games have been arranged with the St. Andrew's team of Toronto, in order to decide the championship of Ontario, the winners to play off with the Park Nine or St. Mary's for the honors. Corney Burns, of the locals, is in Toronto and has been successful in making the arrangements. The St. Andrew's, who cleaned up the City Amateur League in handy fashion, have a decidedly fast team and this season succeeded in capturing the scalps of the International League leaders. They are confident of winning and will have their strongest line up available for the games. The first of the series will be played here on Saturday at three o'clock at Riverside Park. The fans will, no doubt, be glad to welcome back Clements, Murphy, Anderson, O'Brien and the other old favorites, who will be here to play for the Petes. The latter will also have the services of Harry Burridge, who caught for them last season, and who this year has made a most successful debut in professional company with the Youngstown team of the Pennsylvania and Ohio League. His work will be watched with interest by the fans. Clements will likely be called upon to do the slab work for Peterborough, while Curson or Monteith will be on the firing line for the Saints. It will be a great game and will, no doubt, attract a large crowed to the pretty grounds across the river.

Gene Hurtubise was Too Much for Hassan Abdallah

The Sultan's Favorite Wrestler Did Not Last 20 Minutes with Peterborough's Strong Man --Turk Took the First Fall

Last night in the Brock street rink, Hassan Abdallah the terrible turk met defeat at the hands of Gene Hurtubise, Canadian champion in one of the best wrestling bouts ever presented in Peterborough, before a large crowd of spectators.

The two men came on the mat at 9 o'clock sharp, each having the firm determination to carry off the purse of $200. After wrestling seven and one-half long minutes, the Turk stepped and asked in his native dialect for a glass of water, but Referee A. O. Yokeome refused, and the bout continued. However, the Turk had not altogether lost his strength and staying power, and downed Hurtubise in fourteen minutes.

After a five minutes' intermission both appeared again on the mat each looking none the worse for his former battle. Hurtubise went at his man like a cat at a hair-lipped canary, and easily secured the second fall in two minutes. At this stage the crowd went wild, and cheering could be heard for blocks away.

Silence once more prevailed in the crowd when both men went at it again for the third and last fall. This round, although lasting the shortest of all was really the most exciting.

Many times it looked as though Hurtubise would win and lose, but the strong anticipations of the crowd were mostly in favor of the former. Not fifteen seconds after the time keeper announced that two minutes had elapsed, Gene had his adversary pinned to the mat, thereby defeating Abdallah the Sultan's to his long list of beats.

At the close of the second fall it was officially announced that Mr. Fritz Mehl, champion of Germany, would wrestle the winner of this bout, and it is likely he will meet Gene here ion a short time.

The preliminaries were also very good. The first one was between Messrs. Bubble Lang and Ted Crowe. After wrestling for ten minutes without a fall the two men stepped aside to make room for another exhibition of the art.

The second performance was tween Jack Wilson and John Lilley, of London, Eng., and proved to be very exciting. Wilson threw his man two times in the ten minutes which was allowed them, thereby defeating Abdallah the Sultan's favorite, and adding another victory

Salvation Army Discontinues Chartering the Immigrant Ships

Halifax, Sept. 23.—At this morning's session of the Trades and Labor Congress Secretary Draper announced he had received the following despatch from Col. Bowrill, Salvation Army, Montreal; "It might interest the Congress to learn that we have decided to discontinue chartering ships for next year. We will also exercise the greatest care and be governed by conditions here. We hope and believe that much good will result from the conference on Thursday, arrangements for which we appreciate deeply."

Most of the session this morning was occupied by receiving resolutions and hearing addresses of Fraternal Delegate Grayson, American Federation of Labor, and Rev. J. B. Shearer. The latter impressed upon the Congress the importance of getting in touch with men of every class, and particularly the clergy. He told of the growth of the moral and social reform idea, and urged that nobody had more to gain by joining the moral and social reform than labor.

AUSTRALIAN SENTIMENT

Our remarks on the opinion expressed by many of our American contemporaries, in regard to the feeling of the people of Australia as shown by the welcome accorded by them to the United States Fleet, have speedily been shown to be accurate. It scarcely needed the despatch of the Governor of Victoria, speaking on behalf of his ministers, to the Secretary for the Colonies, to "make it apparent that the events in connection with the visit of the American vessels, so far from being an evidence of any weakening of the ties between that State and the Empire were really a proof to the contrary. Mr. Deakin, the Premier of the Commonwealth, also issued a statement to a similar effect. Apparently the views expressed in the American newspapers, and which were cabled to Australia, caused great surprise and not a little indignation there, or there would not have been official cognisance taken of the matter in the manner we have mentioned.

Our kinsmen at the Antipodes are evidently not familiar with the sensational methods of American journalism or of the reckless manner in which views and opinions are ascribed to others without the least authority or foundation. In no part of the British Empire is the sentiment of loyalty to that great political fabric stronger than in Australia and New Zealand. It rests not merely on blood relationship and kinship, but also on a complete realisation of the fact that under no other political arrangement yet devised could the comparatively small population in those lands have the same entire control of their own domestic affairs, while enjoying all the security and the prestige among the nations of the earth which they possess as constituting part of the greatest Imperial aggregation on the face of the globe—one that is supreme on the ocean and both able and willing to afford adequate protection to the people of the most remote territory under the British flag. So deeply do the Australians appreciate the security and protection that the British Navy affords them, that they are continually seeking some plan by which they can give practical expression to this recognition of the actual situation in the way of bearing some portion of the expenditure by the maintenance of the Navy, and thereby relieve the taxpayers of the United Kingdom on whom the whole burden falls at the present time.

While we cannot but deprecate the circulation of such erroneous ideas as those expressed in the American press on the reception given the United States Fleet in Australian waters, the incident has had the result of bringing forth a decisive protest from those most concerned in the indictment, and of affording them an opportunity though their official representatives of testifying to their loyalty to the Imperial tie and to their determination to maintain a connection which is based on mutual esteem and sentiments common to all the British communities.

THE MOTOR CAR TRADE, AND A COLLAPSE

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most attractive. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless metalled road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could be run without horses with all the trouble some adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for these vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea Bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Even the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1906 the motor-car-works stock was quoted at close on 800 per cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turin and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing crass, a donkey engine was introduced under the name of "Fabrica Italiana Automobili Torino," the initials of which spelt "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of 800,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $3,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,000 more; but in 1903 it made a gain of some $1,200, and in the next year it gained $15,200. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 6 per cent. and in 1905 the net profit was shown to be $471,236, and it paid a 20 per cent. dividend.

This great prosperity led on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divided the old shares of $40 into 8 new shares of $5. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for in the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1905, they were quoted worth $240, at the end of Jan., 1906, the quotation was $320 per share, at the end of February $360, and at the end of March $400. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $480 per share, or 12 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinians bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $600 and upward." At this juncture the directors, in the belief that a share of $480 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $1 (10 lire); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (100 lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound rapidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1906 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,-057,000, a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $160,000, which had been inflated to $1,600,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 400 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 60 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 50 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car assessoires, with a nominal capital of $23,222,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were jamb-full of unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Itala" make, hard hit by the crisis, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,134,800, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past; and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.24, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1906, stood at $150, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $82, in August to $40, in October to $10, in April, 1908, to $3, in May to $6.80 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $20. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fraudulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 1906, which showed a net profit of $1,057,616. The rival manufactories, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock exchange madness, are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all crises which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars; and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapse.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure as soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Buy the property.

THE NEW RURAL MAIL BOX

Thousands of boxes for rural mail delivery will soon, in accordance with the promise contained in the Postmaster-General's speech at Niagara Falls, Sept. 15, be seen on the concession lines of Ontario and other Provinces. The following sketches show the operation of the box adopted by the Government. It is so contrived that the position of the box on the arm to which it is attached can be easily changed from lying lengthwise along the arm, to directly across the end of it. The arm itself should be along the road in the direction of travel either way. When the position of the box is across the end of the arm it is an indication to the patron or to the courier, as the case may be, that the box contains mail matter. On the other hand, when the box lies lengthwise along the arm, it is a notification either to the courier or to the patron that no mail matter has been deposited therein. The position of the box on the arm can be easily changed from lengthwise to crosswise. The series of illustrations serve to show the relative positions of the box and the arm when the box is empty and when mail matter has been deposited therein, either for collection by the courier or for delivery to the patron, as the case may be.

Newark Protests

Newark, N.J., Sept. 24.—Baltimore's claim to the Eastern League championship was jeopardized today by the action of Manager Stallings of the Newark Club, who protested four games won by the Orioles in Rochester last August in which Catin played.

Catin, in the spring, was farmed out to Wilmington, and was later suspended by the club. According to Stallings' protest, Catin was under suspension (when he played in these games, and was therefore ineligible to play with the Orioles.

Manager Stallings sent his protest to President Powers today, and it will be up to the Board of Directors of the Eastern League to decide the case.

According to the records, Stalling is correct in his contention, and, if baseball law is adhered to, it will be up to the league to throw out the four games in question.

To understand the situation exactly, the final standing of the first three clubs must be taken into consideration. It is as follows:

	Won	Lost.	P.C.
Baltimore	83	57	.593
Providence	79	57	.581
Newark	79	57	.581

It will be seen that should the Stallings protest be carried, it would make all three clubs tied for the championship. However, in view of past experiences with the Board of Directors of the Eastern League, it would not be at all surprising if he was turned down in decisive fashion.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how one thing usually comes about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—as this side though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hasn't he for thirty years urged mothers and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough [illegible] take no chance, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the formula [illegible] with others and note the difference. [illegible] can always be on the safe side by demanding

A BAD PLAN OF TRAVEL.

The Scheme That Worried One Woman on Her Trip Abroad.

"When I hear of people joyfully making plans for their first trip abroad," said a man who has made many a transatlantic voyage, "I am tempted to give them a little bit of advice, based, of course, on my own observations, but particularly upon a remark made to me by a middle aged woman whose seat in the saloon was next to mine on my return trip last summer. This woman had a husband, and it was to him that she referred in answering my question one day. I asked her what she had been doing on the other side. She looked half quizzically, half reproachfully, at her spouse and said, 'Well, my principal occupation was trying to keep track of John.'

"It developed that her concern was not over what John might do in European capitals, but simply related to the difficulty each had in meeting the other after pursuing their several ways in a strange city, she to browse among the shops and he, an inveterate sightseer, to visit this, that and the other spot of interest. Their general scheme, as I was informed, was to diverge, say, in the morning, following their respective bents and arranging to meet at a certain place at a certain time. The plan sounds feasible, but it is experimental, and, as both of them found, it was an experiment that didn't work well. First one would be delayed and then the other, and if you have ever waited for a person in a foreign city you can appreciate the particular variety of anxiety that comes in about ten minutes. There's a feeling that something has happened to the missing person, for one thing, and, for another, there's an increasing realization that you yourself are wasting time. If you start out to look up the delinquent, the case becomes practically hopeless. The needle in the haystack is easy compared to that search. When the reunion does come at dinner time in the hotel or pension, explanations are received with tears or haughty disdain. Oh, I know; I've been through it."

A Kaleidoscope of Fashions.

For my part I commend a quick changing fashion and could I have chosen my period would have fixed on the fickle years of the first empire, when fashions shifted from week to week, and that, too, with such fine shades of difference that only the most frivolous could follow them. Then the great conqueror brought to Paris finery from the ends of the earth, muslins from India, garlands of roses from Bengal, stuffs shining with gold and silver from Cairo; from Turkey, of course, turbans, and from the far east shawls—shawls from Kashmir, from Persia and from the Levant; shawls particolored, blue—bright blue—and red and green and black and the clear yellow of the sun; shawls patterned with all the fantasticings of Asian caprice and fit not only to hang from the shoulders of the fair, but to give a coquette of eastern fancy day long visions of the orient. From the past, for all time as well as all the earth was then Napoleon's, came the fashion of the troubadours—chapeaux à Crecaux, sleeves à la mameluk, chevaux à l'enfant, leading to a very modern period who can say what charming Gothic airs? How do not such revolutions of fashion enlarge the feminine heart and teach it to live in all ages and all climates!—Lucy M. Donnelly in Atlantic.

The Greatest Man.

Who is the greatest man who ever lived? The question went round a dinner table, and controversy raged from the fish onward. There were two who plumped for Julius Cæsar, five more for Napoleon; one, thinking of statues, said Shakespeare, and somebody else, who did not get a hearing at all, murmured Buddha at intervals, while most of the people present who did not know Greek said Aeschylus. But Aristotle won easily. It was not a particularly scholarly assemblage, and one wondered rather how many of Aristotle's enthusiastic devotees could have quoted accurately from him—had ever read him, indeed—since they left college. And all the while probably the greatest man of all ages is jogging away among us unnoticed, unrecognized, while we snapshot and interview all the little men or go back to some one who has been dead long enough for us to find out that we may safely praise him.—London Chronicle.

FOIBLES OF MUSICIANS

Eccentric Moods and Manners of the Great Composers.

THE MADNESS OF GENIUS.

Beethoven's Strange Abstraction and Queer Habits—The Odd Contrast That Mozart Insisted on Signing. Meyerbeer Inspired by Thunder.

When listening to the wonderful strains of Beethoven's immortal symphonies and sonatas it is difficult to imagine that they could come from the pen of such an eccentric man. Though musicians are, as a rule, men with many peculiarities, Beethoven was probably the most extraordinary of them all.

He wrote his music in all sorts of places—when dining, walking or conversing with a friend. Often in the midst of a crowded street he would stop and write furiously for a few minutes on the back of a letter or an envelope, oblivious to the bustling crowd about him. Some of his greatest themes were composed when he was walking along in the pouring rain, for in the worst weather he was a familiar figure in the streets of Vienna, and, though often the object of much ridicule and many gibes, he was profoundly inattentive to his surroundings, as his mind was wholly occupied with his music. His friends were not unaccustomed to have him break off in the midst of a conversation and begin to write rapidly some motif which had presented itself to him.

This great composer would play for hours at a stretch, and in order to cool his hands, which often became feverish, he would seize a water jug and walk about the room, pouring the water first on one hand and then on the other, utterly ignoring the fact that there was no receptacle to catch it. This was the cause of many of his hasty retreats from his lodgings, for the slightest complaint would cause him to give notice to quit, so irascible was he at times. As a result by sometimes was paying for no fewer than three different lodgings at the same time, which, after engaging for a month, he had abruptly left in a day.

Though Haydn ranks next to Beethoven on the list of eccentric musicians, still their peculiarities were very unlike. Beethoven lived in the midst of disorder and confusion, while Haydn averred that he could not compose a line unless everything in his study was in its exact place. Even every ornament must be where it belonged.

He always rose early to write, for he found his greatest inspiration when the birds were singing in the dewy morning hours. His most extraordinary characteristic, however, was to don his full court dress, with bob wig, hat and ruffles, and put on his finger a certain ring before he wrote a line, for he declared that he had not a musical idea unless so attired.

Mozart cannot be called eccentric in the same sense as the two mentioned, for they were very retiring—in fact, reclusive—while he was to a great extent a man of the world. To him, however, must be credited one of the strangest documents that perhaps have ever been written.

He became engaged to a young woman, and at the request of his future mother-in-law he drew up in the presence of an attorney a contract which bound him to marry one of the woman's daughters within three years, the said daughter always having the liberty to release the composer if she wished to marry another. But in case Mozart was unable to carry out his intention through lack of the necessary funds or through the woman's refusal he pledged himself to support her in the condition of a stranger, no matter where or how she lived, all her life. This support was to be a fixed sum paid quarterly or half yearly.

Wagner, too, was not exempt from peculiar fancies. His mind seemed to run to the gruesome, and during his lifetime he had his grave constructed. It was in the garden back of his house, and he would often go and look at it that he might not forget its existence. But the worst of it was that he constantly insisted that his friends should remember it, too, and when he was entertaining them at dinner he would suddenly break off the conversation and begin declaiming on eternity and the grave.

"My friends," he would say, "in the midst of life we are in death. Death is a lot that we all must face, even as great a man as myself. I, too, must die. I should like very much to show you my grave, if you will allow me."

And, starting from the dinner table, he would lead the way, followed by his guests, to the corner of the garden where his grave was, and there he would give his companions further dissertations on eternity.

Dream Troubles.

"Once when I was blue," said a business man, "a friend told me I was trying over imaginary troubles. He cheered me up with a yarn about his little nephew. This little fellow's sister said one morning:

"'Oh, Gussie, I had such a lovely dream last night! I dreamed I was at a cake shop, and I had such loads of good things—ice cream, pie, strawberry shortcake, chocolates, jelly sandwiches, limes and lots of other things besides.'

"The little boy's eyes glistened. He smiled with delight.

"'And what was I eating?' he asked eagerly.

"'Oh, you weren't there, Gussie.'

"Then, overwhelmed with sorrow, little Gussie hid his face in his hands and wept bitterly."

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-on's never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes by word of mouth from one to another. SCARED THE ROBBER.

How a Determined Man Prevented a Holdup.

"The fact that a determined stand is all that is needed," continued the western man, "was illustrated a good many years ago by a peculiar little incident which took place on the old stage line running out of Tombstone, A. T. Holdups used to be frequent on that route; but, strange to say, nobody took any precautions against such a contingency. One day the stage was carrying an unusual number of passengers, and while it was going over an extremely deserted section of the road a masked man stepped from behind a rock, leveled a shotgun at the driver and ordered him to pull up.

"He obeyed at once, and the robber began the usual programme by telling everybody to get out and range himself in line with his hands above his head. There were several nervy men on top, but none of them cared to court death by taking the initiative, and it was impossible, moreover, to say how many additional ruffians might be lurking behind the rocks. At any rate, all hands were clambering down when suddenly the door of the stage was flung violently open and out leaped a big, fierce looking man with a cocked revolver in each fist.

"At the sight of him the robber took an involuntary backward step and fell sprawling over a round stone. Both barrels of his gun went off in the air, and in the confusion he picked himself up and ran like a deer for cover. He had a horse on the other side of the rocks, and in less time than it takes to tell it he was in the saddle and 'burning the wind' across the prairie. He got away, and now comes the funny part of the story.

"While the robber was beating his retreat the big man snapped both pistols ineffectually at least half a dozen times and then discovered in blank amazement that neither one of them was loaded. He was glaring dumfounded into the empty cylinders when his wife stuck her head out of the coach and burst into vociferous weeping.

"'Oh, John,' she sobbed, 'I took the cartridges out of them guns this morning and forgot to tell you about it!' As she spoke she held out a handful of brass shells.

"'What the mischief did you do that for?' he roared.

"'I was afeared that they might go off in the coach and shoot the baby—boo-hoo-hoo!' she replied."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Practical Scoring.

"Look here, Lucy," exclaimed Mr. Hardapple; "this is no time to be practicing on the piano. It's time to prepare dinner."

"But, pa, I am interested in scales," pouted Lucy as she pounded the keys.

"Interested in scales, eh? Well, I've a task for you. Go down in the kitchen and help your ma scale fish."—Detroit Tribune.

"The second married an Indian, a descendant of a chieftain"—

"I see! Quite aboriginal."

"But the third married a plain American business man."

"H'm! Merely eccentric, I should say."—Puck.

Accounted For.

Mrs. J.'s patience was much tried by a servant who had the habit of standing around with her mouth open. One day as the maid waited upon the table her mouth was open, as usual, and her mistress said:

"Mary, your mouth is open."

"Ixcuse," replied Mary; "I opened it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Long Story.

Acorn—Say, old man, what did your wife say to you when you got in last night?

Wyandle—Oh, are you just starting on your two weeks' vacation?

Acorn—No. Why?

Wyandle—Then you won't have time to listen. I can't talk as fast as she did.—Houston Post.

SUNSET AT GUAYAQUIL.

There Is No Twilight—No Interval Between Daylight and Dark.

The days and nights at Guayaquil are of equal length. The sun rises promptly at 6 o'clock in the evening and gets up at 6 in the morning with equal regularity the whole year around. There is no twilight, no gloaming, no interval whatever between daylight and dark—only a brilliant illumination, the sudden disappearance of a red ball into a blue ocean, a spread of flame color over all the western sky for a few minutes and a purple haze in the east.

Then the surface of the ocean, like the heavens, is lighted with millions of strange and shifting stars, for the water is so impregnated with phosphorus that each tiny wave is tipped with light, and the foam that follows in the wake of the vessel is often like a stream of fire. Sometimes you can see porpoises swimming along the bow of the vessel livid with phosphorescent light and followed by a streak of sparks like a comet's tail.

The Southern Cross, with the right arm tipped out at proper angle, has emerged ahead in the midst of myriads of unknown worlds that look strange to those accustomed to the northern constellations. Under the left arm is a large black spot in the heavens, brightened by only a single modest star, which the sailors call "the devil's dinner bag." Over the stern of the vessel in the early evening you can plainly distinguish the familiar constellation of the Great Bear, but it goes to bed with the children.

News in Brief

London, Sept. 21.—At Portsmouth four local workingmen were remanded on a charge of breaking into and looting St. Mary's Chapel of East, attached to Portsmouth Parish Church; while a local dealer was remanded on a charge of receiving the property stolen. The building was apparently entered on several occasions, and was practically wrecked, gas and other fittings being torn away. The organ was pulled to pieces, and all the metal work and piping were forcibly removed.

SHOT IN A RAILWAY CARRIAGE.

On the arrival at Carnforth the other afternoon of the 4.15 express from Barrow, a first-class passenger was found shot. He was alive, though unconscious, and was sent on to Lancaster Infirmary in the same train. Luggage in the compartment was labelled "Machell, Foundry Lane, Holbeck, Leeds."

NOVEL BROWNING SERVICE.

In honor of the marriage of Robert and Ellen Barrett Browning, on September 12, 1846, a sweet festival service was held at the Browning Hall, Walworth, when several of the members of the Moody-Manners Opera Company attended and sang the "Love Song" of the poet and poetess, to the great delight of the congregation.

Nothing that a passenger, who arrived by the Nord at Dover the other day, looked unusually bulky, the Customs officer was not satisfied with his denial that he had anything contraband, and requested him to step into the searching room. Here the passenger was found to have concealed on his clothing three dozen cigars and a pound of tobacco and cigarettes. [illegible] to pay paying double duty or over £3 and forfeiting the goods.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—A frightful case of suffering was brought to the attention of the police this morning in the person of Maran Baytick, a Galician. Baytick, who is 27 years of age came to Montreal from Sydney, N. S., in a fearfully emaciated condition, being in the last stages of tuberculosis. The man, who is apparently of a fine disposition, and economical, had saved up $50, and he hoped here to find a resting-place in one of the hospitals. On arriving in the city he learned that there was no place for a tuberculosis patient, and he wandered about from place to place until last evening, when he went to the police and told them he had not had anything to eat for two days. The man is literally skin and bone, and the police doctor states that in all probability he cannot live over fifteen days. In Nova Scotia he worked in the mines until he could work no longer, and then concluded the best thing he could do was to come to the metropolis of Canada in the hope, which was vain, of being taken care of. The man is at present in jail. Baytick's people live in Karocheff, Galicia.

What Every Woman Requires for Headache Lanqour

Mrs. Mary Flanagan Gives Advice that is Sound, Useful and True.

Has your strength given out?
Do you feel languid and tired this spring?
Are you pale, somewhat nervous, finding it hard to do your housework?
Thousands feel just the same—feel the enervating influence of spring, whether that brings out latent symptoms of disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flanagan of Hay ax Junction — here is her experience. "I will never again suffer the torture of deadening spring illness — never will I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I lived through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, listless—Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite—I relished my meals and grew strong. Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic, blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."
Women who are continually pale, blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, aching muscles, bearing down pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that sorely need Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c at all dealers.

Assault Case Settled

The assault case of Saunders vs. Saunders, which was to have been heard by Magistrate Edmison yesterday, was settled out of court. The people have moved from Norwood to Peterborough, and are apparently living quite happily together. The husband agreed to settle the costs, and to take the wife back and be good, so the magistrate consented.

Walk at the Market

City Engineer Hay took the levels yesterday afternoon for the new 12-foot granolithic walk to be laid around the Market Square. The work will be started this week, and when completed will make a great improvement in the appearance of the place. For years the worn out wooden walks have been an eye sore, and discreditable to the city.

Four Teams in the Junior City League

A junior series in the City Rugby Football League was decided upon by the executive last night at the meeting. President R. F. McWilliams was in the chair, and team representatives were present as follows:—T. A.S., J. Dennard; Y.M.C.A., Chas. Sisson; Rough Riders, C. Wareham and Park Potter.

The business of the senior series was left over until the meeting on Wednesday night next week.

There appears to be considerable interest among the younger boys and it was decided to form a junior section of the league. It will be composed of teams from the T.A.S., Rough Riders, Collegiate Institute and the Crescents. The membership fee will be $2 and there will be two games each Saturday, starting on October 3rd. The schedule will be drawn up next Wednesday night. Each club is to furnish the secretary of the league with certificates of the age of all its players. The age limit is 20 years and under.

New Electric Pump

The water commissioners of Lindsay, have decided to install electrical pumps at their water works pumping station. This action was taken upon the recommendation of a deputation which visited East Toronto recently.

LIQUOR AND LAW

Hostility to the saloon has grown rapidly of late years. And those who know the liquor trade are beginning to find the cause. Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Journal, an American trade paper, says that the constant law-breaking saloon-keepers has discredited their business and made "personal liberty" a term of reproach. Saloons have been run in defiance of law and decency, and it seems now as if they are doomed to total extinction except in the large cities.

The article continues:—"We do not mean that all saloons or the majority of saloons have been conducted in a disreputable manner, but we do mean that a sufficient percentage of such places have been badly conducted, that is, have been disorderly, have sold to intoxicated men, have sold to women and to minors, have conducted gambling adjuncts, have kept open after legal hours, and on Sundays, to create a hostile sentiment that has crystalized into a wa of extermination. We realize that this is a big admission, but the facts demand the admission that our trade may properly grasp the situation."

Fortunately, in Ontario the saloon is not recognized at all. Every bar must be a portion of a hotel. So, while some of the irregularities mentioned by The Journal have not developed here others have. There is too much selling after hours in this Province, too little respect altogether for the law. And undoubtedly this very fact has had a good deal to do with the growth of the local option sentiment. No one can violate the law without losing caste among his fellowpatrizens.

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions, which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nervine. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeons' knife, would, it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

Trent Canal Made Feasible

For many years the feasibility of the Trent Canal was doubted by the various governments of the country, and by people generally throughout the Dominion who did not live along the route of the canal. In fact there only have been many who did reside along the canal who may have been sceptical as to the feasibility of the proposition, by reason of the fact that it was thought that there was not a sufficient watershed to feed the artificial stretches of the canal from Balsam Lake to Lake Simcoe, and also on other sections. It is still a question whether under the conditions that existed at that time, the Trent Canal as a through route from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario, could have been a feasibility. The present Dominion Government, however, appreciated the fact that all the rivers and streams in the counties of Victoria, Haliburton and Peterborough, which at that time were owned and controlled by the Ontario Government, should be handed over to the Dominion Government as part of the Trent Canal system. It was apparent, that in the several hundreds lakes, rivers, and streams in that territory a great amount of water could be conserved during the spring freshets and used for canal purposes during the dry summer season. Previously the water in that district was controlled by the Ontario Government, who had no direct responsibility in so far as the Trent Canal was concerned, and who merely used the rivers and streams for the purpose of assisting the lumberman in getting out their logs. Hon. Mr. Stratton was at that time a member of the Ontario Provincial Government. He commenced a campaign with a view to having the works transferred to the Dominion Government, as he felt that dual system of controlling the waters was prejudicial to the ultimate completion of the canal, as well as a detriment to the users of electrical power at Peterborough and other places. After some considerable negotiation the Dominion Government took over from the Ontario Government all these lakes, rivers and streams, on which there were at that time some thirty odd dams, which could be used for the regulation and conservation of the waters. It required only one year's demonstration to prove that sufficient water could be stored in the northern watershed and used during the dry season, to operate the canal and afford an even and sufficient flow for the uses of navigation and the development of power along the Trent Canal. When therefore, the officials of the department visited the new stretch of navigation from Balsam Lake to Lake Simcoe, and saw for themselves that there would be no trouble whatever in securing water for the operation of the canal, they at once became convinced that the canal from Georgian Bay to Lak Ontario was a feasibility and immediately $1,-500,000, was placed in the estimates for the work of construction of the remaining uncompleted portions of the canal. This year an additional $1,000,000 has been granted to further carry on the work. It was only the fact that the government and the public became convinced that sufficient water could be conserved to operate the canal, that they at once decided to proceed with vigor with the completion of the system, and it was owing in a very large extent to the efforts of Hon. Mr. Stratton in inducing the Ontario Government to hand over the numerous lakes and rivers, that it was possible to convince the best engineers of the country, and the Dominion Government that sufficient water could be procured for the proper operation of the canal on the northern sections.

To anyone conversant with the circumstances, they will agree that the securing of these reservoir lakes and streams was in reality the determining factor as to whether the canal would be pushed to completion or not.

The various organs become natural and manly. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. We invite all the afflicted to consult us confidentially and free of charge. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard-earned dollars.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience.

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope "Tender for Construction", will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 28th day of September, 1908, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Fraquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 104.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Fraquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 100 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $100,000.

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract accruing to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force, during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,

P. B. RYAN,
Secretary.

The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumbrance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide for a distance of 150 feet at 170 feet depth extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $58.06 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

An accepted cheque on a chartered Bank of Canada payable to the order of the Chairman and Secretary-Treasurer of the Commission for the amount of the cash bonus tendered for such lease must accompany each tender.

Forms of tender and of proposed lease (reserving a rental of $1.00 per annum plus 15 per cent. of the gross value at the mouth of the mine of all ore mined) and full information and plans showing location of each parcel may be examined at the Office of the Commission in Toronto, and the Office of the Mining Engineer, Cobalt.

All tenders must be made on the forms supplied by the Commission for the purpose and signed with the actual signatures of the parties tendering.

In case of each parcel the party whose tender is accepted will be required to promptly execute a lease in form satisfactory to the Commission, failing which his deposit will be absolutely forfeited to the Commission.

The cheque sent in by unsuccessful tenderers will be returned to them.

The Commission does not bind itself to accept the highest or any tender.

A. J. McGEE,
Secretary-Treasurer,

MR. CHIPMAN HERE TO CONSULT COUNCIL RE OUTFALL SEWER

Met Board of Works Last Night--Going Over the Ground Today--Will Give Advice--Other Business Transacted

A meeting of the Board of Works Committee was held last night for the purpose of consulting with Mr. Chipman, the sewer expert of Toronto, who is down in connection with the new outfall sewer on Park street, and the Romaine street sewer.

Those present were Chairman Ald. Phelan, Aldermen Davey, Bulley, Elliott, McIntyre and Mayor Bush.

While waiting for Mr. Chipman to have supper the board dealt with a deputation which was present in connection with a sidewalk on Wolfe street from Rubidge to Edinburgh street.

The Board of Works has so much work on hand now that it will be impossible to consider anything more, so the deputation was informed accordingly. The deputation was not satisfied and addressed the board urging that the work be taken up. The walk desired is a feeder to Knox church, and as there is no walk there whatever, they felt that they were entitled to a good walk. They did not forget the amount of work already on hand, but they felt this was most important.

Chairman Phelan explained that he did not see how it would be possible to grant the request of the deputation this year as work will have to cease by the 15th of October, as frost after that is a danger to the work.

Engineer Hay said that the district was a very bad one to work in as a walk in black muck is of no use.

Ald. Buller suggested that a temporary wooden walk be laid for this fall and winter.

The engineer suggested that excavation this fall and then filled up with gravel to last for the winter and in the spring only the concrete top would have to be laid. This suggestion was adopted.

Father Kielty wrote the mayor stating that his horse went through a culvert near the Nicholls Oval, but nothing serious resulted. The culvert was repaired at once. The matter to settle with Father Kielty was left with the chairman.

A letter was received from Mr. Robert Stewart in reply to the mayor's letter in reference to the proposed overhead bridge at Hunter street, was read. Mr. Stewart said that his company was heartily in sympathy with the proposed new bridge and would be glad to waive all claims of damages to property, but he did not think they should be expected to bear any of the cost. Mr. Stewart said he would be in the city again inn two or three weeks and would endeavor to meet the committee.

NEW OUTFALL SEWER.

Mr. Chipman said he had seen a general plan of the system which Mr. Hay had prepared and he learned what the board proposed. He said that he had not been over that ground yet and would like to take tomorrow to see what was required. He could then give an idea of the cost of the work and also his fees.

The board adjourned to meet Mr. Chipman in the morning, and go over the ground with him. They will also meet again this evening.

Conservative Grand Rally To-night

Hon. R. L. Borden and Premier Roblin, of Manitoba, the Speakers

There is every indication that the crowd which will gather to hear Hon. R. L. Borden, the next Premier of Canada, and Hon. Mr. Roblin, the Premier of Manitoba, tonight, will be so great that the opera house will not begin to hold them. Besides the citizens of Peterborough who will turn out en masse, there will be several hundred from outside points. Everyone is anxious to hear the political issues of the day discussed from the view point of the Conservative party. The speakers will be Messrs. R. L. Borden, Premier Roblin of Manitoba; T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., J. H. Burnham, Conservative candidate and others. Those who want a seat will go well to get there early.

TERRIFIC TYPHOON LEAVES DEATH AND MUCH DEVASTATION

Philippines Swept by Great Wind Storm--Every Building but One in Town of Masbate Razed to Ground--Many Persons were Killed

Manila, Sept. 24.—A typhoon of terrific velocity swept over the central portion of the Phillippine group, sweeping part of the island of Samar, Northern Leyte, South-Eastern Luzon, Northern Panay, Masbate, and part of Romblon.

The typhoon disappeared in the China Sea, moving in a direction west by north-west.

Wires are prostrated and available details of the damage done are meagre.

It is evident, however, that serious disaster followed in the wake of the sudden storm.

A telegram from a town in Masbate reports that every building in the place was razed with the single exception of the postal building.

A despatch received from Romblon says that the typhoon caused a great loss of property, and that undoubtedly many persons have been killed.

Telephone Connection Between Zion Village and Peterborough

Meeting of Those Interested Called for Friday Next

To Organize Independent Company

A movement is on foot to organize another independent telephone company, so that the residents of and surrounding Zion will have direct communication with the city of Peterborough. The Bell Telephone Co. has Mr. Geo. H. Hill of the contracting department in the city this week looking after their interests, and he will attend a meeting called for next Friday night at Zion Foresters' Hall, Otonabee, when it is expected the organization of the company will be completed.

The Bell Telephone Company are accomplishing a great work through out this district in encouraging and assisting in the organization of independent companies which connect with their lines. The object is to get the whole surrounding country in direct communication with the city. What this means to the local merchants is only partially realized, but is still more advantageous to the farmers.

The meeting at Zion was called by Dr. E. A. Langfeldt, and the letter he sent is as follows;

Peterborough, Sept. 23, 1908.

Dear Sir,—As I am interested in the promotion of extended communication to the larger centers of our country for the sake of commerce and other helpful means in the way of business and social intercourse, I have arranged for a meeting, with representatives of the Bell Telephone Co., to be held at Zion's Foresters Hall, Otonabee, on Friday, Oct. 2nd, at eight o'clock.

I would be glad if you would notify your neighbors of this meeting and be present yourself.

Yours sincerely,

E. A. LANGFELDT.

STEWART'S SETTLEMENT.

It is also intended to organize an independent company at Stewart's Settlement to connect with Peterborough. A meeting will be called shortly, and there is every indication that it will be a successful one. Fuller particulars will be given later.

A Bad Fire Near Gore's Landing

On Friday morning last about ten o'clock a fire broke out on the farm of Mr. James Thompson, near Cold Springs, Mr. Harris of Gore's Landing, was threshing Mr. Thompson's grain with his new machine and had part of the work done when the fire broke out, and before it was put out, had burned the large barn 100x42 ft., with a wing 34x36 feet, and about 1,000 bushels of oats, 800 bushels of peas, 50 bushels of barley and 40 tons of hay, with a cutter, parts of a mower, binder and 20 hens.

A Very Delightful Entertainment

A very successful entertainment was put on at the Salvation Army Barracks last night by the junior department entitled "The King and Queen of the Harvest." The youngsters were prettily dressed in colors representing the four seasons. The king and queen occupied a position in the center and were surrounded by the four seasons. The program was well put on and greatly enjoyed by the large audience present. It was something entirely new here and by special request it will be repeated next Thursday night.

Tonight a special attraction will be at the barracks when Major and Mrs. Plant of England, the famous musicians will be present. They will give a lecture on "How I was shipwrecked off the west coast of Norway."

On Saturday night they will give a musical evening entitled, 'Around the world in a Chariot of Music and Song." Major and Mrs. Plant will play at least a dozen different instruments, including a scriptural flute, the only one of its kind in existance. They will also be present at the Sunday services.

—Mrs. C. H. Geale, Collier street, Toronto, is the guest of Mrs. Mark Burnham, Otonabee.

Extensive Alterations to The Beehive Premises will be Started Shortly

Messrs. McDermid & Jury Moving to the Corner of Charlotte and George Streets

Improvements to be Made

An important change in business circles is about to take place shortly, and will mean the shifting of several stores. Some three years ago, Mr. T. C. Elliott, of the Bee Hive, purchased the whole block in which his store is located with the intention of greatly enlarging his premises, in order to successfully handle his extensive and growing business. At that time, however, one half of the block was rented as a drug store and the lease did not expire until the fifteenth of October next. Messrs. McDermid & Jury, who have been carrying on a successful drug business next to Mr. Elliott, have secured the premises at the corner of George and Charlotte streets, which has recently been vacated by Demetrio Bros. They will move their stock and fixtures between the 10th and 15th of October to their new premises, which are now being cleaned out and overhauled, preparatory to their moving in. Messrs. McDermid & Jury have done a first-class business since coming to Peterborough, and as their new stand is one of the finest properties in the city they should increase their trade considerably.

Mr. Elliott has already awarded the contract for the alterations to his block, and just as soon as the drug store is moved out carpenters and masons will go in and start tearing down and building up. It is proposed to remove the walls on both the ground and second floors, and practically throw the whole flat into one. Down stairs the additional space will be so divided as to provide more room for displaying the heavy stock carried in the present store, and also to accommodate the stock in the knitting works store, which will be closed up. This change will be a great convenience and improvement and will render the transaction of business easier.

The second floor now devoted entirely to ladies' ready to wear goods, will remain pretty much as it is, except that the partition will be removed and the new space devoted to fancy goods, etc.

A ladies' waiting room and toilet room is one of the new attractions provided for in the plans. These are a great attraction in any store and are much appreciated by the patrons. Mr. Elliott proposes to make them modern and comfortable. In addition room will be provided as a class room for the free fancy work course in February.

Later on, or soon after the Christmas trade is over an elevator will be put in and the third floor converted into show rooms for all kinds of children's and infants wearing apparel. When Mr. Elliott has completed his plans, Peterborough's leading fancy goods' store will be one of the largest and most up-to-date in this province.

Another False Alarm Yesterday

Firemen Had a Long Hot Run in the Afternoon

The fire brigade had a belly run yesterday afternoon. The chief sent a man out to test all the boxes, and when he sent in the alarm from box 35, the thing stuck, and No. 15 was sounded at the fire hall. The brigade immediately turned out and made a great run to that locality where Chief Howard discovered the mistake. While there No. 45 was sounded, and the firemen hurried back in answer to the new call, but it was caused by the man working at No. 35, and the brigade had their run for nothing. The chief, however, stated that he would take no chances on a false alarm and would respond every time.

Death from Heart Disease

A Case of Neglecting a Weak Heart and Tired Nerves.

If your heart flutters, be careful. An attack is liable to come on at any time. Excitement, over-exertion or emotion may cause it.

If blood rushes to the head, if palpitation and short breath are noticeable, there's cause for alarm.

Sad Case of Young Girl Turned Away

Is Seriously Ill and Her Mother Turned Her Out of the House

A particularly distressing case was brought to the attention of the Charity Board yesterday morning. Mr. Miller looked into the case and found a girl about 20 years of age who is suffering from a fatal disease turned away from her home by her mother. The girl was put outdoors with no place to go and no means to provide for herself. She has relatives in the city, and they have been doing all they can but their means are limited and the charity board will be called upon to take some action. It is a shame to have an invalid girl turned out by her own mother, and refused any assistance from her. No doubt the people of Peterborough will make provision for this young lady.

The Y.M.C.A. Started the Fall Campaign for New Members

Two enthusiastic meetings were held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, when it was decided to put on a fall campaign for new members. It will be a short one but will be sharp and effective. It is proposed to secure in three days 150 new senior members, starting on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and last until Thursday night at 10 o'clock when the last returns must be handed in.

The plan proposed and being carried out is a team competition. Three teams were selected and each will have fifteen men, or as many more as desired up to 25. These are already selected and will be found below.

The conditions are as follows;—

No returns shall be counted if brought in before Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Any member whose membership has expired or will expire during September or October will be counted as a renewal. If it does not expire until after Oct. 31st. it shall not be counted in this campaign.

Only those who have passed their 18th birthday shall be counted senior members.

Each dollar received from new members shall count two points.

Each dollar from renewals shall count one point.

The contest closes sharp at 10 o'clock Thursday night, Oct. 1st.

The winning team shall be given complimentary tickets to a members' banquet to be given later.

Each individual bringing in five or more members will be given a complimentary ticket.

The individual bringing in the largest number of members (with a minimum of 10) will receive a year's extension to his membership.

The teams are as follows;

W. McLAREN, Captain.

Geo. Hamen, E. R. Shirley, Percy McFadden, Charles, Thorpe, Thomas Walker, Chas. Causey, P. Redgrave, Harry Flowers, Reg. Greenland, N. Greenhalgh, Will Common, W. H. Frost, Geo. Hurtubise, Lincoln Bruce.

GEO. MARTIN, Captain.

Stanley Madill, Chester Frowde, J. Evans, P. Wallace, G. Carter, B. Gillespie, R. M. McTarrell, A. M. Stabler, D. H. Downie, E. V. Warne, E. Sanderson, Ray Best, W. O. Campbell, Harry Cressman.

FRED REID, Captain.

D. B. McCrae, C. G. Graham, Ford Turner, Roland Common, E. G. Bruce, J. D. Clarke, Burt Miller, Bert. T. Huston, R. F. McWilliams, Stanley Pringle, Ernie Gibson, A. Davenport, Stanley Laing, E. A. Rose.

BOYS' CAMPAIGN.

A similar campaign has been arranged for the boys' department. The rules and conditions are identical. Three teams will be in the field with Mitchell Hart, Fred Hall and Max Dobbin as the leaders. It is proposed to make this year the banner years among the boys. The war cry will be "Wanted 100 Boys." A meeting will be held Saturday night when all the team members are requested to report.

Harvest Home Festival At All Saints' Church

The Harvest Home services in All Saints' church, were very successful and very enjoyable. The cosy little edifice was artistically decorated with the products of the field and orchard and added much to the appearance of the church. The music rendered by the choir was most appropriate and was rendered with feeling and expression. Miss Rose Mulholland took the soprano solo in the anthem very acceptably.

Rev. Wm. Major was assisted by Rev. Mr. Lord of Apsley, and Rural Dean Rev. Dr. Langfeldt of St. Luke's church, who was also the special preacher for the occasion.

His sermon was full of interest, and was listened to with pleasure by the large congregation. He took as his text, "The joy of the Lord is your strength." He pointed out the necessity of joy being characteristic of the Christian life. He produced four elements of joy, viz.

"Dependance upon God's word."

"The assurance of forgiveness of sins."

"The consciousness of the efficiency and the greatness of Christ."

"The knowledge that Christ had overcome the world."

He pointed out the absolute necessity of showing our joy and especially in the Christian life.

Walter Jayes and Harry Burridge will be on the Peterborough Line-Up

The championship ball game at Riverside Park tomorrow afternoon will be the greatest ever seen here. Besides the favorite Harry Burridge who played a star game with Youngstown, Ohio, last season, the Youngstown, Ohio, this season, the team will be greatly strengthened by Walter Jayes, of the Wilmington club, champions of the Virginian State League this year. Mr. Jayes is in the city for a few days and Burridge has secured his services.

Jayes holds the highest average on his team, both in fielding and batting. His batting average is 326 and he has only had one error registered against him this season. Burridge and Jayes of the American league teams will show the fans a few new tricks in baseball, and their presence on the line-up will be a great strength to the team.

Carney Burns, who is in Toronto, will be back on Saturday with the rest of the players. The line-up will be picked from Jayes, Burridge, Burns, Murphy, Clements, Hawkins, Anderson, Maddocks, Edmunds, Lawson and Shea.

With this bunch on the field, Peterborough should have no trouble in winning the game from St. Andrew's of Toronto, although the latter will bring a very strong team.

Cananian Crew Four Days Foodless While Ocean Billows Swept Over

London, Sept. 24.—The crew of the Canadian schooner Granada, which were foundered in mid-ocean, were rescued by the Manchester Spinner. The crew were sent to London. The captain, mate and cook being American citizens the Board of Trade refused to send them to the States. The American consul also refused, because they had sailed under the British flag, but finally the American Society sent them back home.

20 STUDENT MISSIONARIES.

London, Sept. 24.—Thirty-nine student missionaries selected by Rev. Dr. Carmichael of Winnipeg, sailed for Canada from Glasgow. Prior to the embarkation, a great valedictory service was held at Glasgow. Representatives of the Established and United Free Churches were present. Among the speakers were Rev. Dr. Robbins, military chaplain, formerly of Canada, who made the arrangements, and accompanied the party to Greenock.

Mr. Jolliffe's was Well Received

Mr. Norman Jolliffe sang at a concert at Bowmanville on fair night, and in this connection the Bowmanville Statesman says;

Mr. Norman Jolliffe, a baritone soloist of Toronto, and a former well-known and popular singer of this town, was the leading artist on the program. His solos were exceedingly well sung and he received an encore to every number. The crowning number was considered to be "The Watch" in which he seemed to rise to the occasion with wonderful power and excellent expression.

—Mrs. F. McAuliffe is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. McCarthy, 195 Lake street. She will leave for her home in New York City, on October 1st.

Newark Protests

Newark, N.J., Sept. 25.—Baltimore's claim to the Eastern League championship was jeopardized today by the action of Manager Stallings of the Newark Club, who protested four games won by the Orioles in Rochester last August in which Catis played.

Catis, in the spring, was farmed out to Wilmington, and was later suspended by the club. According to Stallings' protest, Catis was under suspension when he played in these games, and was therefore ineligible to play with the Orioles.

Manager Stallings sent his protest to President Powers today, and it will be up to the Board of Directors of the Eastern League to decide the case.

According to the records, Stalling is correct in his contention, and, if baseball law is adhered to, it will be up to the league to throw out the four games in question.

To understand the situation exactly, the final standing of the first three clubs must be taken into consideration. It is as follows;

	Won	Lost.	P.C.
Baltimore	83	57	.593
Providence	79	57	.581
Newark	79	57	.581

It will be seen that should the Stallings protest be carried, it would make all three clubs tied for the championship. However, in view of past experiences with the Board of Directors of the Eastern League, it would not be at all surprising if he was turned down in decisive fashion.

"Three Little Maids"

"Three Little Maids," which was presented at the opera house last evening was certainly one of, if not the best comic operas ever presented in a Peterborough play house. From the time the curtain rose first, till the end of the third and last act, the entire audience was in a continual fit of laughter. Thirty well trained, refined players, represented the troupe and certainly great credit is due to the management of the opera house for putting before the public such a well balanced comic opera. The next attraction at the Grand will be "A Fair of Country Kids," which will be presented on Saturday, matinee and night, and no doubt a large crowd will be present to witness another excellent play which has proved a success in the last two years in the larger cities.

SMALL HOLDINGS IN ENGLAND

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 300,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, as far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment said that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of their occupation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allotees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

ARE WE LOSING GRIT?

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtue? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he argues forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home, for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in fields, mines, factories, ships. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of inter-oceanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of cities and slums, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute all modern progress to the superior few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the teacher, the engineer, the physician, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

Fenelon Falls

Fenelon Falls, Sept. 24.—Early on Sunday morning last a thief visited Mr. F. McDougall's butcher shop here. For his pains he received only 10c. in cash, but was at liberty to help himself to the choicest of meat, which he did. The entrance was effected by taking off the screen door on Cogbourne street. Mr. McDougall should follow Mark Twain's example and post a notice to the effect that he has only ten cents in the till, for it is hardly fair to put a person to the trouble of taking off a screen door for the paltry sum of ten cents and enough meat for a meal.

Mr. P. J. Wright has begun work on his new dwelling on Queen street, on Fidler's hill. The foundation will be of cement, with frame superstructure and brick veneer, and will no doubt be one of the finest dwellings in town.

Mr. L. Deyman has had his residence on Louise street, newly painted and new cement walks laid around it, and will finish it by adding a verandah.

We can't help crowing over our new cement walks, and if the residents desire their names placed in the cement opposite their doorways, all they have to do is to notify the C.O.P., who has been acting as superintendent of the walks that have been laid. We cannot see any particular harm in having your name placed in front of your residence if you so desire, although there are plenty of people who would strenuously object to having it done.

Miss Rosella Jinkin, after spending a couple of weeks with friends in Verulam, left this Monday for St. Louis, where she is taking a course in the training school for nurses in connection with the General hospital there.

Mr. Bert Robson spent Sunday at his home here.

Our citizens are urged to decorate for the fair, which will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, 6th and 7th October.

Great interest centers about the coming election, owing that one of the candidates is a resident of our own town, but the ladies of Fenelon Falls will wait until after the nomination meetings of Wednesday and Thursday (to discuss the election, as the subject at present just now to them is the hall and winter hat.

The welcomed shower of rain which fell last Friday evening has brightened the face of nature and makes us all feel as if we are in a different world. A good deal of smoke still hangs in the air, but no doubt it will take some days for it to clear away, fires which were doing considerable harm in the surrounding country have been extinguished. The fall ploughing, which had to be stopped, will be resumed and water for the cattle more easily secured.

The Fenelon Falls Council are looking ahead, and will have about six hundred loads of the rocks and stones (which are being taken out of the bottom of the canal piled away for future use in making walks, etc. In this way considerable money can be saved, as the wagons will be loaded direct from the dredge, and all that will be necessary is to pile it away, whereas if the stone had to be brought from the surrounding country, the cost would be very much increased.

Miss Norah Wilson and Miss Ethel Long left on Tuesday last to attend Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby.

The Sabbath school of St. Andrew's church will hold their Children's Day service next Sunday morning, when it is hoped that all the children and parents will be in attendance.

Newark Protests

Newark, N.J., Sept. 25.—Baltimore's claim to the Eastern League championship was jeopardized today by the action of Manager Stallings of the Newark Club, who protested four games won by the Orioles in Rochester last August in which Oatis played.

Oatis, in the spring, was farmed out to Wilmington, and was later suspended by the club. According to Stallings' protest, Oatis was under suspension when he played in these games, and was therefore ineligible to play with the Orioles.

(Manager Stallings sent his protest to President Powers today, and it will be up to the Board of Directors of the Eastern League to decide the case.

According to the records, Stalling is correct in his contention, and, if baseball law is adhered to, it will be up to the league to throw out the four games in question.

To understand the situation exactly, the final standing of the first three clubs must be taken into consideration. It is as follows:

	Won	Lost.	P.C.
Baltimore	83	57	.593
Providence	79	57	.581
Newark	79	57	.581

It will be seen that should the Stallings protest be carried, it would make all three clubs tied for the championship. However, in view of past experiences with the Board of Directors of the Eastern League, it would not be at all surprising if he was turned down in decisive fashion.

A clever, popular Candy Cold Cure Tablet—called Preventics—is being dispensed by druggists everywhere. In a few hours, Preventics are said to break any cold—completely. And Preventics, being so safe and toothsome, are very fine for children. No Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh nor sickening. Box of 48—25c. Sold by all dealers.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Our remarks on the opinion expressed by many of our American contemporaries, in regard to the feeling of the people of Australia as shown by the welcome accorded by them to the United States Fleet, have speedily been shown to be accurate. It scarcely needed the despatch of the Governor of Victoria, speaking on behalf of his ministers, to the Secretary for the Colonies, to make it apparent that the events in connection with the visit of the American vessels, so far from being an evidence of any weakening of the ties between that State and the Empire were really a proof to the contrary. Mr. Deakin, the Premier of the Commonwealth, also issued a statement to a similar effect. Apparently the views expressed in the American newspapers, and which were cabled to Australia, caused great surprise and not a little indignation there, or there would not have been official cognizance taken of the matter in the manner we have mentioned.

Our kinsmen at the Antipodes are evidently not familiar with the sensational methods of American journalism or of the reckless manner in which views and opinions are ascribed to others without the least authority or foundation. In no part of the British Empire is the sentiment of loyalty to that great political fabric stronger than in Australia and New Zealand. It rests not merely on blood relationship and kinship, but also on a complete realization of the fact that under no other political arrangement yet devised could the comparatively small population in those lands have the same entire control of their own domestic affairs, while enjoying all the security and the prestige among the nations of the earth which they possess as constituting part of the great-

A imperial aggregation on the face of the globe—one that is supreme on the ocean and both able and willing to afford adequate protection to the people of the most remote territory under the British flag. So deeply do the Australians appreciate the security and protection that the British Navy affords them, that they are continually seeking some plan by which they can give practical expression to this recognition of the actual situation in the way of bearing some portion of the expenditure by the maintenance of the navy, and thereby relieve the taxpayers of the United Kingdom on whom the whole burden falls at the present time.

While we cannot but deprecate the circulation of such erroneous ideas as those expressed in the American press on the reception given the United States Fleet in Australian waters, the incident has had the result of bringing forth a decisive protest from those most concerned in the indictment, and of affording them an opportunity though their official representatives of testifying to their loyalty to the imperial tie and to their determination to maintain a connection which is based on mutual esteem and sentiments common to all the British communities.

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most attractive. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless macadam road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could be run without horses with all the trouble some adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for those vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea Bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Even the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1905 the motor-car works stock was quoted at close on 600 per cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turin and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing craze, a donkey engine was introduced under the name of "Fabrica Italiano Automobili Torino," the initials of which spell "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of 800,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $1,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,000 more; but in 1902 it made a gain of some $12,000, and in the next year it gained $18,365. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 5 per cent. and in 1905 the net profit was shown to be $427,236, and it paid a 20 per cent dividend.

This great prosperity led on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divided the old shares of $40 into 8 new shares of $5. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1905, they were quoted worth $240, at the end of Jan., 1906, the quotation was $320 per share, at the end of February $340, and at the end of March $460. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $460 per share, or 92 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinians bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $600 and upward." At this juncture the directors, in the belief that a share of $460 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $2 (10 lire); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (100 lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound upidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1906 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,067,000, a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $160,000, which had been inflated to $1,800,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 400 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 66 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 56 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car accessories, with a nominal capital of $28,222,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were jammed full of unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Itala" make, hard hit by the crisis, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,134,600, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past; and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.64, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1906, stood at $180, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $82, in August to $40, in October to $16, in April, 1908, to $8, in May to $6.80 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $20. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fraudulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 1906, which showed a net profit of $1,067,416. The rival manufactories, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock Exchange madness, are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all crises which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars; and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapses.

It's a pity when sick ones drag the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak Stomach means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure as soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Buy the property.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, aiding by right that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For Stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

"ALL DEALERS"

A MOTHER'S HELPER.

Girls Who Assist in the Small Household Duties.

Most of the little things that a girl can attend to are the tasks which her mother has in mind, but is too busy to carry out. She can see that the house plants are watered every day, and she can cut a blossom now and then for the table. She can plant a few pansy roots in one of her candy boxes, lined with oil paper, and set it on a small platter in the middle of the dining table for a centerpiece.

She can remove the spots that her mother is too busy to take out of the tablecloth between launderings by putting a few drops of hot or cold water, as the case may require, on them. She can keep a little parsley bed of her own, so that meats and vegetables can come to the table with a fresh garnish.

Keeping the rugs in the living room straight can be one of her tasks; also seeing that the window shades are all raised to the same height. When the furniture gets a slight scar she can rub it off with beeswax, a trick which keeps furniture fresh, but which her mother may not have time for.

She can see that the front door plate, the electric light switches and the door-knobs all over the house are kept polished. The smooches on mirrors can be rubbed off with a piece of crumpled tissue paper.

She can make a pretty wastebasket for the living room or any room that needs one out of strong cardboard covered with wall paper or chints, and she can see that the younger children use it. Pieces of her cotton dresses she can make into covers for the sofa pillows which will be tossed about in the hammock and on the porch this summer.

Mothers and fathers like to see their daughters appear domestic in these days, when girls have so many outside interests, and any girl can charm her father by wearing a tiny white apron around the house. It needs be only a man's handkerchief with ribbon strings, but it will please her father and protect her dress. Wearing an apron is only one way of appearing freshly laundered and bright, which is the biggest part of being a real ornament to one's home.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Warm salad oil will relieve earache.

Always try to pass at least one hour a day in the open air.

Never let a child or infant sleep in the room with a sick person.

Never use on the face a wash rag which is not scalded each day.

Do not think that scrubbing will injure your complexion, for it will not.

Cocoa butter will smooth the rough elbows, but it must be persistently used.

Quickly apply raw egg to a cut. It will allay the pain and quickly heal the wound.

If possible have children sleep in darkened rooms, as a light is bad both for eyes and nerves.

The Example of Birds.

Some birds are typical examples of human attributes. The dove symbolizes innocence, and the eagle represents majesty, but the robin redbreast teaches the best lesson of all, for he sings as joyously in the dark, dreary winter days, when the earth is frost bound and snow covered, as in pleasant summer days, when food is plentiful and life is merry. Thus in his humble way he teaches the lesson of patience and gratitude.—Home Notes.

The Adored One.

He is a confirmed bachelor. In fact, his attitude toward women is almost that of a misogynist. His particular bete noire is a new acquaintance of his sister, Miss Blank.

He met her in the street the other day and, seeing no way out of it, stopped and spoke to her. She saw how he was fidgeting to get away and said:

"You seem very preoccupied. Ah, I know! You are thinking of the one you adore."

"I adore no one," was his stiff rejoinder.

"You can't deceive me. I know you are deeply in love. Besides, your sister showed me a photo of the object of your devotion only last night. It isn't a type I admire. But, there, every one to his taste. I won't tell any one. Goodby."

And before he could reply she was gone.

When he reached home he said to his sister:

"What girl's photo did you show Miss Blank last night?"

Then it dawned upon him what Miss Blank was driving at.—London Scraps.

Corrected.

A little girl in Rhode Island, the daughter of a clergyman, once sat at the table with a bishop who was visiting her father.

When they had finished she observed that he did not fold his napkin. Discerned, she said:

"We always fold our napkins here."

"Yes, my dear," said the bishop. "But that is because you use them again. In the case of a visitor you don't do that."

"Oh, yes, we do," said the little girl.—New York Life.

A Cure For Despondency.

A large, fleshy man with whiskers told me of a sovereign cure for despondency the other day. He had a number of girls in his employ, among them one that he knew was in struggling circumstances and supporting a sick mother on a none too healthy salary. She had come into the store and laid her purse and somber widow hat on the counter while she did something about the place. The large fleshy man got between her and the purse, and when she was not looking he slipped a five dollar bill into it and moved unconsciously about his business. In the afternoon he noticed that she had a red spot in each cheek, and she was heard asking other girls if they believed in fairies. She never solved the mystery—it was two years ago—and never will unless she reads this. But the five dollar bill was very useful in its little way, and the large despondent man felt so good for two whole days that he hip-hopped on the sidewalk on his way home.—Minneapolis Journal.

Living on Next to Nothing.

Most people do not need the evidence of recently published statistics to prove to them that it costs more to live in London than it once did. But it is doubtful if any Londoner now living was ever able to do it on £30 a year, as Boswell's poor Irish painter did. "He allowed £10 for clothes and linen. He said a man might live in a garret at 18 pence a week. Few people would inquire where he lived, and if they did it was easy to say, 'Sir, I am to be found at such a place.' By spending threepence at a coffee house he might be for some hours a day in very good company. He might dine for sixpence, breakfast on bread and milk for a penny and do without supper." Of course expenses can always be reduced to a minimum by doing without things. The question is, Which of our various expenses is unessential? Boswell's Irishman hinted at one. "On clean shirt days he went abroad and paid visits," says his ingenious chronicler.—London Chronicle.

A Rather Novel Complaint.

An English traveler once met a companion sitting in a state of the most woeful despair and apparently near the last agonies by the side of one of the mountain lakes of Switzerland. He inquired the cause of his sufferings. "Oh," said the latter, "I was very hot and thirsty and took a large draft of the clear water of the lake and then sat down on this stone to consult my guidebook. To my astonishment, I found that the water of this lake is very poisonous! Oh, I am a gone man; I feel it running all over me. I have only a few minutes to live! Remember me to"—

"Let me see the guidebook," said his friend. Turning to the passage, he found, "L'eau du lac est bien poisonneuse" (The water of this lake abounds in fish).

"Is that the meaning of it?"

"Certainly."

The dying man looked up with a radiant countenance. "What would have become of you," said his friend, "if I had not met you?"

"I should have died of imperfect knowledge of the French language."

A Great Man's Simple Speech.

I was lately told a delightful story of a great statesman staying with a humble and anxious host who had invited a party of simple and unimportant people to meet the great man. The statesman came in late for dinner and was introduced to the party. He made a series of old fashioned bows in all directions, but no one felt in a position to offer any observations. The great man at the conclusion of the ceremony turned to his host and said in tones that had often thrilled a listening senate: "What very convex lent jugs you have in your bedrooms. They pour well." The social frost broke up, the company was delighted to find that the great man was interested in mundane matters of a kind on which every one might be permitted to have an opinion, and the conversation, starting from the humblest conveniences of daily life, melted insensibly into more liberal subjects.—Arthur C. Benson in Putnam's and the Reader.

An American Admirer.

In a small way an American figures in the journal kept by Rosalie Lamorliere during the revolutionary days of 1793 in France and published under the title, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

Rosalie Lamorliere, a girl of Picardy, was servant to the queen in the conciergerie. "One day," Rosalie has recorded, "M. de Saint Leger, the American, who was coming from the register's office, noticed that I was carrying a glass half filled with water.

"'Did the queen drink the water that has gone from the glass?' he asked.

"I answered that she did.

"With a quick gesture he uncovered his head and drank the water that remained with every indication of respect and pleasure."

Missed a Chance.

"But, Tommy," said his mother, "you asked for two cakes and I gave them to you. Aren't you satisfied?"

"No, I ain't," growled Tommy. "You was so easy I'm kickin' meself now 'cause I didn't ask fur four."—Philadelphia Press.

Driven to Drink.

Artist—My next picture at the academy will be entitled "Driven to Drink."

His Friend—Ah, some powerful portrayal of baffled passion, I suppose?

Artist—Oh, no; it's a horse approaching her a water trough!

Still Possible.

Clara—When Tom proposed to me he admitted that he had more money than brains.

Maude—Well, I've no reason to doubt it, although I understand he hasn't a dollar to his name.

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-on's never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes, by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this Remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. Sold by all dealers.

The Midget Snakes.

"I see by your paper," says a correspondent, "that you want to find a man who can tell a snake story with the sound of originality to it. Here it is: Nearly forty years ago in the woods of Indiana I captured three snakes, each less than three and one-fourth inches in length, a combined length of less than ten inches, a little longer and a little larger in the middle than an old fashioned wool darning needle. Although these snakes were so small they would crawl around with their heads up and dart out their tongues like larger snakes, I put these reptiles in an eight ounce bottle, and they had plenty of room to crawl around on the bottom of it without crowding. These were not the kind of snakes generally seen in bottles, but genuine snakes. Among those who saw them was a minister of the gospel, and he had not been taking anything to make him see snakes either."—Emporia Gazette.

The Pirates.

The Chicago News fails to name the hero of this story, but has it that the visitor to the home of a well known Hoosier State author found his three youngsters romping in the hallway.

"What are you playing, boys?" he inquired.

"We are playing pirates," elucidated the smallest.

"Pirates? Why, how can you play pirates in Indiana? There are no seas bordering on this state."

"Oh, we don't need any seas. We are literary pirates, like pa."

And five minutes later a chorus of yells from behind the barn told that the hand that wields the pen can also wield the shingle.

Outside of His Practice.

"All that is the matter with you, sir," said the eminent physician after a thorough examination, "is lack of nutrition. You don't eat enough."

"I eat all I can hold, doctor," said the attenuated caller.

"Then you need to have your capacity enlarged, and that's a case for a surgeon. Five dollars, please. Good morning."—Chicago Tribune.

Overstudy.

Books are pleasant, but if by being overstudious we impair our health and spoil our good humor, two of the best pieces we have, let us give it over. I, for my part, am one of those who think that no fruit derived from them can recompense so great a loss.—Montaigne.

HIS SERVICES.

What Became of All the Bills He Introduced in Congress.

"Yes, my fellow citizens," said the political candidate, "if you have paid any attention to the work of congress you will have noticed that during the past session I introduced twenty-two bills, each of which was intended to benefit this community. I stand before you today with the proud consciousness of having served you faithfully and to the best of my ability. Those twenty-two bills would, if they had been passed, have made this one of the most favored districts on God's green earth, and"—

"Oh," yelled a man in the gallery, "we know you introduced 'em, all right, but what happened to 'em after that?"

"Gentlemen, I appeal to your sense of honor. Do you consider it fair that I should be interrupted in this manner? Is it right that I should"—

"There ain't no harm in answerin' the question, is there?" asked another of the statesman's hearers.

"Well, sir, I will tell you what became of those bills, my fellow citizens. Every one of them was printed in the Congressional Record, where, if you will look over the files, you may find them today. But in revert to the sad question, gentlemen, I do not hesitate to promise that no man living in this, the most splendid district in our grand old state, shall appeal to me in vain if you shall deem it best to send me back to Washington, where I have served you with such signal ability."

The Mighty Amazon.

The estimated length of the Amazon from its source in the Andes to where it debouches in a mouth forty miles wide into the Atlantic is 4,000 miles. The story is told of a wrecked vessel which was drifting, with her crew on board suffering intense torment for lack of fresh water, which entered the mouth of the Amazon and the sufferers could have had fresh water simply by putting a bucket over the side, but did not know where they were until they got in sight of the land. The mighty river, up which the tide goes 600 miles, is known in the upper part of its course near the Andes as the Maranon, then in the middle course, from Tabatinga to the mouth of its chief affluent, the Rio Negro, as the Solimoes, while for the rest of its course its name is Amazonas or Amazon. A thousand miles from the sea it is four miles in width. Vast and often impassable forests line most of its banks.

A Simple Salad.

Cabbage scorned as piebeian takes on an air as a salad—not cold slaw or hot slaw, but a crisp, coolly mixed salad with French dressing.

Cut the cabbage with fine grater and put it in ice water for an hour before serving. Dry on a clean napkin and cover with a highly seasoned French dressing about ten minutes before serving.

If a clove of garlic is rubbed over the bowl in which the dressing is made, the flavor is much improved for many persons.

While one would not serve this salad at a formal meal, it makes an appetizing lunch dish.

A Pan Broil.

When it is not convenient to open the lid of a stove, as on ironing day, a beefsteak or chop can be given a pan broil.

This is not frying, as many persons think, since not a particle of grease is used.

Have the pan very hot. Put the meat in it and turn almost immediately to the other side until seared. Keep turning the meat occasionally till it is done, though this need not be quite so often as when the steak is over live coals.

News in Brief

Montreal, Sept. 21.—F. C. T. O'Hara, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, has, it is believed, unearthed the greatest fraud yet brought to light in connection with the entry to Canada of Chinese.

About a year ago a number of Chinese began to arrive at Halifax in possession of certificates signed at the Chinese Legation at Mexico City describing them as merchants.

When the present season of navigation opened, Chinese bearing similar certificates commenced to arrive in Montreal. The sudden invasion of Canada from the East created a good deal of suspicion amongst the officials, and the matter was reported to Ottawa. While the officials were almost certain a fraud was being perpetrated on the department, they had no absolute proof. From information received, the department finally became convinced that a syndicate had undertaken to land the Chinese in Canada, and had been able by false representations to secure the necessary certificates from the Chinese Legation at Mexico City.

There were a number of complications which amused the suspicions of the Canadian officials, in the first place, all the new arrivals admitted that they had been in Mexico only a few months, and all had the same story to tell. Last business was dull in Mexico and they had decided to come to Canada to open up here.

It is estimated that since the fraud commenced a year ago the Government has lost $150,000 in poll tax, which means that 300 Chinese have entered as merchants, thereby escaping the poll tax of $500, which the ordinary Celestial must pay.

Steps have been taken to prevent any repetition of the fraud.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—A frightful case of suffering was brought to the attention of the police this morning in the person of Maran Baylick, a Galician. Baylick, who is 37 years of age came to Montreal from Sydney, N. S., in a fearfully emaciated condition, being in the last stages of tuberculosis. The man, who is apparently of a fine disposition, and economical, had saved up $50, and he hoped here to find a resting-place in one of the hospitals. On arriving in the city he learned that there was no place for a tuberculosis patient, and he wandered about from place to place until last evening, when he went to the police and told them he had not had anything to eat for two days. The man is literally skin and bone, and the police doctor states that in all probability he cannot live over fifteen days. In Nova Scotia he worked in the mines until he could work no longer, and then concluded the best thing he could do was to come to the metropolis of Canada in the hope, which was vain, of being taken care of. The man is at present in jail. Baylick's people live in Karochoff, Galicia.

Clean Up Inside

Blood and System Cleansing in the Spring Makes Good Health all Summer.

In spite of all your careful habits, its safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pale or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely bilious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years, says W. B. Wangster, of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite suffered from indigestion and gas, had some pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt despondent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They suited me exactly. In one week I felt like new, I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clean all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand tonic medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a perfect spring medicine; they destroy germs and poisons of every description and strength whereby the system rallies and the patient quickly enjoys the blessings of Perfect Health. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills—to-day—35c. at all dealers.

Clothes Burned

Jas. Kelman, an employe of the Bell Telephone Co., in Lindsay, was burned by a gasoline fire Wednesday. The accident occurred through the turning of a blow torch too high, the result being that the gasoline caught fire and Kelman's clothes as well as his flesh were burned. He worked in Peterborough for the Machine Telephone Co. last winter.

Fruit Social

The Cold Springs Union Sunday School of Otonabee, held a fruit social and concert Wednesday night in their new hall, which proved a success. About one hundred and twenty-five were present, the proceeds going towards the decorating of the hall. The program was a delightful one. Mr. J. Johns, of Peterborough, contributed several selections which were of a particularly interesting character, and highly appreciated. Mr. Cooper, organ tuner, of Peterborough, gave a number of humorous songs and recitations, for which he was given a warm reception. Mr. Wasson Hanbidge sang splendidly two solos. The concert and social was altogether a success and assisted much towards the completion and adornment of the new hall.

Bush Fires

The smoke from bush fires is very dense along the G.T.R. in the neighborhood of Kirkfield. A gentleman who has recently been traveling in that district states that in many places the black muck has been burned down to the marl and that it is practically impossible to extinguish it. The smoke from this black muck, as it is called, is very heavy, and spreads over the whole country. It is said that these burning bush a make a very fine sight in the evening when the rest of the country has been overspread with the pall of night.

Cured Painful Irregularities

Strong Testimony from a Lady Resident of Clarksburg. Proving that Ferrozone Surpasses all Other Remedies

The health of many women is constantly imperilled through failure of certain organs to work according to nature's requirements.

Where this condition occurs there is no safer remedy to employ than Ferrozone, which has a specific action in female troubles.

Not only does it act directly on the organs, ensuring regularity and freedom from pain, but by forming rich red blood fortifies the system against weakening drains.

FERROZONE MAKES STRONG WOMEN.

Ferrozone possesses a volume of merit totally absent in the ordinary medicine, and its superiority is proclaimed by thousands of women it has restored to vigorous health. From Mrs. F. G. Caldwell comes the following endorsement, written from her home in Clarksburg: "I went through a most trying experience with what is commonly known as 'Female Trouble.' It isn't necessary to state my symptoms, but I suffered a great deal. My health was well nigh ruined, and I got into such a condition that I couldn't even sleep. I was dreadfully nervous, weak and pale. Different prescriptions were recommended and I tried them. But Ferrozone was the first to help. I improved steadily under Ferrozone, and normal conditions were finally established. I gained weight, my color and spirits improved, and my former health was restored. Ferrozone cured me, and with a full heart I recommend this good medicine to all other women."

Beware of imitations—don't allow a druggist to palm off anything else for Ferrozone, which costs 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50 at all dealers.

Voters' List, 1908

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in Sections 8 and 9 of the Ontario Voters' List Act, the copies required by said sections to be so transmitted or delivered of the list made pursuant to said Act, of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in the said Municipality at election for members of the Legislative Assembly and at Municipal Elections, and that the said list was first posted up in the Clerk's Office in the City of Peterborough, on Monday, September 14th, 1908, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine said list, and, if any omissions or any other errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said errors corrected according to law.

F. J. BELL,
Clerk of the Township of Smith
Dated, September 14th, 1908.

A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery," in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherry-bark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure many severe, obstinate, hang-on chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles and chronic hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hang-on coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine:

"In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach), it is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric (stomach) acidity."

"Golden Medical Discovery" enriches and purifies the blood curing blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings and old sores or ulcers.

Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the native medicinal roots composing this wonderful medicine. There is no alcohol in it.

RUGBY

Last evening the members of the P. C. I. Rugby team turned out under the supervision of Dr. A. W. MacPherson, who has taken a deep interest in the sporting welfare of the pupils this year. A large number were on hand to "dig in" including:—Hall, Anderson, Leahy, Quinlan, Fortye, Ackman, Lewis, Kerr, O'Brien, Corkery, Conroy, Gibson, Collins, Elcome and others outside the school.

The pupils intend forming a team in the near future and no doubt with the form each one displayed last night they will make it hot for the teams they will go up against this season.

A Grand Meeting Held in Toronto

Mr. T. E. Bradburn Had Seat on the Platform—Great Crowd Present

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P. was one of the many Conservative M.P.P.'s who occupied seats on the platform at the Borden meeting in Toronto on Wednesday. It stated that it was the largest and the grandest political gathering he ever had the privilege of attending. The real enthusiasm displayed was magnificent, and the Conservative party of that good town will surely do again what it has always done before, viz., send a solid delegation to Ottawa to support Mr. Borden.

The County Bridges

One of the channels of outlay in so far as the County of Peterborough is concerned, that has been plugged up, so to speak for all time to come, is the maintenance and operation of the swing portions of the county bridges. For years past there was a drain upon the county treasury of upwards of $2,500 per annum for the maintenance and operation of the swings of these bridges. Bridge-tenders had to be maintained at Bensfort Bridge, Wallace's Point Bridge, the Peterborough Locks Bridge, Chemong Bridge and Jannis' Narrows. Repairs had to be made to the swings each year, and a signal light, which used a certain amount of oil had to be maintained throughout the season of navigation. It is safe, therefore, in saying that $2,500 was paid out annually by the county in this respect. While the idea of having the maintenance and operation of the swings of these bridges transferred to the Dominion Government may have been conceived before the present government assumed the reins of office, the County authorities had to content themselves with a hope that some day their dream might be realized. The matter was brought to the attention of the present government at Ottawa, and they considered the matter favorably.

The government yielded, and today the maintenance and operation of the swings of these bridges is looked after by the Dominion Government and the County of Peterborough is benefitted to the extent of $2,500 or more, per years for all time to come. More than that, the Dominion Government has agreed to assume the cost of the construction of all new swings.

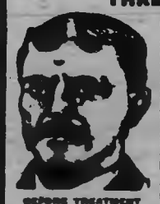
Conservatives as well as Liberals must admit that the present Dominion Government has done well by the County of Peterborough. It remains for the County of Peterborough to do well by the present Dominion Government, by returning Hon. J. R. Stratton, as a supporter of that administration.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. The various organs become natural and manly. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. We invite all the afflicted to consult us confidentially and free of charge. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard-earned dollars.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.



BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to St. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at St. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope 'Tender for Construction', will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 28th day of September, 1908, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Vauquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 186.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Fraquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 160 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to copy upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000.

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only materials, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,
F. H. RYAN,
Secretary.

A New Presbyterian Church to be Built in the South Ward

Congregation of Knox Church Propose to Start Campaign this Year

Built South of the Present Site

New churches in the south end of the city are springing up in all directions. There are the new Catholic church, St. James Methodist church and the Park street Baptist church, all handsome structures, which will add greatly to the attractiveness of that rapidly growing section of the city. But still another large new edifice will be started next year, and it will not take a back seat to any of the new ones going up this year.

The people of Knox Presbyterian church have been doing a great work and are increasing their numbers very fast. The present church is no longer large enough nor is it suitable to carry on the work properly. It is for that reason proposed to erect a new structure, and a campaign to raise the necessary funds will be started during the coming winter. It would have been started this year had it not been for the depression in the times and the unsatisfactory condition of business. But things are looking brighter and the congregation is more encouraged.

What the new building will cost has not been determined, but the church will be a large one and a substantial one as well as attractive structure. It will probably run up to $30,000 or more. The site will be on the present property, and just south of the building now used, and when completed the old church will be used entirely for Sunday school work and as a lecture hall. The Presbyterians in the south ward are getting stronger every year and a great future is open to them.

The Ladies' Aid of Knox Church Raised Fifty-Two Dollars

The Ladies' Aid Society of Knox church yesterday made their payment of one-third the cost of the new organ, viz., $52. The ladies volunteered to raise $50 for this purpose and when the boxes were opened at the meeting on Thursday, it was found $52 had been raised. This is very encouraging and the ladies deserve credit.

Must Make a Survey of District South of City For Sewer Purposes

A survey of the whole southern portion of the city from the Canadian General Electric Co.'s plant south to the river and west to the boundary line or even further, will have to be made for sewer purposes, before the city can hope to successfully overcome the present difficulties or to provide for the future growth. In brief the above is the opinion of Mr. Chipman, the sewer expert engaged by the Board of Works, to look over the proposed extension of the city's sewer system. Mr. Chipman is the best authority on sewers in the Dominion and is consulted by the majority of cities and towns from Halifax to Vancouver. He arrived in the city Thursday night, and yesterday, in company with the members of the Board of Works, drove over the southern part which is not yet supplied with sewer service. He found that there has never been a survey of the greater portion of the district affected, and he would not make any recommendation until such work has been done.

A large part of the property is now outside the city limits, but as Mr. Chipman pointed out, the day is not far distant when all that land will be taken in and built upon. It will then be necessary to supply a sewer system. He says that he sees wonderful signs of growth and development here. In fact it is going ahead at a rate superior to any other city its size in the Dominion. At the present time the greatest growth is in the south ward and it is bound to continue to grow there.

Mr. Chipman has, therefore, requested the Board of Works to recommend the council at its next meeting to authorize the expenditure of sufficient money to have the survey work done. This will take about two weeks' time and the expense will be nothing as compared with the value of the information. When Mr. Chipman has made the survey he will then advise the Board of Works of what course to pursue.

Fire on Smith St

About half past nine last night, and while Mr. G. L. Borden was delivering his splendid address in the opera house, the fire alarm sounded. The brigade responded and found a blaze getting nicely started in the kitchen at Mrs. Irwin's house on Smith street near Reid. No time was lost by the firemen and as soon as an entrance could be forced the chemicals were brought into use and the flames extinguished.

Old Peterboro Boy on Visit

The Hon. R. F. Green of Victoria, B.C., and a former member of the British Columbia Government, paid a flying visit to his uncle, Mr. Edward Green, 326 Water street, yesterday afternoon, and also hunted up a number of his former acquaintances. Mr. Green left again in the evening for the West. He is on his way home from Montreal where he was accompanied by Mrs. Green, also his son and daughter who will take a six months' course in McGill College. Mrs. Green taking up residence there during the term. The hon. gentleman will take the playforms on his return home, in the interests of the Conservative party. Mr. Green is an old Peterborough boy, being born here in 1861, and has many friends in the city who gave him a cordial welcome.

Greatest Conservative Rally Ever Held Here--Thousands Cheer Party Leader and Candidate

Grand Opera House Packed to the Doors with an Enthusiastic Audience--Great Men Creat Speeches.

It is doubtful if ever a greater reception was tendered a political leader or a Canadian statesman in the city of Peterborough, than that given Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party in Canada, last night. The citizens of Peterborough and vicinity turned out by the thousands to greet the popular leader and do honor to the statesman who is respected by everyone from Halifax to Victoria.

The streets from the Oriental Hotel, where the first man of the Conservative party made their headquarters, to the handsome opera house were lined with an enthusiastic throng, while hundreds more marched in procession before and after the leader's carriage. The procession was headed by the 57th Regt. Band which never played better, while many torch bearers illuminated the route.

The opera house was crowded to the doors at an early hour and long before the time for the speaking to begin it was impossible to secure a seat in the large play house. Around the wall of the opera house were strung banners with such inscriptions as the following;

"Purity in Public Life."

"No Oriental Cheap Labor."

"Protection for labor means work for the unemployed."

"Borden, Burnham and victory," etc.

At the appointed hour the speakers of the evening took seats upon the platform where a large number of the stalwarts of the party had gathered, and as the Conservative leaders appeared the great mass of humanity sent up cheer after cheer, which lasted for several minutes. It was a reception worthy of the gentleman to whom it was tendered and one which even a king might be proud.

TRIBUTE TO A GREAT CANADIAN.

The most significant feature of the gathering was not its numbers, nor its fervid enthusiasm. It was the fact that the meeting was in no sense a mere partisan demonstration, but an assembling of solid and responsible citizens of Peterborough who, irrespective of party, were eager to do honor to a great Canadian, and to hear discussed the issues of the campaign from the viewpoint of the Conservative party. The reception given Mr. Borden when he arose to speak, and the sustained storm of cheers which followed the conclusion of his address, were a remarkable tribute to the Conservative leader's clear and forcible deliverance, as well as a proof that his personality and magnetism had made an instant and deeply marked impression on every hearer.

THE AUDIENCE

It was indeed a picturesque spectacle to gaze upon that cheering mass of the voting population of the good old County of Peterborough. There were Conservatives of the old school who had fought many a battle; there were Conservatives who were just starting upon their careers; and there were Liberals with grey hairs, and Liberals in the flush of young manhood. But best of all was the presence of so many ladies whose graceful arts and delicate persuasiveness have their effect upon the politics of the country as well as upon the rising generation not yet out of the cradle. It is always good to see the ladies at such a gathering, and fortunate is the candidate who secures their support.

ON THE PLATFORM.

Those who occupied seats upon the platform were as follows;—Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P., T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., Major Rush, Jas. Stewardson, W. H. Moore, Hugh Waddell, Dr. Halliday, Col. Miller, A. W. HON. R. P. ROBLIN,

Premier of Manitoba

HON. R. L. BORDEN,

Conservative Leader

Outlined Planks of Conservative Platform, Scored Laurier Government

Delivered a Masterly Address

Mr. R. L. Borden was greeted with wild cheers. The audience stood upon their feet and cheered and waved their flags while the band played "The Maple Leaf Forever." Mr. Borden opened by expressing his hearty thanks and appreciation of the reception he had been given. He then expressed his pleasure at seeing so many ladies present. It had been a prominent feature of his tour from the Atlantic coast westward was the presence of ladies. The Provincial Secretary of Ontario, had said that every married lady controlled one vote and every single lady controlled from three to five votes, and if Mr. Burnham could get the ladies with him he would have no trouble in being elected. He here paid a high tribute to the ladies, and approved of their taking a part in the politics of Canada. He said that it was due to their influence the government of the country would be effected.

Passing on, the speaker stated that just so long as men insisted upon following their party leaders with no regard to their fitness the country would always be open to misgovernment. It was the duty of the ladies to take an interest in the government and influence their husbands to follow the gentlemen who could stand upon a clean record.

Mr. Borden dwelt upon the criticism of the Liberal party of his having on the platform with him so many provincial premiers. He said he was proud of the support he was getting from these men. The Liberal party had no reason to complain as it was not many years ago that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had taken around with him provincial premiers and provincial cabinet ministers. Sir Wilfrid had also taken men from the Liberal cabinets in the provinces into his cabinet at Ottawa, and was glad to get them.

The Conservative leader next took up the question of provincial rights and pointed out how the present Dominion Government was every day violating those rights. If for no other reason the government should be turned out, this was sufficient, and on the 26th day of October next the people of Canada will turn out those gentlemen who now hold down the benches in the cabinet at Ottawa.

Mr. Borden dwelt upon the policy of the Conservative party, and referred to the policy he had laid down in the city of Halifax before the last election. He referred to Sir Wilfrid's platform of 1896 and asked if any one present could say that they had carried out one plank of that policy. There was none, because Sir Wilfrid and his government had violated every plank. On the other hand they had adopted the policy almost in its entirety which Sir. John A. Macdonald laid down at the time of confederation. They had made some alterations in it and especially in the tariff. He then pointed out how different their actions were since election to what their promises were before they got into power.

The policy of the Conservative party is to protect our raw material and keep it at home to have it manufactured into the finished product. It was to build up factories in Canada and to give work to the people of this country. Keep the men at home and given them labor of every kind. Another plank was that of immigration. The speaker had no doubt that this great country would offer rich inducements to the world but that we could secure the very best class of people from every country in the world. But what has the Liberal Government done? They have poured into this country the very scum of foreign countries. The hospitals, asylums and charitable institutions of this Province of Ontario had been filled with these people. As a result in one year it has cost Ontario alone a vast sum of money for their care.

The Conservative party in 1895 had before it a problem of the relationship of Japan to Canada. At that time Japan made commercial treaties with the great countries of the world, including Great Britain, which Canada could accept or reject. The Conservative Government in 1895 rejected the treaty with Great Britain unless Canada was given control at all times of the immigration to this country of the people of Japan. This protest had not been accepted by Japan until after that election, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier had come into power. But that gentleman brushed aside the wise provision of the Conservative party and accepted Great Britain's treaty in its entirety. As a result Canada was subjected to an overwhelming influx of Japanese and the Dominion Government had to go to the Japanese Government

J. H. Burnham Charges Unadulterated Graft Against J.R. Stratton

Mr. Burnham, the Liberal-Conservative candidate, began by apologizing to the audience for presuming upon their patience when Mr. Roblin and Mr. Borden were to speak. However, it was necessary always for a candidate who was soliciting the vote and support of the electors to say upon what grounds he did so. First of all he might say that he was chosen by the Conservative convention as the Conservative standard-bearer, or he would not now be before them at all. The question of politics he would leave altogether to his leaders. He would concern himself with the main issue between himself and Mr. Stratton, that is their suitability as representatives. It was not pleasant for a man to have to contrast himself with another man under any circumstances, but some times these things had to be done. Mr. Stratton was fond of dwelling upon his own business capacity as contrasted with that of the speaker. Mr. Burnham could say what perhaps few knew, that he had been the manager of several trust estates for a number of years, totalling not less than seventy-five thousand dollars, besides other trusts of a like character, and he had made a success of them financially and as a trustee. There had not been in any of his business transactions a shadow of a stain cast upon him, and had he been so minded he could have, of course, broken his trust and enriched himself. It was needless to say that he claimed no credit for not doing so, or for behaving himself with the common honesty which is found in all walks of life, although chiefly amongst those whose daily duties are known as "the round

The Hon. Mr. Roblin's Splendid Address

Hon. Mr. Roblin was given a very warm reception when he was announced. As an Ontario boy and a Manitoba man he was glad of the opportunity given him by his leader to address some of the citizens of this great Province of Ontario. The Premier of Manitoba paid a high tribute to the many ladies present. They gave a grace and dignity to the gathering. It was the ladies who were mostly interested in the good government of this country. He welcomed the ladies to every meeting he had the honor to address.

Passing on he sided with his leader in wishing all success to the two candidates chosen by the Conservatives to represent the two ridings of Peterborough, and hoped to hear of them both being elected on October the 26th.

Hon. Mr. Roblin said he was present as a citizen of Canada and not as a public man of Manitoba. He paid a high tribute to the Conservative party's leader, who was the most patriotic and most respected gentleman in the Dominion to-day.

Proceeding, Mr. Roblin said that he had not known that he was so important a man as he had begun to find out since he came to Ontario through the Toronto Globe and also by that great family journal published in Peterborough, known as the Examiner. As far as the latter paper was concerned he would ignore it entirely as its criticism of a public man did not bear any weight whatever. He did, however, wish to take up a few minutes in reference to the Globe. He said;

"The signed statement by the editor-in-chief of the Globe in this morning's issue of that paper concerning myself and the charges made by me regarding the Crow's Nest Pass coal mines requires a further reference by me. Mr. Macdonald sets up two pleas of defence, an alibi and ignorance or no knowledge as to the facts that I allege. As to his alibi, that is the defence set up by all offenders who cannot offer any thing else to the court in defence of their indictment. As to his want of knowledge—here, Mr. Roblin told the story of the negro who on appearing for the hundredth time in police court was greeted by the magistrate with; 'Well, John, I don't know what to do with you,' to which the prisoner replied; 'Judge, I ain't responsible for your ignorance.' I repeat every word I said in my Toronto speech, and I do so because it is in a matter of public interest and refers to the public domain.

"Mr. Macdonald charges me with maladministration of the public domain of Manitoba, a proper charge if he has warrant or justification on which to base such a statement. I repeat again this challenge, that any man that the Globe newspaper can name from Sir Wilfrid down shall have access to every department, every book, every voucher, that has reference direct or indirect to the

School Teacher

Also Have Things to Learn

"For many years I have used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher.

"Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much-loved work in the public schools after 8 years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poisoning.

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head, and at times after exertion, a general 'gone' feeling, with a terrible desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years.

"A short time ago friends came to visit us, and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years ago I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all.

"This time, however, my friend made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Suddenly I found myself improving in a most decided fashion.

"The odor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts which I am glad to make known."

RETRENCHMENT IN JAPAN

Economic conditions have been too strong for the Militarists in Japan, and the Government has been compelled to reduce the expenditures which a too hasty and vaulting ambition to take a leading place as a world Power had proposed to make. In some lines the intended expenditure will be expenditure will be entirely abandoned; in others it will be reduced to more modest proportions. A review of the whole situation and of the burdens which its ambitious schemes were imposing on a people scarcely able to bear the ordinary expenditure of the administration led the Government to the sensible determination to abandon its grandiose programme. By one stroke it has abandoned an authorized expenditure of $75,000,000 for military and naval purposes.

In this as in other things, Japan has set an example which might well be followed by some of the European Powers engaged in ceaseless efforts to build up enormous armaments, burdening their own people and forcing similar expenditures on their neighbors as a matter of self-defence. Only yesterday the despatches from Europe gave particulars of the launching of two great battleships, which will cost something like $20,000,000. This game of beggar-my-neighbor, while ruinous in itself, is almost an incentive to war as a possible, although hazardous, way of ending this reckless international competition.

THE PANAMA CANAL

The report recently issued by the Commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the progress being made in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the conditions in the canal zone generally, seems to be a most satisfactory character. The report pays a high tribute to the military engineer now in charge of the work, and fully justifies the change which was made in employing them in place of the civil engineers to whom the work was originally entrusted. Among other things the improvement in the sanitary conditions in the zone has been remarkable. While under the administration of the French Company the locality was one of the most pestilent spots on earth, the conditions are now so good that the people health returns compare favourably with the tables of morality in cities in the temperate zone. Yellow fever has entirely disappeared; a notable achievement.

The report shows that the actual work of construction has proceeded most satisfactorily. In the opinion of the Commissioners the United States is getting fair value for every dollar expended. When the absence of rain most within permitted the maximum amount of work to be done, no less than two and one-third million yards of rock and earth were moved each day. As far as appears the work actually accomplished has exceeded, rather than fallen short of, the estimates—a remarkable result when the whole circumstances connected with such an undertaking as this are taken into account. According to a statement in the Commissioner's report, the engineers in charge of the work estimate that the canal will be completed and open for traffic within five years.

AN ERRONEOUS IDEA

The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the possibility of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men, is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward developments in the direction which they have come—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australians.

URBAN LIVING AND THE GENERAL HEALTH

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being poured into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-minded submitted a report covering the matter which is distinctly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation, and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

LIQUOR AND LAW

Hostility to the saloon has grown rapidly of late years. And those who know the liquor trade are beginning to find the cause. Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Journal, an American trade paper, says that the constant law-breaking saloon-keepers has discredited their business and made "personal liberty" a term of reproach. Saloons have been run in defiance of law and decency, and it seems now as if they are doomed to total extinction except in the large cities.

The article continues:—"We do not mean that all saloons or the majority of saloons have been conducted in a disreputable manner, but we do mean that a sufficient percentage of such places have been badly conducted, that is, have been disorderly, have sold to intoxicated men, have sold to women and to minors, have conducted gambling adjuncts, have kept open after legal hours and on Sundays, to create a hostile sentiment that has crystalized into a wa of extermination. We realize that this is a big admission, but the facts demand the admission that our trade may properly grasp the situation."

Fortunately, in Ontario the saloon is not recognized at all. Every bar must be a portion of a hotel. So, while some of the irregularities mentioned by The Journal have not developed here, others have. There is too much selling after hours in this Province, too little respect altogether for the law.

Tickling or dry Coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else, even for very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub give the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. It calms the cough, and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh. Why "take on" about your cough when you can get relief so quickly? Refuse substitutes. EDITORIAL COMMENT

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 200,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, as far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment and that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by these bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it appears appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of high cultivation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allotees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtue? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he urges forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home, for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in fields, mines, factories, ships. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of interoceanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of cities and slums, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute all modern progress to the superman few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the teacher, the engineer, the physician, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most artificial. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless macadamized road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could be run without horses with all the troublesome adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for those vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea Bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Soon the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1906 the motor-car works stock was quoted at close on 400 per cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turin and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing crash, a dummy engine was introduced under the name of "Fabbica Italiano Automobili Torino," the initials of which spell "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of $80,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $5,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,000 more; but in 1903 it made a gain of some $12,000, and in the next year it gained $18,000. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 6 per cent. and in 1905 the net profit was shown to be $427,336, and it paid a 20 per cent. dividend.

This great prosperity led on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divided the old shares of $40 into 8 new shares of $5. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1905, they were quoted worth $240, at the end of Jan., 1906, the quotation was $330 per share, at the end of February $340, and at the end of March $360. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $400 per share, or 80 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinians bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $500 and upward." At this juncture the directors, in the belief that a share of $400 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $2 (10 lire); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (100 lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound rapidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1906 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,067,000, a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $160,000, which had been inflated to $1,800,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 400 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 66 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 56 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car accessories, with a nominal capital of $23,222,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were finished and unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Italia" make, had hit by the crisis, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,184,000, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past; and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.40, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1906, stood at $180, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $32, in August to $40, in October to $16. In April, 1908, to $8, in May to $6.80 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $30. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fraudulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 1906, which showed a net profit of $1,067,616. The rival manufactories, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock Exchange madness, are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all cities which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars; and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapses.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak Stomach means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Any way test the Restorative 40 hours. It won't cure as soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Buy the property.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure relief for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but to have entirely rid the system of them—they break up head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Cathartics, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Preventics may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Harmless, probably the Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 10 cent boxes for the pocket, also in the home, at 25 cents. Insist on your druggists giving you

A MOTHER'S HELPER.

Girls Who Assist in the Small Household Duties.

Most of the little things that a girl can attend to are the tasks which her mother has in mind, but is too busy to carry out. She can see that the house plants are watered every day, and she can cut a blossom now and then for the table. She can plant a few pansy roots in one of her candy boxes, lined with oil paper, and set it on a small platter in the middle of the dining table for a centerpiece.

She can remove the spots that her mother is too busy to take out of the tablecloth between launderings by putting a few drops of hot or cold water, as the case may require, on them. She can keep a little parsley bed of her own, so that meats and vegetables can come to the table with a fresh garnish.

Keeping the rugs in the living room straight can be one of her tasks; also seeing that the window shades are all raised to the same height. When the furniture gets a slight scar she can rub it off with beeswax, a trick which keeps furniture fresh, but which her mother may not have time for.

She can see that the front door plate, the electric light switches and the doorknobs all over the house are kept polished. The smooches on mirrors can be rubbed off with a piece of crumpled tissue paper.

She can make a pretty wastebasket for the living room or any room that needs one out of strong cardboard covered with wall paper or chintz, and she can see that the younger children use it. Pieces of her cotton dresses she can make into covers for the sofa pillows which will be tossed about in the hammock and on the porch this summer.

Mothers and fathers like to see their daughters appear domestic in these days, when girls have so many outside interests, and any girl can charm her father by wearing a tiny white apron around the house. It needs be only a man's handkerchief with ribbon strings, but it will please her father and protect her dress. Wearing an apron is only one way of appearing freshly laundered and bright, which is the biggest part of being a real ornament to one's home.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Warm salad oil will relieve earache.

Always try to pass at least one hour a day in the open air.

Never let a child or infant sleep in the room with a sick person.

Never use on the face a wash rag which is not scalded each day.

Do not think that scrubbing will injure your complexion, for it will not.

Cocoa butter will smooth the rough elbows, but it must be persistently used.

Quickly apply raw egg to a cut. It will allay the pain and quickly heal the wound.

If possible have children sleep in darkened rooms, as a light is bad both for eyes and nerves.

The Example of Birds.

Some birds are typical examples of human attributes. The dove symbolizes innocence, and the eagle represents majesty, but the robin redbreast teaches the best lesson of all, for he sings as joyously in the dark, dreary winter days, when the earth is frost bound and snow covered, as in pleasant summer days, when food is plentiful and life is merry. Thus in his humble way he teaches the lesson of patience and gratitude.—Home Notes.

The Adored One.

He is a confirmed bachelor. In fact his attitude toward women is almost that of a misogynist. His particular bete noire is a new acquaintance of his sister, Miss Blank.

He met her in the street the other day and, seeing no way out of it, stopped and spoke to her. She saw how he was fidgeting to get away and said:

"You seem very preoccupied. Ah, I know! You are thinking of the one you adore."

"I adore no one," was his stiff rejoinder.

"You can't deceive me. I know you are deeply in love. Besides, your sister showed me a photo of the object of your devotion only last night. It isn't a type I admire. But, there, every one to his taste. I won't tell any one. Goodby."

And before he could reply she was gone.

When he reached home he said to his sister:

"What girl's photo did you show Miss Blank last night?"

Then it dawned upon him what Miss Blank was driving at.—London Scraps.

Corrected.

A little girl in Rhode Island, the daughter of a clergyman, once sat at the table with a bishop who was visiting her father.

When they had finished she observed that he did not fold his napkin. Distressed, she said:

"We always fold our napkins here."

"Yes, my dear," said the bishop. "But that is because you use them again. In the case of a visitor you don't do that."

"Oh, yes, we do," said the little girl.—New York Life.

A Cure For Despondency.

A large, fleshy man with whiskers told me of a sovereign cure for despondency the other day. He had a number of girls in his employ, among them one that he knew was in struggling circumstances and supporting a sick mother on a none too healthy salary. She had come into the store and laid her purse and somber widow's hat on the counter while she did something about the place. The large fleshy man got between her and the purse, and when she was not looking he slipped a five dollar bill into it and moved unconsciously about his business. In the afternoon he noticed that she had a red spot in each cheek, and she was heard asking other girls if they believed in fairies. She never solved the mystery—it was two years ago—and never will unless she reads this. But the five dollar bill was very useful in the little way, and the large despondent man felt so good for two whole days that he hip-hopped on the sidewalk on his way home.—Minneapolis Journal.

Living on Next to Nothing.

Most people do not need the evidence of recently published statistics to prove to them that it costs more to live in London than it once did. But it is doubtful if any Londoner now living was ever able to do it on £20 a year, as Boswell's poor Irish painter did. "He allowed £10 for clothes and linen. He said a man might live in a garret at 18 pence a week. Few people would inquire where he lived, and if they did it was easy to say, 'Sir, I am to be found at such a place.' By spending threepence at a coffee house he might be for some hours a day in very good company. He might dine for sixpence, breakfast on bread and milk for a penny and do without supper." Of course such men can always be reduced to a minimum by doing without things. The question is, Which of our various expenses is unessential? Boswell's Irishman hinted at one. "On clean shirt days he went abroad and paid visits," says his ingenious chronicler.—London Chronicle.

A Rather Novel Complaint.

An English traveler once met a companion sitting in a state of the most woeful despair and apparently near the last agonies by the side of one of the mountain lakes of Switzerland. He inquired the cause of his sufferings. "Oh," said the latter, "I was very hot and thirsty and took a large draft of the clear water of the lake and then sat down on this stone to consult my guidebook. To my astonishment, I found that the water of this lake is very poisonous! Oh, I am a gone man; I feel it running all over me! I have only a few minutes to live! Remember me to"—

"Let me see the guidebook," said his friend. Turning to the passage, he found, "L'eau du lac est bien poisonneuse" (The water of this lake abounds in fish).

"Is that the meaning of it?"

"Certainly."

The dying man looked up with a radiant countenance. "What would have become of you," said his friend, "if I had not met you?"

"I should have died of imperfect knowledge of the French language."

A Great Man's Simple Speech.

I was lately told a delightful story of a great statesman staying with a humble and anxious host who had invited a party of simple and unimportant people to meet the great man. The statesman came in late for dinner and was introduced to the party. He made a series of old fashioned bows in all directions, but no one felt in a position to offer any observations. The great man at the conclusion of the ceremony turned to his host and said in tones that had often thrilled a listening senate: "What very convenient jugs you have in your bedrooms. They pour well." The social frost broke up, the company was delighted to find that the great man was interested in mundane matters of a kind on which every one might be permitted to have an opinion, and the conversation, starting from the humblest commonness of daily life, melted insensibly into more liberal subjects.—Arthur G. Benson in Putnam's and the Reader.

An American Admirer.

In a small way an American figures in the journal kept by Rosalie Lamorliere during the revolutionary days of 1793 in France and published under the title, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

Rosalie Lamorliere, a girl of Picardy, was servant to the queen in the conciergerie. "One day," Rosalie has recorded, "M. de Saint Leger, the American, who was coming from the register's office, noticed that I was carrying a glass half filled with water.

"'Did the queen drink the water that has gone from the glass?' he asked.

"I answered that she did.

"With a quick gesture he uncovered his head and drank the water that remained with every indication of respect and reverence."

Missed a Chance.

"But, Tommy," said his mother, "you asked for two cakes and I gave them to you. Aren't you satisfied?"

"No, I ain't," growled Tommy. "You was so easy I'm kickin' myself now 'cause I didn't ask for four."—Philadelphia Press.

Driven to Drink.

Artist—My next picture of the seashore will be entitled "Driven to Drink."

His Friend—Ah, some powerful portrayal of baffled passion, I suppose!

Artist—Oh, no; it's a home approach for a water trough!

Still Possible.

Clara—When Tom proposed to me he admitted that he had more money than brains.

Maude—Well, I've no reason to doubt it, although I understand he hasn't a dollar to his name.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope "Tender for Construction," will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 11th day of September, 1905, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Fraquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 104.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Fraquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 100 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000.

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,
F. H. RYAN,
Secretary.

Another False Alarm Yesterday

The fire brigade had a bully run yesterday afternoon. The chief sent a man out to test all the boxes, and when he sent in the alarm from box 35, the thing stuck, and No. 15 was sounded at the fire hall. The brigade immediately turned out and made a great run to that locality where Chief Howard discovered the mistake. While there No 45 was sounded, and the firemen hurried back in answer to the new call, but it was caused by the man working at No. 35, and the brigade had their run for nothing. The chief, however, stated that he would take no chances on a false alarm and would respond every time.

Borden Roused People

and beg to grant Canada control over the immigration.

Two years ago Mr. Borden said he had endeavored to get the Liberal party to unite for the enactment of the electoral laws of the country. Last year in Halifax he laid down as one of the planks in his platform the contents of the electoral laws. He did not propose to enact any law which would permit any corrupt act and he repeated that no friend of the Conservative party would condone anything of a corrupt practice. He appealed to the Conservative at this election to refrain from indulging that was contrary to the laws of the country. He referred to the large number of elections in the past which have been won by corruption, and it was up to the Conservatives to keep a vigilant watch at the next election. Sir Wilfrid Laurier recently made the statement that no man could be half so honest as he (Mr. Borden) talked. "Was that not an ennobling statement for a prime minister of Canada to make! Let Sir Wilfrid speak for himself and not for the rest of Canada."

Mr. Borden took up the woollen industry and referred to the 167 mills a few years ago all doing a good business in this country. Now they are mostly closed up and the employees are looking for something to do. What did Sir Wilfrid Laurier say to these people and to the Manufacturers' Association when they told the matter before him and told him that the British manufacturer was sending into this country a class of goods that was sunny but was worthless at the price. Sir Wilfrid answered, why in the name of all that is profitable do you not make shoddy. On the 26th of October he believed that the pupl of Canada would show Sir Wilfrid that they had very little sympathy with the morality of the premier's statement and had no use for his "shoddy" politics.

Mr. Borden next took up some of the extravagancies of the Laurier Government, which had been for years wasting the domains of Canada for the benefit of their political friends. He referred to the giving away of large tracts of lands to friends for mere songs. He referred to the many men of the Liberal's hangers on who had become wealthy through the gifts of great timber limits from the Dominion Government. He believed and he had good reason for believing that at least $10,000,000 of the public funds of Canada had been squandered every year for several years. It was party friends and camp followers who got this money and it was the people of Canada who had to pay for it. Mr. Borden gave several illustrations to prove his statements and to prove also that political pull at the present time was worth much more than real estate in Canada. Mr. Borden explained the methods adopted by those men who bought timber limits at the very lowest possible price. In closing he again expressed his pleasure at being present and hoped that both Mr. Burnham and Mr. Sexsmith would be elected.

charges made, on condition that I shall have the right to name a man who shall have the same right to examine every paper, every record, government or otherwise, at Ottawa or elsewhere which has reference to the Crow's Nest Pass Railway deal.

"In connection with that I charge that the Globe chloroformed public opinion in Canada in order that the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier might take $2,000,000 additional out of the public treasury over and above what was necessary to secure the construction of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway; and that the Globe and those for whom it spoke in such chloroforming of public opinion received 250,000 acres of the best coal lands in the world; but that they returned 50,000 acres to the Government as a pretence of settlement of an alleged claim. The manifest desire of Mr. J. A. Macdonald to induce some other disinterested gentleman to pull his chestnuts out of the fire is to me evidence that the withers of the Globe have been wrung and that they realize the position which they occupy as a public journal undertaking to mould public opinion in Canada. All I require for my purpose is the opportunity of examining the public records. The time has gone by for anything else to be acceptable to this Dominion."

Hon. Mr. Roblin made another charge and that was that Mr. Macdonald could not prove an alibi. Mr. Macdonald was a member of the ministry of the great Presbyterian Church, and when a brother minister of the same church pleaded with him to let the light in upon the crimes being committed in the Yukon, he turned his back upon him (Dr. Pringle), for fear that it would reflect upon the Laurier Government if the true state of affairs existing there, to the knowledge of the Dominion Government's officials, were made public. Mr. Macdonald refused to write one line in support of Dr. Pringle and in favor of an investigation. On the other hand Dr. Pringle was blackmailed, and the Globe gave great space to that crime. He charged J. H. Macdonald with refusing to request an investigation into the crimes and debauchery in the Yukon, and he would like Mr. Macdonald to answer to that charge.

He next took up the graft and extravagances of the Marine and Fisheries Department at Ottawa, and showed the people that hundreds of thousands and even millions of dollars of the people's money had been given to party friends. One man called Mervin got over $200,000, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier said at Clinton on Wednesday that he did not care if Mervin did get 50c. more or 50c less than the goods could have been bought from anyone else.

The meeting closed with rousing cheers for the King, Mr. Borden Mr. Burnham and Mr Sexsmith.

After the meeting a reception was held on the stage when a large number availed themselves of the privilege of meeting the Conservative leaders

Bad Symptoms.

The woman who has periodical headaches, backache, sees imaginary dark spots or specks floating or dancing before her eyes, has gnawing distress or heavy full feeling in stomach, faint spells, dragging-down feeling in lower abdominal or pelvic region, easily startled or excited, irregular or painful periods, with or without pelvic catarrh, is suffering from weaknesses and derangements that should have early attention. Not all of above symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

Neglected or badly treated and such cases often run into maladies which demand the surgeon's knife if they do not result fatally.

No medicine extant has such a long and numerous record of cures in just such cases as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No medicine has such a strong endorsement, professional or lay, of its every ingredient—worth more than any number of ordinary non-professional testimonials. The very best ingredients known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments enter into its composition. No alcohol, harmful, or habit-forming drug is to be found in the list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath.

In any condition of the female system, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can do only good—never harm. Its whole effect is to strengthen, invigorate and regulate the whole female system and especially the pelvic organs. When these are deranged in function or affected by disease, the stomach and other organs of digestion become sympathetically deranged, the nerves are weakened, and a long list of bad, unpleasant symptoms follow. Too much must not be expected of this "Favorite Prescription." It will not perform miracles; will not cure tumors—no medicine will. It will often prevent them, if taken in time, and thus the operating table and the surgeon's knife may be avoided.

Women suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Doctor Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (1000 pages) is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Address as above of daily toil." He regretted, however, to have to expose the boasting of his opponent in this particular. Mr. Stratton, as president of a small insurance company in Toronto, had been hailed before the Royal Parliamentary Commission, appointed by the Laurier Government, at the general demand of the newspapers, the public and Parliament, to inquire into the unsatisfactory condition of certain life insurance companies in Canada. You know, life insurance companies have presented occasionally, some strange irregularities. That with which Mr. Stratton had most to do presented perhaps, the strangest of all. The story which the speaker wished to call the attention of the audience to was briefly this: Mr. Stratton was connected with the Dominion Permanent Loan Company. He became president of the People's Life Insurance Company. These two companies acquired some of each other's securities. The People's Life began to go to pieces. It became necessary to look around for some company to unload it upon. It was necessary to get one to take over the (People's Life insurance and incidentally save the stockholders. The Home Life was approached. Mr. Pattison was manager of it. To bring about the end desired by Mr. Stratton, it was necessary for the People's Life, while amalgamating with the Home Life, to get control of the latter. The reason will appear as you follow out the evidence. Mr. Pattison could accomplish this for Mr. Stratton, but his own contract with the Home Life stood in the way. He demanded $100,000 (one hundred thousand) for the ten years of his salary, yet to run, and of course for bringing about the legal salvation of the People's Life, in the proposed amalgamation. Mr. Stratton agreed to give him $90,000 (ninety thousand.) The bargain was closed at that. Before Mr. Pattison would deliver the goods however, he wanted his money. When the great day came it was necessary for Mr Stratton to raise that $90,000. The security for that sum, which was to be borrowed from the bank, was to be the note and agreement with the amalgamated companies of Mr. McCutcheon, their new manager. Mr. McCutcheon was to receive a handsome salary and extras. The McCutcheon agreement was put through with the board of directors, without, at any rate, the old Home Life members of it knowing anything about the extras, which were designed to pay the $90,000. It was cunningly worked. This McCutcheon agreement and McCutcheon's note were to be the security for the repayment to the bank of the $90,000, but it was the extras, as we may call them, that were to pay that sum. So you see the new company was paying that full amount of $90,000 and bore the burden of it from that time on. Meantime, on the great day, Mr. Pattison wanted his money before the Board met and the transfer was to slide through. Mr. Stratton raised that money for the time being on his own cheque. He paid Mr. Pattison $80,000 and kept the other ten thousand himself. The evidence in the Blue Book proves it all. It is quite plain. When the Commission asked him about it, he said that he had issued a cheque back to Mr. McCutcheon for the ten thousand at the time, although at the date of giving his evidence, nearly one year afterwards, he acknowledged that he still had the ten thousand which he had deposited in Peterborough, and moreover the liability of Mr. McCutcheon and the Home Life, had never been reduced by the ten thousand and moreover, also, Mr. McCutcheon swore that he had no idea that the amount paid to Mr. Pattison had been reduced to eighty thousand dollars instead of ninety, and also, if he had known it he would not have signed the agreement to give his note and other security for $90,000 to the bank. The report of the Commission finds that Mr. Stratton really demanded a rake-off from Pattison of ten thousand dollars and got it. The sum given Pattison for his contract was an immensely fat one, so he divided up. It is needless to say that no one but the parties concerned knew of the divvy up. Mr. Stratton, then, was guilty of a piece of pure unadulterated graft, which, if it had been a loaf of bread in the hands of a starving woman, would have been treated pretty seriously. But what was worse even than the graft, was the effort Mr. Stratton made before the Commission to cover up his graft. He swore point-blank that the sum paid Pattison was $80,000, that it was paid by his (Stratton's) cheque, for that amount, and that he himself got no consideration whatever, out of the deal. When the Commission began to enquire into the McCutcheon security the 90 instead of the 80, had to come out. Then Stratton said the sum paid Pattison was 90, and not 80, and that there was no cheque for $80,000, and that he had made "a slip." Then as to the manner of payment to Pattison. Stratton issued a cheque, he swore, for $90,000, and the cash was brought to his office, Flagg he swore that he had gone to the bank with Mr. Pattison, got the money there, and paid him the $80,000 there.

Then on another occasion when recalled, he "slipped" still farther and swore that he had the money before he went to the bank, that he had $90,000 in his pocket in Dominion of Canada certificates. Mr. Burnham said he had not time to go into the omission of the ten thousand from the items in Mr. Stratton's bank-book, although it was included in the balance all right. The omission had not been discovered until the Commission asked for the book, although the bank book had been checked over as usual in the bank and ticked off. The full report of the Commission on the whole affair is too long to quote, here, but it is well summarized in the extract we furnish you, which shows what the Commissioners thought of Mr. Stratton. Graft and false swearing may be evidences of capacity, but is it the sort of capacity you want?

The Drowned Lands

For many years the farmers and land owners in the Townships of Otonabee, South Monaghan and North Monaghan, along the Otonabee river complained that they had been unjustly treated by the government by reason of damage alleged to have been done to their property, which they claimed was caused by the building of dam and consequent raising of the water at Hastings.

This dam was constructed more than fifty years ago, so that the people in these townships, if they had a grievance, must have suffered from it for a great many years. For years the farmers of these townships maintained an organization known as the Drowned Land Association, and repeatedly made representations to the governments of the day with a view to securing compensation for the damage alleged to have been done to their property. Up until the present government assumed power nothing whatever had been done towards compensating the people for the injury they suffered. The present Dominion Government appointed a commissioner to investigate the claims of these parties, and also placed in the estimates the sum of $100,000, which is being used for the purpose of paying off the claims against the government in this connection Mr. W. H. Ellsworth, of Bell ville, some time ago was appointed as commissioner and he has been busy during the past year or so in investigating the various claims and arriving at a settlement with the persons interested. A number of settlements have already been made and the public can depend upon it that their claims will receive due consideration and will be treated strictly on their merits.

For years a Tory government existed at Ottawa. Repeatedly representations were made by the people of South Monaghan and North Monaghan, and Otonabee with a view to having these grievances looked into, but the Conservative government treated their representations with indifference, if not contempt. It remained for the present government to give to the people of these townships the consideration they were entitled to. There is no reason in the wide world why the people of these townships should not support the present government.

BLOOD DISEASES

Guaranteed Cured or No Pay.

If you ever had any contracted or hereditary blood disease, you are never safe until the virus or poison has been removed from the system. You may have had some disease years ago, but now and then some symptom alarms you. Some poison still lurks in your system. Can you afford to run the risk of more serious symptoms appearing as the poison multiplies? Beware of mercury or mineral drugs used indiscriminately—they may ruin the system. Twenty years experience in the treatment of these diseases enables us to prescribe specific remedies that will positively cure all blood diseases of the worst character, leaving no bad effects on the system. Our New Method Treatment will purify and enrich the blood, heal up all ulcers, clear the skin, remove bone pains, fallen out hair will grow in, and swollen glands will return to a normal condition, and the patient will feel and look like a different person. All cases we accept for treatment are guaranteed a complete cure if instructions are followed.

MISS SUSIE M. KINGSWORTH, 408 Quebec St., London, Ontario, writes:

"I began using Peruna last January, when I had such a bad cold, and I could not get anything to help me.

"My nose and head were all stopped up, so that I could hardly get my breath. I thought at times that I would smother, especially at night.

"I have no trouble with that now. The noise in my head has all disappeared.

"I know Peruna will do just what you say it does. I cannot praise Peruna too highly, as it has done so much for me. I hope my letter will reach other sufferers."

Mrs. S. J. Kounts, 1015 Scovel street, Nashville, Tenn., writes:

"I have had a very bad cough nearly all my life, and I am forty-five years old. I have taken almost every kind of cough medicine that has ever been made, but none did me much good. I would have spells of coughing that I thought I would cough myself to death. I took Peruna, and last winter and this winter I have had no cough and I know that Peruna cured me."

FREE! GIVEN AWAY!

Special Offer to Ladies

I will send ten days' treatment of the famous Orange Lily FREE to every sufferer who writes for it. This home treatment cures without the aid of a physician. It cures female weakness, leucorrhoea, tumors, cancers, in their earlier stages, displacements, lacerations, painful periods, pains in back, sides of abdomen, bearing down sensations, and all irregularities. Read the following letters and be convinced of the efficiency of this truly wonderful remedy.

Merlin, Ont., March 27, 1902.

Mrs. K. F. Currah, Windsor, Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Currah, your letter of the 24th received today. Please find enclosed $5.00 for 6 boxes of Orange Lily. I would not think of discontinuing its use, and I know that 6 more boxes will produce a permanent cure. Even now I am an entirely new creature since using O.L. At present I know of two other cases the same as mine (long standing leucorrhoea) and as you give some trial boxes free, if you would send me a few I would gladly hand them to my friends, for I know it will produce the same good results in every case. I intend sending you my photo and testimonial letter later, for I feel we cannot say too much in favor of Orange Lily, and know if more of same was used among suffering womankind the surgeon's knife would be cheated of its many hags-tiams in the blood of suffering women. Hoping God may ever bless and prosper you and Dr. Cromby in the noble work, believe me, ever your sincere friend, Miss R. McK., Merlin, Post Office, Kent County, Ont.

Kingston, Ont., July 15, 1902.

Dear Friend,—Sometime ago I wrote and told you the great good your wonderful medicin had done for me. Since then I have continued to use it, and after five years of terrible suffering and undergoing three operations. I am completely cured by Orange Lily, after using it, for eight months. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Knowing, as I do, that so many women in this city suffer as I did, and knowing what it did for me, I would like to take the agency. Will you please send me instructions and terms tongenta!

Gratefully yours,

Miss G. T., 359 Brock street.

"FINALLY, BRETHERN, FAREWELL," WAS REV. MAJOR'S TEXT

His Farewell Sermon was a Masterly and Eloquent Effort and Deeply Impressed the Large Congregation Present

"Finally, brethren, Farewell," was the text of an eloquent and masterly sermon delivered by Rev. Wm. Major in All Saints' church last night. For the past four years the Rev. Mr. Major has guided the spiritual destiny of the congregation of All Saints' and during that time the church has made rapid strides and does today command a position in the city not thought of a few years ago. To say that his efforts in Peterborough have been successful is indeed mild. Not only were his sermons eloquent and forceful, but one could not listen to him and fail to be impressed and desire to live a better life afterwards, but hundreds of citizens, members of his congregation and others, have been assisted by him outside the church. It is these people who will miss him most and will most regret his departure.

The reverend gentleman has always been well thought of and respected by all and loved by those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. Naturally when it was announced that he would preach his farewell sermon on Sunday night the church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and many were unable to even gain standing room, although it is no uncommon occurrence for the church to be crowded to the doors. The decorations from the harvest home services were left and the choir rendered appropriate music.

The text of Rev. Mr. Major's sermon was taken from II Cor. 13; 11, "Finally, brethren, farewell, be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you."

In opening the retiring rector said that on this the last occasion he would occupy that pulpit as rector, he did not propose to come with a mournful or fearful message. He had strong antipathy to the usual so-called farewell sermons and he did not believe that the people cared for it. On the other hand his new field of labor was not so far away but that he could come back again on occasion and talk to them. He proposed to give and did give a sermon which was lasting and helpful to all who were present.

His first point was "Be perfect." This was impossible in itself, but if one had no ideal to work for there would be no improvement. That perfection has been recognized from the early ages was evidenced by the fact of the world's progress in every line. The ideal of perfection for Christians was found only in Jesus Christ if one flaw could be found in that life then everything was ruination for all of us.

The second point was "Be of good comfort; be of one mind; live in peace." The relationship which had existed between him as rector and the congregation had always been peaceful; it has been harmonious, but it has now reached perfection. He urged the members of the congregation to stand together, to be of one mind and to live in peace. It was only in this way that the work of God could be successful. In closing he urged his hearers to look to Christ for their ideal and to strive to attain His perfection.

Caretaker's Cottage is Nearly Ready

Picturesque Structure at Main Entrance to Jackson Park

Probably a more picturesque cottage cannot be found in the city or district than the one just being completed by Ald. W. J. Johnston for the Jackson Park commissioners. The unique structure is something entirely new around here. It is of an old-fashioned design with the foundation and stone work done in the rustic style. Field stones were used and the jagged edges and the varied sizes give a very attractive appearance. The stone pillars which support the roof of the cosy verandah on the south-east corner are of the same style, while the rustic chimneys with an iron pipe extending a few inches higher are indeed striking. The cottage is of frame with the old style cottage roof, the shingles on which were dipped in green colored stain. The whole thing is well constructed and will make a very cosy and comfortable home. There are five good sized rooms and an attic which can be used as a store room while the basement is all finished and affords lots of room.

The cottage is situated amid the tall pines just west of the main entrance to the park, and from its elevated position will give its occupants a commanding view of the surrounding country. The object of the park commissioners in having to engage a young man as caretaker of the park, and to give him the supervision of the place the year round so that he can be present during the summer evenings, when so many citizens gather there. He will occupy the cottage and the knowledge of his presence on the grounds will have a great effect upon any tendancy on the part of some to make the park unpopular with the public.

Cut Trees Down

The Park Commissioners found it necessary to remove several of the large pine trees in Jackson Park on the Lansdowne street side of the main entrance. These trees were very fine ones and would not have been removed but for the new cottage being built. The commissioners will have the logs sawed into planks, and will then plank the several bridges over the brook which courses through the lower side of the pleasure grounds.

RUGBY

On Saturday morning the rugby team from the Collegiate Institute turned out inn large numbers at the Oval, where all morning was spent in practising, and getting acquainted with some new plays. The P.C.I. this year are going right in to win every game they undertake to play, and we wish them every success to all their games.

Rev. Canon Davidson will Arrive in Montreal Today on His Journey Home

Word has been received by Mrs. Davidson from Rev. Canon Davidson from Father Point, to the effect that he expected to arrive in Montreal today at noon. If this is the case the rector of St. John's will probably arrive in Peterborough on Tuesday.

Rev. Canon Davidson has been in England since May 15th, where he went to attend the Pan Anglican Congress. Since the conclusion of the sessions of that great gathering he has been visiting with many friends and has made many new friends. But upon his arrival in Peterborough he will receive a welcome from his old friends which will be as warm and sincere as ever was tendered any man. The congregation of St. John's and the citizens generally will be glad to welcome him to the city after his big absence.

Large Congregation Heard Rev. Dr. Foster's Farewell Sermon at St. John's

The services in St. John's church yesterday were conducted by Rev. Dr. Foster, who for the last two months has ministered to that congregation. The services were bright and heartily enjoyed. The congregation taking a large part in the singing.

The evensong was fully choral, and Dr. Foster presented the service splendidly, the choir responding so as to bring out all the beauty of Tallis's setting of the grand old service.

Rev. Dr. Foster heartily thanked the leader and the choir for their faithful service and asked the congregation to remain behind as he wished to shake hands with them all.

Preaching on the miracle of the feeding of the five thousand, the preacher noted that those people who were faint, were far from home to hear the word of God. He contrasted the attitude of many professing christians, who are so engrossed in the pursuit of this world's goods for six days that they are too tired to come to God's house for worship on Sunday.

Less than thirty worshippers at eight in the morning, but hundreds at night. The miracles of the Lord showed His power in using humble means to carry out His will.

Arabs never tread under foot scraps of bread, but takes no thought for tomorrow, saying God will provide.

Rev. Dr. Foster is strongly in favor of the tithe system of giving, and said that we are extravagant for selfish ends, but miserly in our giving to God.

Rev. Dr. Foster leaves the city at 8 a.m. this morning.

"A Pair of Country Kids"

The sensational rural comedy, viz., "A Pair of Country Kids," was presented at the Grand on Saturday matinee and night, and a large audience greeted their performance. The play all through was very startling and amusing. "Hi" and "Tim," the Country Kids, taking well with the crowd as did also the other members of the company. The Grand this year are bringing some of, if not the best plays that Peterborough theatergoers will ever have a chance to see.

Things have brightened up some within the last year, and those plays which last season only touched the larger cities will visit Peterborough. The management must be complimented for being able to secure such interesting, amusing, and refined plays for this city.

On Wednesday night Richard Carthony the well known New York actor, who is known the world over, will appear in the greatest melodrama ever written, viz., "The Tyrannys of Tears." No doubt a full house will listen to one of the greatest actors and his splendid line of supporters who have come direct from New York; playing only in the big cities along the way.

PETERBORO WINS FIRST GAME FOR THE CHAMPIONSIP

Won Saturday's Game by 7 to 0--Winners Will go Into Finals with Park Nine or St. Mary's

The Peterborough Baseball team is in the finals for the championship of Ontario. On Saturday afternoon they defeated the fast St. Andrew's team of Toronto, by the score of 7—0. The locals, it is true had the luck with them and scored two or three runs on bad throws to bases, but they had the Toronto bunch trimmed in the first three innings when they scored four times through timely hittings and good base running. The locals had easily the better team all round although Hickey and Coleman of the Toronto Eastern League team were on the field. Coleman was the slab artist for the visitors, and tried all the fancy benders in his repertoire and which made him famous in years gone by, but the Petes were next to him, and got away with four safe hits. Hickey held down short, but got little work and at bat was unable to connect with Hawkins' twirlers.

Peterborough's team, while outside the Eastern League, was not the strongest they could have put in the field as a couple of their men were out of town. It was strengthened, however by Burridge, the popular man behind the bat who is pretty nearly good enough for any company, and by Walter Jayes, of the Wilmington champion team. The latter played a first-class game at short and did good work with the willow. Burridge, was the favorite and was in the game all the time. He made a nice drive to left good for two sacks.

The crowd was small but enthusiastic, and the rooters gave Sammy Coleman a little piece. Why Peterborough people do not take to baseball is hard to conceive because they can see as good ball here as in the Eastern League.

Peterborough—Burns, McDermitt, Burridge, Jayes, Maddocks, Shea, Edmunds, Lawson and Hawkins.

St. Andrews—Dolan, Hickey, Moran, Clewlo, Curtis, Wrist, McGill, Colman and Bower.

Referee—Fitzpatrick.

The score by innings;

Peterborough ... ...0022 0030—7

St. Andrews ... ... 00000000—0

Great Rally Held at Conservative Rooms --Stiring Addresses

A splendid meeting was held Saturday night at Mr. J. H. Burnham's committee rooms in the Conservative Club parlors. Inspiring speeches were made by the candidate and others.

The turnout was large and must have been very encouraging to the candidate. A feature of the meeting was the attendance of so many young men who are showing deep interest in the issues of the campaign by taking off their coats and assisting in the work.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., occupied the chair and after a few remarks regarding the campaign, called upon the Conservative candidate, Mr. J. H. Burnham, who made a short but forcible address.

When Mr. Burnham was called to the front he was received with prolonged cheers. He outlined the progress of the work that had been done so far, and the encouraging outlook that comes from all sides for a victory on the 6th. In conclusion he urged upon the workers to keep up the good work.

Mr. Jas. Kendry was the next speaker, he predicted a victory for Mr. Burnham by over 500. "This election will not be stolen from us as it was four years ago," said the speaker, "we are onto the job, and into the fight to win with honesty and intelligent people at our back."

Mr. Kindred was then called upon. He was glad to be present in the interests of Mr. Burnham. He had taken an interest in every campaign but would work like a trojan to roll up a majority for such a man of honor and sound business principles as Mr. Burnham. Mr. Kindred brought good news from the Hastings riding where, he said, Mr. Sexsmith would be elected by 700 majority (applause).

Mr. Andy Allison, of the fourth ward, is another enthusiastic supporter of Borden and Burnham. He believed that Mr. Burnham was bound to win and it was a man of Mr. Burnham's calibre that should represent this riding. Mr. Allison will be found in the thick of the fight, helping to elect his candidate. About eight or 10 other speakers made short addresses after which cheers for the King and candidate closed the splendid rally.

Mr. J. R. Stratton Tells What Government Has Done for the People

The Saturday evening rally at Mr. Stratton's committee rooms was a continuation of the enthusiasm which has marked his campaign from the start. Several speakers discussed the public issues of the day and their addresses received hearty applause. Mr. Stratton, who was given an enthusiastic reception, said that at the Conservative meeting on the night previous, he understood that the chairman, Mr. Kendry, and the candidate, Mr. Burnham, did not discuss any political measures, but confined themselves to personal attacks upon himself. It was to be noted that neither Mr. Borden nor Mr. Foglin once referred to the attack of Mr. Burnham and did not in any way endorse the only policy of appeal the Conservative candidate advanced. They were not in sympathy with the policy of private slander, although they themselves pursued a policy of slander in connection with the broader field of Dominion politics. (Applause.)

The Kawartha Lakes were becoming known all over the continent, and the completion of the Trent canal would be not only important for navigation, but for other reasons. The summer tourist traffic on these waters had become not only a matter of pleasure to those concerned but as a matter of money to the residents of the district. Tens of thousands of dollars were spent by outside visitors, tourists and sportsmen. No district on the continent contained such beautiful waters as the Kawartha Lakes, dotted with beautiful islands. It is well known that the fishing is the great attraction in these waters, and that our American cousins, when they come to Canada, spend money lavishly for guides, boats, canoes, fishing tackle and all sorts of supplies. The demand calls upon our canoe builders, hardware merchants and general supply stores. It is also well known that when tourists sample the sport we can offer them they buy islands, build cottages and establish summer houses. This gives business to the lumber merchant, the hardware dealers, and work to the carpenters and laborers. To maintain these conditions the question of permanent fish supply should be considered, and it is the duty of our public men to devise expedients to meet the conditions demanded by the districts they represent or have an interest in. The time was coming when the question of restocking our waters with fish should be taken up.

Where was there a better place for the placing of a Government fish hatchery, and with greater advantage to the whole district than in Peterborough. He would endeavor to see that this important matter was not overlooked. Neither the establishment or maintenance of a hatchery was a serious matter of expense. Anyone who thought of the subject for a few minutes could make a computation of the thousands of dollars of Ontario money brought into this district each year. Tourists and sportsmen spent eighteen million dollars in the State of Maine which cannot compare with our own region when its advantages are known. A fish hatchery in Peterborough would at once advertise the Kawartha Lakes as a fisherman's paradise and we would be boomed by every railway that controlled tourist traffic.

Mr. Stratton went on to speak of the improvements that had been effected at Nogie's Creek, by the building of a wharf from which the settlers could load their cordwood, telegraph poles, etc. He also referred to the assistance he had been able to give and was still giving to some of the northern districts in the matter of telephone service.

All the Conservatives had to offer the country was scandals, which formed the base of criticism of all the speakers at Friday night's meeting. The Liberal Government had been given no credit for what it had done for Canada, but there was no comparision between the Liberal and the Conservative record in the matter of accomplishment. That had the Conservative Government done for the working men. Who had been at the head and front of establishing most of our great city industrustries? These were matterns directly affecting the people. Mr. Burnham did not approve of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Mr. Borden and Mr. Roblin both said it was needed, but they could not speak as a man could who had been known 30 years by Jim Martin and Jack Barclay. The railway was a necessity in the development of New Brunswick.

"The Pan-Anglican Congress and the Lambeth Conference."

Subject of the Sermon Preached by the Late Bishop Carmichael, at Christ Church Cathedral, upon the Completion of which the Bishop was Stricken, Never to Recover.

Following is the full text of the sermon on the "Pan-Anglican Congress and the Lambeth Conference," preached last Sunday morning before a large congregation, in Christ Church Cathedral, upon the completion of which the Bishop was stricken, never to recover; Genesis xxii., 10; "Unto Him shall the gathering of the peoples be."

I desire to speak to you this morning on the subject of the Anglican Congress as seen in the light of the two great meetings lately held in London. The Pan-Anglican Congress of bishops, clergy and laity, and the Lambeth conference composed solely of bishops.

Although the congress preceded the Lambeth conference, the latter comes first in order of thought, for, humanly speaking, it would have been impossible to have had the former unless a world-wide Anglican episcopate was in existence. And, indeed, as far as the thought of such congress was concerned, it was purely episcopal. The idea emanated from Bishop Montgomery, the secretary of the S.P.S., and every bishop in the world was consulted before the idea was made public, and in the actual meetings of the Congress, the Episcopal bench furnished as the chairmen.

A few thoughts, then, on the Lambeth Conference held in Lambeth Palace, under the presidency of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the most able of chairmen, fully seized of the intricacies of the many questions that came before the bishops, possessed of perfect command of the House and singularly lucid in all his utterances.

It was said that the chairmen of the different committees were specialists in the different subjects dealt with by each committee. How far this was the case I know not, but it seemed to me that the Archbishop might have been regarded as approaching that almost impossible combination of gifts—a specialist in everything. I have met men who posed as such, but I never came in touch with one that approximately reached the position until I sat under the presidency of Archbishop Davidson.

ROOM FILLED WITH BISHOPS.

As we sat in the quaint old library in Lambeth, the room filled with bishops from all parts of the world, one felt amazed at the thought that it would have been utterly impossible to have held such a meeting 100 years ago; a comparatively short term of time in the life of a great historic church. For, 100 years ago, the Anglican Episcopate was almost wholly composed of the bishops of England and Ireland, and Anglican missionary work was a comparatively small enterprise. England was not thinking of missions in those days, but of the great French Emperor, entering Rome and Madrid, creating kingdoms, making kings, calling new orders of nobility into life and threatening an invasion of England from across the narrow channel. Indeed, apart from the circumscribed work of the S.P.G., and the efforts of the Moravian Church and one other non-conformist body, the spirit of missions practically did not exist, and Protestantism as a whole seemed dead to the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." And yet, in that quaint room, if a world roll cast and west and north and south had been called, few would have been the countries that would not have answered to their names; putting one in mind of the old world roll call as then known of the infant church; "Parthians and Medes and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotami, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia, Phrygia and Pamphylia, in Egypt and in the parts of Lybia about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians." In a word, that little room with its 200 bishops, was a microcosm of the greater world in which they worked and labored for their God and Saviour Jesus Christ—a mighty and surely a miraculous change within one hundred years.

A MERAVULOUS CHANGE.

Another thought seemed natural. Apart wholly from disputed points as to divinely given official graces—in no sense disputed by the preacher—this quaint old room became the home of a great fact, namely, that those who sat within it were the spiritual descendants of the few Western Bishops that sat in the Council of Nicea, in 325, and part of the outcome of that fervor which left the great Apostles of Christ to go into the whole world and preach the Gospel to every creature. Rome may to her pleasure assail Anglican orders. Others may belittle them as unnecessary to fullest church order, but there was the great solid fact. If it had been the custom of the Church to hold such meetings once

Hon. L. P. Brodeur Denies Story About the Danger of Laurier's Defeat

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine this morning positively denied the story published in this morning's Gazette stating that in his speech at the Soulanges convention he said that if the Conservatives carried more than ten seats in the Province of Quebec the Laurier Government would be defeated.

"I never made any such statement," said Mr. Brodeur.

Mr. A. Bergevin, who was at the Soulanges convention, also positively denied that any such statement had been made by the minister or by any other speaker.

Fourteen Persons Killed at Berlin by Elevated Trains in Collision

Berlin, Sept. 26.—Two trains on the Berlin elevated railway were in collision early this afternoon. As a result fourteen persons are dead, while many sustained injuries.

The accident was caused by a misplaced signal. One of the cars, which was [illegible] with passengers, was thrown to the street forty feet below. It was shattered beyond recognition. The greatest mortality was in this car.

The police were quickly at the scene, and the work of extricating the dead and wounded was begun. Ambulances [illegible] the injured to hospitals.

BLOOD DISEASES

Guaranteed Cured or No Pay.

If you ever had any contracted or hereditary blood disease, you are never safe until the virus or poison has been removed from the system. You may have had some disease years ago, but now and then some symptom alarms you. Some poison still lurks in your system. Can you afford to run the risk of more serious symptoms appearing as the poison multiplies? Beware of mercury or mineral drugs used indiscriminately—they may ruin the system. Twenty years experience in the treatment of these diseases enables us to prescribe specific remedies that will positively cure all blood diseases of the worst character, leaving no bad effects on the system. Our New Method Treatment will purify and enrich the blood, heal up all ulcers, clear the skin, remove bone pains, fallen out hair will grow in, and swollen glands will return to a normal condition, and the patient will feel and look like a different person. All cases we accept for treatment are guaranteed a complete cure if instructions are followed.

RETRENCHMENT IN JAPAN

Economic conditions have been too strong for the Militarists in Japan, and the Government has been compelled to reduce the expenditures which a too hasty and vaulting ambition to take a leading place as a world Power had proposed to make. In some lines the intended expenditure will be expenditure will be entirely abandoned; in others it will be reduced to more modest proportions. A review of the whole situation and of the burdens which its ambitious schemes were imposing on a people scarcely able to bear the ordinary expenditure of the administration has led the Government to the sensible determination to abandon its grandiose programme. By one stroke it has abandoned an authorized expenditure of $75,000,000 for military and naval purposes.

In this as in other things, Japan has set an example which might well be followed by some of the European Powers engaged in ceaseless efforts to build up enormous armaments, burdening their own people and forcing similar expenditures on their neighbors as a matter of self-defence. Only yesterday the despatches from Europe gave particulars of the launching of two great battleships, which will cost something like $20,000,000. This game of beggar-my-neighbor, while ruinous in itself, is almost an incentive to war as a possible, although hazardous, way of ending this reckless international competition.

THE PANAMA CANAL

The report recently issued by the Commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the progress being made in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the conditions in the canal zone generally, seems to be a most satisfactory character. The report pays a high tribute to the military engineers now in charge of the work, and fully justifies the change which was made in employing them in place of the civil engineers to whom the work was originally entrusted. Among other things the improvement in the sanitary conditions in the zone has been remarkable. While under the administration of the French company the locality was one of the most pestilent spots on earth, the conditions are now so good that the public health returns compare favourably with the tables of mortality in cities in the temperate zone. Yellow fever has entirely disappeared; a notable achievement.

The report shows that the actual work of construction has proceeded most satisfactorily. In the opinion of the Commissioners the United States is getting full value for every dollar expended. When the absence of rainfall last winter permitted the maximum amount of work to be done, no less than two and one-third million yards of rock and earth were moved each day. As far as appears the work actually accomplished has exceeded, rather than fallen short of, the estimates—a remarkable result when the whole circumstances connected with such an undertaking as this are taken into account. According to a statement in the Commission's report, the engineers in charge of the work estimate that the canal will be completed and open for traffic within five years.

AN ERRONEOUS IDEA

The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the possibility of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men, is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward developments in the direction which they have come—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australians.

URBAN LIVING AND THE GENERAL HEALTH

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being poured into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-mined submitted a report covering the matter which is distinctly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation, and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

LIQUOR AND LAW

Hostility to the saloon has grown rapidly of late years. And those who know the liquor trade are beginning to find the cause. Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Journal, an American trade paper, says that the constant law-breaking saloon-keepers has discredited their business and made "personal liberty" a term of reproach. Saloons have been run in defiance of law and decency, and it seems now as if they are doomed to total extinction except in the large cities.

The article continues:—"We do not mean that all saloons or the majority of saloons have been conducted in a disreputable manner, but we do mean that a sufficient percentage of such places have been badly conducted, that is, have been disorderly, have sold to intoxicated men, have sold to women and to minors, have conducted gambling adjuncts, have kept open after legal hours, and on Sundays, to create a hostile sentiment that has crystalized into a war of extermination. We realize that this is a big admission, but the facts demand the admission that our trade may properly grasp the situation."

Fortunately, in Ontario the saloon is not recognized at all. Every bar must be a portion of a hotel. So, while some of the irregularities mentioned by The Journal have not developed here, others have. There is too much selling after hours in this Province, too little respect altogether for the law.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 30,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, as far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment sand that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of their occupation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allottees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtue? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he argues forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home, for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in fields, mines, factories, ships. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of interoceanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of cities and slums, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute all modern progress to the superior few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the teacher, the engineer, the physician, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most attractive. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless macadam road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could be run without horses with all the troublesome adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for those vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea Bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Even the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1906 the motor-car works stock was quoted at close on 600 per cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turin and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing craze, a donkey engine was introduced under the name of "Fabbrica Italiano Automobili Torino," the initials of which spell "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of 800,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $3,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,000 more; but in 1902 it made a gain of some $1,000, and in the next year it gained $18,205. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 6 per cent. and in 1905 the net profit was shown to be $427,236, and it paid a 20 per cent. dividend.

This great prosperity led on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divided the old shares of $40 into 8 new shares of $5. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1906, they were quoted worth $240, at the end of Jan., 1907, the quotation was $280 per share, at the end of February $360, and at the end of March $440. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $460 per share, or 92 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinians bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $600 and upward." At this juncture the directors, in the belief that a share of $460 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $2 (10 lire); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (100 lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound rapidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1906 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,-667,600, a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $160,000, which had been inflated to $1,800,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 400 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 66 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 56 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car accessories, with a nominal capital of $28,222,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were humb-fun d unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Itala" make, hard hit by the crisis, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,184,560, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past; and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.84, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1906, stood at $150, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $52, in August to $40, in October to $16, in April, 1908, to $15, in May to $6.90 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $20. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fraudulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 1906, which showed a net profit of $1,067,416. The rival manufactories, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock Exchange madness, are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all cities which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars; and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapse.

It's a pity when sick men drug the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak Stomach means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Any way test the Restorative 48 hours. Synopsis of Canadian North-west

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys surely point to weak kidney nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organs itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Bright's or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommend and sell

THE LAND OF GRAVES.

Ancient Egyptians Believed in Constant Reminders of Death.

To the Egyptian death was but the beginning of a career of adventure and experiences compared with which the most vivid emotions of this life were tame. He lived with the fear of death before his eyes. Everything around him reminded him of that dreadful initiation into the mysteries of the tremendous after life for which his present existence was but a preparation. His cemeteries were not hidden away in remote suburbs; his dead were not covered with mere grassy mounds or a slab of stone. The whole land was his graveyard; its whole art was of the mortuary. "Are there no graves in Egypt that thou hast brought us into the wilderness to die?" asked the Israelites in derision, and we may believe that Moses winced at the sarcasm.

Egypt is the land of graves, and the whole energy of the people that could be spared from keeping life together was devoted to death. The mightiest tombs in the world—the pyramids—were raised upon the deaths of multitudes of toiling slaves. The hills were honeycombed passages and galleries, chambers, pits, all painfully excavated in honor of the illustrious dead and sculptured and painted with elaborate skill to make them fit habitations for his ghost.

Wherever he looked the Egyptian beheld preparations for the guilt turning point of existence. The mason was squaring blocks for the tomb chamber; the potter molded images of the gods or bowls and jars to be placed in the grave for the protection or refreshment of the Ka, exhausted with the ordeals of the underworld; the sculptor and painter were at work upon the walls of the funeral chamber, illustrating the scenes through which the ghost was to pass or depicting the industrious life of the departed.

The very temples which cluster along the levels beside the Nile were in a sense but vestibules to the tombs in the hills behind. The sacred lake, now the weedy, picturesque haunt of waterfowl, was then the scene of solemn ferryings of the dead. The temple walls were covered with the terrors of the judgment to come. The houses of the living, indeed, were built of perishing mud, but the homes of the dead and the shrines where supplication was made to the gods who ruled their fate were made to last forever. On these all the strength, the science and the artistic skill of the ancient Egyptians were essentially lavished.—London Standard.

The Greatest Man.

Who is the greatest man who has ever lived? The question went round a dinner table, and controversy raged from the fish onward. There were two who plumped for Julius Caesar, two more for Napoleon; one, thinking of statues, said Shakespeare, and somebody else, who did not get a hearing at all, murmured Buddha at intervals, while most of the people present who did not know Greek said Aeschylus. But Aristotle won easily. It was not a particularly scholarly assemblage, and one wondered rather how many of Aristotle's enthusiastic devotees could have quoted accurately from him—had ever read him, indeed—since they left college. And all the while probably the greatest man of all ages is pegging away among us unnoticed, unrecognized, while we snapshot and interview all the little men or go back to some one who has been dead long enough for us to find out that we may safely praise him.—London Chronicle.

Practical Spelling.

"Look here, Lucy," exclaimed Mr. Hardapple; "this is no time to be practicing on the piano. It's time to prepare dinner."

"But, pa, I am interested to-night," posted Lucy as she pounded the keys.

"Interested in scales, eh? Well, I've a task for you. Go down in the kitchen and help your ma scale fish."—Detroit Tribune.

Their Achievements.

"He had three daughters. One married a French chauffeur"—

"I see! Quite romantic."

"The second married an Indian, a descendant of a chieftain"—

"I see! Quite aboriginal."

"But the third married a plain American business man."

"H'm! Merely eccentric, I should say."—Puck.

Accounted For.

Mrs. J.'s patience was much tried by a servant who had the habit of standing around with her mouth open. One day as the maid waited upon the table her mouth was open, as usual, and her mistress said:

"Mary, your mouth is open."

"Yessum," replied Mary; "I opened it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Long Story.

Asquam—Say, old man, what did your wife say to you when you got in last night?

Wycomb—Oh, are you just starting on your two weeks' vacation?

Asquam—No. Why?

Wycomb—Then you won't have time to listen. I can't talk so fast as she did.—Houston Post.

SUNSET AT GUAYAQUIL.

There Is No Twilight, No Interval Between Daylight and Dark.

The days and nights at Guayaquil are of equal length. The sun knocks off promptly at 6 o'clock in the evening and gets up at 6 in the morning with equal regularity the whole year around. There is no twilight, no gloaming, no interval whatever between daylight and dark—only a brilliant illumination, the sudden disappearance of a red ball into a blue ocean, a spread of flame color over all the western sky for a few minutes and a purple haze in the east.

Then the surface of the ocean, like the heavens, is lighted with millions of strange and shifting stars, for the water is so impregnated with phosphorus that each tiny wave is tipped with light, and the foam that follows in the wake of the vessel is often like a stream of fire. Sometimes you can see porpoises swimming along the bow of the vessel livid with phosphorescent light and followed by a streak of sparks like a comet's tail.

The Southern Cross, with the right arm tipped out at proper angle, lies straight ahead in the midst of myriads of unknown worlds that look strange to those accustomed to the northern constellations. Under the left arm is a large black spot in the heavens, brightened by only a single modest star, which the sailors call "the devil's dinner bag." Over the stern of the vessel in the early evening you can plainly distinguish the familiar constellation of the Great Bear, but it goes to bed with the children.

HIS SERVICES.

What Became of All the Bills He Introduced in Congress.

"Yes, my fellow citizens," said the political candidate, "if you have paid any attention to the work of congress you will have noticed that during the past session I introduced twenty-two bills, each of which was intended to benefit this community. I stand before you today with the proud consciousness of having served you faithfully and to the best of my ability. These twenty-two bills would, if they had been passed, have made this one of the most favored districts on God's green earth, and"—

"Oh," yelled a man in the gallery, "we know you introduced 'em, all right, but what happened to 'em after that?"

"Gentlemen, I appeal to your sense of honor. Do you consider it fair that I should be interrupted in this manner? Is it right that I should"—

"There ain't no harm in answerin' the question, is there?" asked another of the statesman's hearers.

"Well, sir, I will tell you what became of those bills, my fellow citizens. Every one of them was printed in the Congressional Record, where, if you will look over the files, you may find them today. But to revert to the real question, gentlemen, I do not hesitate to promise that no man living in this, the most splendid district in our grand old state, shall appeal to me in vain if you shall deem it best to send me back to Washington, where I have served you with such signal ability."

SAILORS' UNIFORMS.

Copied From England and Not Representative of America.

All are familiar with the American man-of-war sailor's suit, but has any one ever stopped to consider how he comes by it and what the origin of it is? With the exception of the fit itself and the stars in the corner of the collar the whole suit is copied from the English. One would have thought that by this time the American nation would have fallen upon some original costume for its navy in some way more representative of America.

In the early days of the British navy it was still the custom to tie the hair in a cue after well greasing it, but much annoyance was felt by the men in consequence of the oil getting on the rough serge of their jumpers or blouses. This caused the blue collar of the same material as the jumper to be added, but without much success, as the collar looked quite as untidy, so at length the idea of putting the blue drill one over the serge was adopted, the drill collar being a separate appendage and therefore easily washed and kept clean. The lanyard was worn to represent the ropes and rigging of the ship, and the jackknife indicated that (to be paradoxical) the bluejacket's object in life was death—to his enemy.

In those days the neck was exposed, but as time went on and more thought was given to the welfare of the men this was found to be injurious to the health; hence the substitute of the white neck flannel, white being used to give the effect of the uncovered neck.

The two rows of white braid at the top of the cuff represent England and Ireland, the one row at the bottom showing that Scotland had not become annexed. The rows of braid on the collar represent wholly and solely the victories of Nelson.

Funerals in Peru.

According to social usage, women in Peru cannot attend funerals, and they do not appear at weddings unless they are very intimate friends. When a funeral procession passes through the streets the coffin is carried upon the shoulders of the pallbearers, who are followed by an empty hearse drawn by two, four or six horses, according to the means of the mourners and their desire for display. All the male members of the family and friends of the deceased follow on foot, with a line of empty carriages behind them. As long as they are in the presence of the dead it is considered a proper and necessary evidence of respect to walk. After the body has been committed to the grave those who attend the funeral are brought home in carriages.

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-em's never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes, by word of mouth from one to another. NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope 'Tender for Construction', will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 26th day of September, 1910, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Fraquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 104.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Fraquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 160 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of material and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,

P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

Another False Alarm Yesterday

The fire brigade had a bully run yesterday afternoon. The chief sent a man out to test all the towers, and when he sent in the alarm from box 35, the thing stuck, and No. 15 was sounded at the fire hall. The brigade immediately turned out and made a great run to that locality where Chief Howard discovered the mistake. While there No. 45 was sounded, and the firemen hurried back in answer to the new call, but it was caused by the man working at No. 35, and the brigade had their run for nothing. The chief, however, stated that he would take no chances on a false alarm and would respond every time.

Weary, Worn Out Tired

If You Feel Pearly the Spring this Article is worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health. If the nerves are weak, if the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys fail to work properly, health surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health—the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and thus is well proven in the case of James Burton, of Lewistown. "I had grip and it left me very weak The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depression, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I turned off the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvelous. I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

Afraid to Eat

Girl Starving on Ill-Selected Food

"Several years ago I was actually starving," writes a Mo. girl, "yet dared not eat for fear of the consequences.

"I had suffered from indigestion from overwork, irregular meals and improper food, until at last my stomach became so weak I could eat scarcely any food without great distress.

"Many kinds of food were tried, all with the same discouraging effects. I steadily lost health and strength until I was but a wreck of my former self.

"Having heard of Grape-Nuts and its great merits, I purchased a package, but with little hope that it would help me—I was so discouraged.

"I found it not only appetizing but that I could eat it as I liked and that it satisfied the craving for food without causing distress, and if I may use the expression, "it filled the bill."

"For months Grape-Nuts was my principal article of diet. I felt from the very first that I had found the right way to health and happiness, and my anticipations were fully realized.

"With its continued use I regained my usual health and strength Today I am well and can eat anything I like, yet Grape-Nuts food forms a part of my bill of fare."

"There's a Reason."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Appeal Dismissed

The Division Court yesterday dismissed the appeal of the defendant in the action of J. R. Heinta against W. H. Collier, of Peterborough, from the judgment of Chief Justice Falconbridge. Plaintiff, who is a Buffalo broker, with an office in Peterborough, was awarded $3.-158.10, which the Divisional Court upholds.

northern Quebec and Ontario and the Northwest. Already the Grand Trunk Pacific was moving the grain of the Northwest, to the English market, and the line from Atlantic to Pacific, a second transcontinental railway, would be completed in three or four years. Canada's credit was not at a low ebb, as had been stated by Mr. Borden. One hundred and forty-three millions of British capital had been brought to Canada in the past seven months of this year.

Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., was given a hearty reception, and pointed out that the policy of the Opposition speakers throughout their tour was to blind the eyes of the electors to the real issues of the day, by making their campaign one of slander and abuse.

Bishop Carmichael's Last Sermon.

in every ten years throughout the various national churches from their foundation in the Anglo-Saxon Church and Church of England, 1031, such meetings would have been held, or taking the British Church as the starting point in 1059. Within that room was the outcome of the oldest British institution—older than Parliament, older than United England—first the British branch, then the Anglo-Saxon branch, and then England's branch of the Catholic Church of the Lord Jesus Christ as seen in the ordinary succession of its bishops.

Another thought was born in upon one, here was a world-wide gathering of leaders and rulers of one branch of the Christian Church met together, not at the call of a great State, not to coerce through anathema erring members, not to publish drastic canons, but to strive and put into action for the good of the whole body, that greatest of all powers that a church can wield, that moral and spiritual power meant for the good of all; contained in the words of divine promise;

THE GREAT LAMBETH COUNCIL.

"Lo, I am with you always to the end of the world."

I do not say this to make little of the great councils of the Church which exercise powers of far-reaching ecclesiastical legislation, for I would venture to prophesy that the day is not far distant when the whole of at least the British and Colonial churches will combine to make the Lambeth Council, the great ultimate body of England's church, but I do say that a church that can gather its rulers together from all the world, apart from the exercise of legislative commands, or even claiming the unused right to legislate authoritatively; gives testimony that should cheer every heart as to the tremendous spirit and moral power of such a church. It disposes of the oft-repeated accusation that the strength of England's Church lies mainly in its connection with the State and Royal Court. For here there was not a shadow of State control. Royalty, save in gracious reception was in no sense present, hence it might be regarded as the freest, and because free, the strongest assemblage of bishops ever called together in the annals of the Christian world. To one taking part in it, the very weakest could not fail to realize, that if the day should ever come—which God forbid—that rude hands should tear from England's Church the purple and fine linen which a State connection almost necessitates, or a reckless policy of spoliation should sequestrate endowments laid up in long centuries by the loving faith and loyalty of her children—that nothing of this nature could ever tear from the Church the divine gifts which God has given her and not man. Her creed is in herself, her strength in the divine promise, "Lo, I am with you always to the end of the world."

HARMLESS FIGURE OF SPEECH.

One other thought. It is oftentimes said that the Church of England can never grasp or because of the most unhappy divisions that mostly in her front and town bosom—a figure of speech and like many such figures—blood-curdling, but too much so to be harmful. Of course, there were high church bishops, low church bishops, a few broad church bishops present, in that assemblage, but I defy anyone that did not know the personal views of such beforehand, to classify them under these headings, from the drift of their speech or utterances or written words. These bishops were there to do God's work, spiritually, ecclesiastically, socially;

Girls of Today are Weaklings

Few Possess the Vitality and Girlish Beauty of the Olden Times.

Never before was physical health and vigor so highly esteemed and so sickly wife, and the woman who wishes to enjoy the pleasures of life should spare no effort to maintain perfect health.

Is your daughter growing up strong and ruddy? Has she strength to drink in greedily all the pleasures that youth so zealously seeks—or is she compelled to use the street car instead of enjoying the delightful exercise of walking—does she after the ball arise refreshed and vigorous, or is she exhausted, indifferent, and perhaps irritable?

When strength and vigor can be so easily maintained by Ferrozone, when the glow of health is so quickly brought to the cheeks and elasticity to the step, it is plainly a mother's duty to see that Ferrozone is on hand to assist her daughter back to health.

Upon the wake of Ferrozone quickly follows a stream of rich, nourishing blood which imparts that power and surplus energy so earnestly desired by those in ill-health.

Stop and think what this means for your daughter—certainly a great deal, and it can be accomplished by Ferrozone.

Every growing girl and young woman derives enormous benefit in many ways from this nutritive, vitalizing tonic.

It is specially suited for young women and is a guarantee of health and regularity as long as it is used.

Ferrozone is free from alcohol and perfectly safe to use. Prepared in the form of a chocolate-coated tablet and sold in 50c. boxes or six for $2.50. at all dealers.

COMMON SENSE

Leads most intelligent people to use only medicines of known composition. Therefore it is that Dr. Pierce's medicines, the makers of which print every ingredient entering into them upon the bottle wrappers and attest its correctness under oath, are daily gaining in favor. The composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is open to everybody. Dr. Pierce being desirous of having the search light of investigation turned fully upon his formulas, being confident that the better the composition of his medicines is known the more will their great curative merits be appreciated. Being wholly made of the active medicinal principles extracted from native forest roots, by exact processes original with Dr. Pierce, and without the use of a drop of alcohol, triple-refined and chemically pure glycerine being used instead in extracting and preserving the curative virtues residing in the roots employed, these medicines are entirely free from the objection of doing harm by creating an appetite for either alcoholic beverages or habit-forming drugs. Examine the formula on their bottle wrappers—the same as sworn to by Dr. Pierce, and you will find that his "Golden Medical Discovery," the great blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages (no medicine will do that) yet does cure all those catarrhal conditions of head and throat, weak stomach, torpid liver and bronchial troubles, weak lungs and hang-on-coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated lead up to and finally terminate in consumption.

Take the "Golden Medical Discovery" in time and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial. Don't expect miracles. It won't do supernatural things. You must exercise your patience and persevere in its use for a reasonable length of time to get its full benefits. The ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed have the unqualified endorsement of scores of medical leaders—better than any amount of lay, or non-professional, testimonials. They are not given away to be experimented with but are sold by all dealers in medicines at reasonable prices.

irrespective of all party bonds, badges or watchwords and conscious of the tremendous trust that God had committed to them. That recognition of a "trust" seemed ever to be present—a sense that they were there to preserve intact "the faith once delivered to the saints," whilst seeking to apply it wisely to the needs of modern times, but also such a great deep sense of the divine reality of the trust that would not permit of the bartering of one iota of it for the gain of popular or personal advancement.

PAN-ANGLICAN CONGRESS.

A short review now of the Pan-Anglican Congress—a most unique gathering, unparalled in the history of the Church, a giant mass of divinely touched life pouring into one receiver from all parts of the world, and with but one object before it—the glory of God and the welfare and extension of His Church.

Unquestionably there was to a fervent mind, something divinely solemn in the assemblies. The mighty crowds, the calm majesty of the devotional spirit characteristic of the widespread meetings, the unobtrusive yet decidedly churchly tone that, like blood indeed in veins, ran through all the organisms, the perfect absence of all sensational effort in the working out of the great project the palpable delight with which references to the old Gospel, the old Sacraments, the old Bible were received by giant crowds of intelligent and well educated people, the awfully solemn sound of supplication, and the glorious outbursts of united praise—who that has ever heard and seen such things, can ever forget them while memory holds its seat.

As day after day passed onward, there seemed to be no abatement of the magnificent spread of enthusiasm that marked the progress of the open sessions, and that culminated in the noble service of thanksgiving and offering held in St. Paul's Cathedral. Grander, because more ornate services have been offered in that noble church wherein no service to God, however simple, can ever appear insignificant, but I doubt if a more remarkable service was ever held. The thrilling influence of its devoutness; the beauty and solemnity of its simple ritual, the soul-inspiring power of its music and the constantly recurring sense of silence broken only by a single voice; that again and again awed the soul as at times silence will, causing one present almost to wonder whether the vast naves were not empty. And all this, not the result of carefully planned effects, for the service apart from an anthem of striking beauty, was "simplicity itself," but because that giant congregation was surely spell-bound by one thought; "This is no other than the House of God, and this is the Gate of Heaven."

LESSONS TO BE LEARNED.

Taking these two great meetings together, these lessons, I think may be learnt.

1st Religion. The work of God, the Holy Ghost acting on the soul of man—belief in the revelation and inspiration of God's word; an earnest desire to extend the gospel throughout the world; personal piety; and a devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ that I earnestly believe would lead millions to hail Him with joy inexpressibly if He appeared in the world tomorrow—these things are not mere relics of the past; they are as real and vigorous as politics are "real" or business real. As one of the greatest newspapers in the world, in describing the Congress, said; "The spectacle of this more than Imperial Conference of federated churches has meant nothing less than a revelation and a revolution in many minds not accustomed to devote any very special reflection to spiritual things." It was a "revelation"—the revealing of the fact that perhaps never in the whole history of religion was a more spontaneous offering of faith and fealty laid at the feet of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world—than that offered by the Pan-Anglican Congress.

2.—Again—the Anglican branch of God's Church; its faith and allegiance to the Master; the power of the Mother to call her World—spread children to the hearth of the old home and the response of the children in joyous answer to the call; the burning desire of the whole assembled family to do greater things for God than ever it has done,—these are not relics of the past. laurel wreaths worn by others and worn by us in quiet ease. No thank God, this is the Church of England of today—the guardian of all the inherited truth that God has given her, a sentry keeping watch and ward over treasures committed to her charge—"A Good Soldier of Jesus Christ, ready to suffer hardships, ready to face difficulties, ready to go anywhere, ready to live unto the Lord or die unto the Lord, so long as the name of the Great Captain of her Salvation may be made known unto the sons of man.

Special Offer to Ladies

I will send ten days' treatment of the famous Orange Lily FREE to every sufferer who writes for it. This home treatment cures without the aid of a physician. It cures female weakness, leucorrhoea, tumors, cancers, in their earlier stages, displacements, lacerations, painful periods, pains in back, sides of abdomen, bearing down sensations, and all irregularities. Read the following letters and be convinced of the efficiency of this truly wonderful remedy.

Merlin, Ont., March 27, 1902.

Mrs. K. F. Currah, Windsor, Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Currah, your letter of the 20th received today. Please find enclosed $5.00 for 6 bottles of Orange Lily. I would not think of discontinuing its use, and I know that 6 more bottles will produce a permanent cure, Even now I am an entirely new creature since using O.L. At present I know of two other cases the same as mine (long standing leucorrhoea) and as you give some trial bottles free, if you would send me a few I would gladly hand them to my friends, for I know it will produce the same good results in every case. I intend sending you my photo and testimonial letter later, for I feel we cannot say too much in favor of Orange Lily, and know if more of same was used among suffering womankind the surgeon's knife would be cheated of its many baptisms in the blood of suffering women. Hoping God may ever bless and prosper you and Dr. Coonley in the noble work, believe me, ever your sincere friend, Miss R. McK., Merlin, Post Office, Kent County, Ont.

Kingston, Ont., July 15, 1908.

Dear Friend.—Some time ago I wrote and told you the great good your wonderful medicine had done for me. Since then I have continued to use it, and after five years of terrible suffering and undergoing three operations, I am completely cured by Orange Lily, after using it for eight months. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Knowing, as I do, that so many women in this city suffer as I did, and knowing what it did for me, I would like to take the agency. Will you please send me instructions and terms (agents)?

Gratefully yours,

Miss G. T., 359 Brock street.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumbrance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its premise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 60 feet wide for a distance of 120 feet at 170 feet depth; extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $23.00 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

THE CONGREGATION SAID FAREWELL TO THEIR PASTOR

Presented Rev. Wm. Major with an Address and Roll Top Desk--Social Evening at All Saints'

A very interesting event took place at All Saints' church last night when the congregation gathered to say farewell to their rector, the Rev. Wm. Major. In spite of the rain there was a large number present, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. It was four years ago that the reverend gentleman came to Peterborough to take charge of All Saints' parish. His work here has been most fruitful and he will leave a host of friends behind who have been greatly assisted by him. The members of the congregation appreciated his efforts here and as a mark of their esteem took occasion last night to present him with a handsome roll top desk, and an address. The address and presentation was made by the wardens, Messrs. Edgar and Dawson. Mr. Major in reply thanked the congregation of All Saints and made a very impressive address. Refreshments were served and a couple of hours were spent in social chat and saying good bye to Mr. and Mrs. Major.

Explosion of Gas Blew Out Both Ends of House at St. Catharines

St. Catharines, Sept. 28.— Natural gas caused another disastrous explosion here last night, and the surprise is that no fatalities resulted.

Two substantial two-storey brick dwelling on Niagara street of John Reece, was practically demolished, and is now little better than a tottering ruin. The force of the explosion was something marvelous. The whole front and back of the house was blown out, and the furniture in some of the rooms was sent flying clear across the street.

John Reece, who occupies the house with his family, was the only person injured. The other members of the family were away, and Mr. Reece had gone out for a while last evening. As he intended to return shortly he left the lamps burning in the house. It appears coal oil was used for lighting purposes by the Reeces.

A WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

About ten o'clock, Mr. Reece went home. He opened the front door of the house, and had just time to step into the hallway and shut the door when a terrific explosion occurred. The whole front of the building collapsed, as if a giant hand had thrown it down, and Reece was thrown with great force. He had a wonderful escape from death, as the bricks and mortar fell on top of him, but examination at the hospital revealed the fact that he was only somewhat bruised about the head, limbs and body. As far as can be learned, there are no internal injuries, and Reece is quite conscious and doing nicely today.

FIRE BRIGADE CALLED.

The noise of the explosion soon brought crowds of people to the scene. A slight fire had started among the woodwork and smashed furniture, and an alarm was sent into the fire department, which quickly responded.

At first it was thought that no body had been in the house, but presently the groans of Reece attracted attention, and he was quickly pulled out from beneath a pile of bricks and mortar, and hurried to the hospital.

The explosion had demolished partitions as if they had been glass. Furniture was thrown out into the back yard, and smashed to kindling wood.

The smell of leaking natural gas had been noticed in the house, but it was not so strong as to cause anxiety. Coming in Reece did not notice it particularly.

It is likely that this accident will lead to a strict investigation, as the Brantford explosion and this one coming so closely upon one another have created alarm.

Three-fourths of the residents of this city use natural gas, and in a vast number of them it appears impossible to prevent leaking somewhere, probably owing to the strong pressure.

A Home Remedy That Reduces Fat

Would you like to have a nice firm figure, but escape the tiresome, bone-breaking exercise or the soul-sickening diet of the old-time plan of reducing excess flesh?

Then go to the druggist and ask for this inexpensive mixture; 1-2 ounce Marmola, 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 4 3-4 ounces Syrup Simplex. Take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime, and in a few weeks you can be as fit physically as a fawn. Mix these ingredients at home if you wish, but see that you get the Marmola in a sealed package. When fresh it acts quicker.

Machinery to Make Connections

Lindsay Wants to Borrow Peterborough's Machine

Mr. Hammond, superintendent of the waterworks, will go to Peterborough tomorrow for the special filling and connected apparatus owned by the Water Commissioners of that city. A hydrant is to be installed in front of the power house and the pipe leading to the building must be cut. Another 8-in. connection has to be made at the waterworks for Mr. Bridge and this machine will also have to be used there. The main feature about this apparatus is the short space of time that it takes to do the work, and the good results secured and that the connection can be made with the full pressure on. —Lindsay Free Press.

Hurtubise and Mohl to Meet Friday Night

The sporting fraternity of Peterborough will have another opportunity of seeing some thing good in the wrestling line on Friday night of this week when Gene Hurtubise will go up again Fritz Mohl, of Buffalo, at the Brock street rink. Gene has a big proposition ahead of him, and it looks as if he would have a hard time with the big German, but the local boy has shown that he knows a thing or two about the mat game, and can be depended upon to give Mohl a lively argument. If Mohl wins he takes fifty per cent. of the gross receipts and twenty-five if he loses. If Hurtubise wins he gets fifty per cent., but gets nothing if he fails to beat the Buffalonian.

The match is best two out of three falls.

The preliminaries will be two boxing bouts, and they will be good ones, too. Cormey Burns, who is an clever with the gloves as most of them, will meet Tommy Daly, of Brantford, in a four-round go. Daly has appeared here before, and is a clever opponent of this fistic game. The boys will put up a great bout. Two local boys will furnish the other preliminary. George Lillie will meet another good one in a four-round argument. Lillie is fast and scientific with the mitts and will stack up against a clever opponent.

It will be an evening of great sport and should draw a capacity house.

Peterborough Fair Directors' Meeting

Accounts Not All In--Financial Statement Not Ready--Vote of Thanks Passed

It is strange how negligent some people are in sending in their bills when they know that the money is easily to be had. But when there is a doubt of there being any funds these bills of all kinds are forthcoming. The fair directors requested that all accounts against them be sent in so that the business could be settled up, but a number of people failed to comply with the request and as a result the directors met last night and were unable to accomplish anything. The secretary read over the bills he had received, but there are others. There are also some monies to collect yet, and a financial statement will not be presented until the next meeting, although the secretary will send a copy of the finances of the fair to each director.

A vote of thanks was passed by the the directors to the local press for the yeoman service rendered through their news columns.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. for services rendered.

There was considerable discussion as to special attractions for next year and fire works and a military tattoo were among the features mentioned.

Crowd of Over 300,000 Condemns the New English Licensing Bill

London, Sept. 28.—Of the great demonstrations held in Hyde Park in recent years, that of Sunday to protest against the Licensing bill was by far the largest, but it lacked the enthusiasm which was manifest at the other gatherings, particularly that of the Suffragettes.

The crowd yesterday was estimated at 300,000, filling the open space which stretches from Hyde Park corner to the Marble Arch. They came to this section in fourteen processions, and in countless groups from all the nearby counties and all parts of the metropolis.

Close to two hundred special trains brought in those from the outside districts, who numbered fully 60,000, and who joined in the various processions, which were accompanied by one hundred bands.

Ninety speakers declaimed against the bill at different central points for an hour or more, and at a signal sound a resolution condemning the bill was proposed and carried with a great outburst of cheering.

TWENTY DROWNED OFF BRITISH SHIP

The Crew of Loch Finlas, Wrecked in Australia All Perished but Four--Picked Up by a Passing Steamer

Launceton, Tasmania, Sept. 28.—The British ship Loch Finlas from Port Pirie, South Australia for Callao, was wrecked off Foster Island at daylight yesterday and twenty of the crew of the twenty-four were drowned. The other four of the crew were picked up by a passing steamer.

Foster Island lies a short distance off the northeast coast of Tasmania and it is surrounded by dangerous shoals. A strong gale, accompanied by a high sea, was blowing and the vessel struck thereon and soon sank. The four survivors report that the second mate became insane during the storm and jumped overboard.

Seven Thousand Died of Cholera--Death Rate is 30 and 35 in 100

St. Petersburg, Sept. 28.—Since and some of the higher government officials, however, which recently had been directed towards arousing the municipal authorities to action, have resulted in an appreciable betterment of the sanitary conditions, and a consequent decrease in the disease, as shown by the figures given out yesterday. For the twenty-four hours ending at noon, the number of new cases in the city was 268, and the number of deaths 143, as compared with 312 new cases and 153 deaths for the previous 24 hours. The death rate has been lower than during the previous epidemics—between thirty and thirty-five, against fifty in 1892. The people are much encouraged by the improvement revealed by the latest figures.

California Diver Fought for Life with Huge Devil Fish

Was Grasped by Three Giant Tentacles - Was Down in Wreck

Slashed the Monster to Death

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—Wrapped in the tentacles of a giant devil fish, Martin Lund, a diver employed by the Coast Wrecking Company, fought for his life in the hold of the wrecked steamer Pomona, which lies in thirty feet of water in Fort Ross Cove, off the Marin county coast. Lund arrived in this city after an experience which comes to few men, and will enjoy a vacation before again donning a diver's dress.

COULD NOT HAUL HIM UP.

The devil fish had evidently entered the vessel's hold during the night, and Lund was at work some time before he became aware of its presence. A gigantic tentacle four inches in diameter first gripped one leg. Before Lund could realize what had happened another encircled his thigh. The diver began to chop frantically at the rubber-like fiends, and at the same time signalled to the barge above that he wished to ascend. Unable to free himself in time two more tentacles squirmed out of the darkness, and one twined about his neck. The efforts of the men on the surface to comply with his signal threatened to pull off his helmet, and he was forced to signal them to desist.

SLASHED HEAD INTO PIECES.

With only his left arm free he hacked at the tentacles until they were partially crippled, but he was being drawn towards the deadly beak when he saw the outline of the devil fish's body. Plunging suddenly toward it, he drove his knife with all his force into the head, repeating the blow until he had slashed it into sections. In its death throes, the octopus tightened its tentacles until until the diver was almost crushed in its embrace. Lund then cut himself free, and was brought to the surface in a fainting condition. Another diver brought some of the severed tentacles to the surface, and it is hoped to raise the body, and bring it to this city for exhibition.

Charity Board will Meet with Other Institutions

Object is to Have All Charity Distributed through Central Board's Agent

Proposition from King's Daughters

Next winter the distribution of charity in Peterborough will be done systematically and entirely different to last year when there was so much overlapping. The Central Charity Board, an institution maintained by the city, will be the headquarters and the scheme is to have all charity distributed through the relief officer.

The charity board met in the city clerk's office last night when two or three cases were disposed of, and then the relief officer, Mr. F. W. Miller, reported to the board that representatives of the King's Daughters had been to see him in reference to the charity question. They stated that last year there was far too much overlapping and they would like to have the work done this year systematically. They suggested that a joint meeting be held and some plan agreed upon.

The chairman of the board said that two or three years ago, Mr. Miller had advocated that policy but that the other societies refused to fall in with the idea. He would be pleased to have a joint meeting not only with the King's Daughters, but with all the charitable institutions in the city.

It was therefore decided that the chairman should arrange for such a gathering and also that the ministers of all the churches be requested to attend. The object is for all institutions or churches or individuals who have charity to send it to Mr. Miller or to communicate with him so that he can keep a record of those being benefitted. Last year a grocer sent assistance to one man and when his driver arrived at the house it was found that the party had some nine fowl, turkeys, chickens and ducks, hanging in the woodshed. Needless to say the driver returned with his provisions. A great deal of this kind of thing existed last year and while some were in need others lived almost in luxury.

Leaves Thursday

Rev. Wm. Major and family will leave on Thursday morning for Montreal, where Mr. Major's field of labor will be in the future. He will preach both morning and evening next Sunday in St. George's church. His many friends will send their best wishes with him and his family.

Very Prevalent in Young Women

A Condition of "White-Blood-disease" Is Fast Increasing.

It is always associated with languor and sensitiveness to cold. All the mucous surfaces, such as the gums, lips and eyelids, are blanched and waxy looking, the skin is pallid and colorless.

The pulse becomes rapid and feeble; there is also loss of appetite and enfeebled digestion, palpitation of the heart, breathlessness and tendency to faint. In extreme cases there is complete disappearance of the menstrual flow and dropsical swelling of the limbs.

Physicians know of no remedy so prompt in results as Ferrozone which contains all the elements lacking in debilitated blood.

Ferrozone not only improves the present quality of the blood, but actually forms more blood—the rich, red kind that nourishes and feeds the organs that require assistance.

"About a year ago," writes Mrs. S. G. Stanbope, of Rothsay, "my daughter complained of feeling tired. She was very pale and listless, and kept losing strength until too weak to attend school.

"We read of a similar case, that of Miss Deacent, Stirling, Ont., being cured by Ferrozone, and this induced us to get it for Elaine. It took three boxes of Ferrozone to make any decided improvement, but when six boxes were used my daughter was beginning to be her old self again. It didn't take much longer to make a complete cure. It has made a new girl of Elaine. She has gained ten pounds in weight and looks the picture of perfect health. She is stronger and enjoys the best of spirits."

Every growing girl and young woman can make herself strong and healthy with Ferrozone. Price 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

Annual Meeting of W. A. Association

The annual meeting of the Woman's Art Association was held in the Y.W.C.A. yesterday afternoon, and proved to be exceptionally interesting. The rain kept a large number away although there was a good attendance. The secretary read a very interesting report and the treasurer's statement showed a balance on hand of $76. The reading club's report was read and showed increasing interest in that department.

Mr. Wallace gave a delightful and enjoyable talk on the growth of art in Canada. He was greatly pleased with the progress of the local society and said many nice things of the Woman's Art Association in Canada. The following officers were elected;

President—Mrs. D Hughes-Charles.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. R. Stratton.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Miss Dobie.
Secretary—Miss Bennett.
Treasurer—Mrs. (Dr.) McCullough.

South African Veterans Formed Association

A branch of the South African's Veteran Association has been formed in Peterborough. At a meeting held in Mac's barber shop on Friday night, when officials were elected and other business transacted. The chief object of the association is to protect the veteran's scrip, and it is also hoped that the organization will keep the boys together. An annual banquet will also likely be held.

The following officers were elected;—

Hon. Presidents—T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P. and J. R. Stratton.
Vice-Pres.—Robt. Biggs.
President—Col. Fee.
Secretary—V. Hamilton.
Treasurer—Reginald Turner.

The following were those present at the meeting;—

R. Biggs, George McDonald, J. Pilling, Harry Wilson, Wm. Donevan, Georg. Might, Vance Wilson, Dave Forsyth, F. A. Coates, Ed. Roddy, W. F. Morrison, C. Fee, E. Pierce, W. Ballantyne and V. Hamilton.

The local Association will send several delegates to the big meeting of the veterans to be held in Toronto on October 3rd and 4th.

Men and Horses Receive Electric Shock

Fire was discovered at Green's foundry at the corner of McDonnel and Park streets yesterday afternoon and an alarm was sent in. The blaze was caused by a power wire on the roof which charged the sheeting on the roof. The electricity spread throughout the entire building, and a pile of shavings at the foot of the hoist caught fire and the flames shot up the hoist shaft, but the firemen had little trouble in extinguishing the fire, before much damage was done.

The current spread to the sidewalk on McDonnel street and three of the men from the foundry were knocked down by the shock.

How to Tell

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well.

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore,—that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, color bleaches, spirit droop.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's pills.

"When I was so stooped and back weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills" writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharps twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles and joints, lack of appetite and loss of sleep. Reach the cause. Cure the kidneys. Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands. 25c at all dealers.

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust, Hearty, Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state, read what J. W. Jervell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the trimples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.—They possess mystic power surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health gain. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize delicate glands, search out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today. 25c at all dealers.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The report recently issued by the Commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the progress being made in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the conditions in the canal zone generally, seems to be a most satisfactory character. The report pays a high tribute to the military engineers now in charge of the work, and fully justifies the change which was made in employing them in place of the civil engineers to whom the work was originally entrusted. Among other things the improvement in the sanitary conditions in the zone has been remarkable. While under the administration of the French Company the locality was one of the most pestilent spots on earth, the conditions are now so good that the public health returns compare favourably with the tables of morality in cities in the temperate zone. Yellow fever has entirely disappeared; a notable achievement.

The report shows that the actual work of construction has proceeded most satisfactorily. In the opinion of the Commissioners the United States is getting fair value for every dollar expended. When the absence of rain last winter permitted the maximum amount of work to be done, no less than two and one-third million yards of rock and earth were moved each day. As far as appears the work actually accomplished has exceeded, rather than fallen short of, the estimates—a remarkable result when the whole circumstances connected with such an undertaking as this are taken into account. According to a statement in the Commissioner's report, the engineers in charge of the work estimate that the canal will be completed and open for traffic within five years.

The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the possibility of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men, is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward they have some—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australians.

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being poured into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-minded submitted a report covering the matter which is distinctly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation, and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

Hostility to the saloon has grown rapidly of late years. And those who know the liquor trade are beginning to find the cause. Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Journal, an American trade paper, says that the constant law-breaking saloon-keepers has discredited their business and made "personal liberty" a term of reproach. Saloons have been run in defiance of law and decency, and it seems now as if they are doomed to total extinction except in the large cities.

The article continues:—"We do not mean that all saloons or the majority of saloons have been conducted in a disreputable manner, but we do mean that a sufficient percentage of such places have been badly conducted, that is, have been disorderly, have sold to intoxicated men, have sold to women and to minors, have conducted gambling adjuncts, have kept open after legal hours, and on Sundays, to create a hostile sentiment that has crystalized into a wa of extermination. We realize that this is a big admission, but the facts demand the admission that our trade may properly grasp the situation."

Fortunately, in Ontario the saloon is not recognized at all. Every bar must be a portion of a hotel. So, while some of the irregularities mentioned by The Journal have not developed here, others have. There is too much selling after hours in this Province, too little respect altogether for the law.

The cry of "Back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 200,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, as far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment and that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of their occupation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allotees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtue? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he argues forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home, for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in fields, mines, factories, ships. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of interoceanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of cities and slums, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute all modern progress to the superior few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the teacher, the engineer, the physician, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most attractive. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless metalled road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could by run without horses with all the troublesome adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed, he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for those vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea Bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Even the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1905 the motor-car-works stock was quoted at close on the par cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turinn and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing craze, a donkey engine was introduced under the name of "Fabrica Italiano Automobili Torino," the initials of which spelt "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of 800,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $3,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,000 more; but in 1902 it made a gain of some $12,000, and in the next year it gained $15,000. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 6 per cent. and in 1906 the net profit was shown to be $427,236, and it paid a 20 per cent. dividend.

This great prosperity led on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divided the old shares of $40 into 8 new shares of $5. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1905, they were quoted worth $240, at the end of Jan., 1906, the quotation was $330 per share, at the end of February $340, and at the end of March $460. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $460 per share, or 92 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinians bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $600 and upward." At this juncture, the directors, in the belief that a share at $460 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $2 (10 lire); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (100 lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound rapidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1906 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,067,400, a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $160,000, which had been inflated to $1,600,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 400 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 66 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 56 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car accessoires, with a nominal capital of $28,323,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were jamb-full of unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Itala" make, hard hit by the crisis, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,184,800, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past, and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.84, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1906, stood at $150, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $83, in August to $60, in October to $46, in April, 1908, to $8, in May to $6.90 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $20. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fradulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 1906, which showed a net profit of $1,067,416. The rival manufactories, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock Exchange madness, are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all cities which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars; and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapses.

It's a pity when sick ones drag the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure as soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Buy the property.

Synopsis of Canadian North-west

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible, but I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—found the last ingredient with which Dr Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it unfailingly cures all curable cases of this horrid sore much dreaded disease. Those acid-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the agony of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We will, and in confidence recommend

Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy

"ALL DEALERS"

A MOTHER'S HELPER.

Girls Who Assist in the Small Household Duties.

Most of the little things that a girl can attend to are the tasks which her mother has in mind, but is too busy to carry out. She can see that the house plants are watered every day, and also can cut a blossom now and then for the table. She can plant a few pansy roots in one of her candy boxes, lined with oil paper, and set it on a small platter in the middle of the dining table for a centerpiece.

She can remove the spots that her mother is too busy to take out of the tablecloth between launderings by putting a few drops of hot or cold water, as the case may require, on them. She can keep a little parsley bed of her own, so that meats and vegetables can come to the table with a fresh garnish.

Keeping the rugs in the living room straight can be one of her tasks; also seeing that the window shades are all raised to the same height. When the furniture gets a slight scar she can rub it off with beeswax, a trick which keeps furniture fresh, but which her mother may not have time for.

She can see that the front door plate, the electric light switches and the doorknobs all over the house are kept polished. The smooches on mirrors can be rubbed off with a piece of crumpled tissue paper.

She can make a pretty wastebasket for the living room or any room that needs one out of strong cardboard covered with wall paper or chintz, and she can see that the younger children use it. Pieces of her cotton dresses she can make into covers for the sofa pillows which will be tossed about in the hammock and on the porch this summer.

Mothers and fathers like to see their daughters appear dressmade in these days, when girls have so many outside interests, and any girl can charm her father by wearing a tiny white apron around the house. It needs be only a man's handkerchief with ribbon strings, but it will please her father and protect her dress. Wearing an apron is only one way of appearing freshly laundered and bright, which is the biggest part of being a neat ornament to one's home.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Warm salad oil will relieve earache.

Always try to pass at least one hour a day in the open air.

Never let a child or infant sleep in the room with a sick person.

Never use on the face a wash rag which is not scalded each day.

Do not think that scrubbing will injure your complexion, for it will not.

Cocoa butter will smooth the rough elbows, but it must be persistently used.

Quickly apply raw egg to a cut. It will allay the pain and quickly heal the wound.

If possible have children sleep in darkened rooms, as a light is bad for eyes and nerves.

The Example of Birds.

Some birds are typical examples of human attributes. The dove symbolizes innocence, and the eagle represents majesty, but the robin redbreast teaches the best lessons of all, for he sings so joyously in the dark, dreary winter days, when the earth in frost bound and snow covered, as in pleasant summer days, when food is plentiful and life is merry. Thus in his humble way he teaches the lesson of patience and gratitude.—Home Notes.

A Mark of Respect.

Andrew Carnegie was entertaining a Monmouthshire jobmen at Skibo castle. The morning after the prince's arrival a party of guests sat out in a huge motor car for a long run, and as they whizzed past an inn a great crowd of highlanders rose from the benches before the inn and saluted.

The prince seemed amazed at the highland fun.

"Why," he asked, "do those men go bare legged?"

"It is a local custom," said Mr. Carnegie, "a mark of respect for you, sir. In some places people take off their hats to show honor to distinguished visitors; here they take off their trousers."

A Man Hunt.

An English paper says that the hat of a certain shortsighted master of Eton blew off one day and as he started in pursuit a block ban dashed out of the gateway. The schoolmaster saw the ban and thought it was his hat, and all Eton was electrified by the spectacle of a bulbous and breathless reverend man hunting a block ban striding from one end of the street to the other.

The Ugliest Beast.

Probably the ugliest beast in the world is a monkey, a grewsome looking animal called the bearded saki. This is so utterly grotesque a beast that it would scarcely be safe to let a child or nervous person see it. The ugliness is not of an amusing kind, but of an evil, sinister nature. The beast has a sort of beard and a countenance unlike anything else in shape and lines. The monkey itself is not particularly savage, but is so hideous that the natives of its country, South America, say that no beast of prey, however hungry, will tackle it. Even a hungry jaguar will starve in a cageful of saki.

Drive Rheumatism out of the blood with Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy and see how quickly pain will depart. Rub-on's never did reach the real disease. Rheumatism isn't in the skin. It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this Remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. Sold by all dealers.

Humor

SCARED THE ROBBER.

How a Determined Man Prevented a Holdup.

"The fact that a determined stand is all that is needed," continued the western man, "was illustrated a good many years ago by a peculiar little incident which took place on the old stage line running out of Tombstone, A. T. Holdups used to be frequent on that route, but, strange to say, nobody took any precautions against such a contingency. One day the stage was carrying an unusual number of passengers, and while it was going over an extremely desolated section of the road a masked man stepped from behind a rock, leveled a shotgun at the driver and ordered him to pull up.

"He obeyed at once, and the robber began the usual programme by telling everybody to get out and range himself in line with his hands above his head. There were several nervy men on top, but none of them cared to court death by taking the initiative, and it was impossible, moreover, to say how many additional ruffians might be lurking behind the rocks. At any rate, all hands were clambering down when suddenly the door of the stage was flung violently open and out leaped a big, fierce looking man with a cocked revolver in each fist.

"At the sight of him the robber took an involuntary backward step and fell sprawling over a round stone. Both barrels of his gun went off in the air, and in the confusion he picked himself up and ran like a deer for cover. He had a horse on the other side of the rocks, and in less time than it takes to tell it he was in the saddle and 'burning the wind' across the prairie. He got away, and now comes the funny part of the story.

"While the robber was beating his retreat the big man snapped both pistols ineffectually at least half a dozen times and then discovered in blank amazement that neither one of them was loaded. He was glaring dumfounded into the empty cylinders when his wife stuck her head out of the coach and burst into vociferous weeping.

"'Oh, John,' she sobbed, 'I took the cartridges out of them guns this morning and forgot to tell you about it!' As she spoke she held out a handful of brass shells.

"'What the mischief did you do that for?' he roared.

"'I was skeered that they might go off in the coach and shoot the baby—boohoo-hoo!' she replied."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Rather Novel Complaint.

An English traveler once met a companion sitting in a state of the most woeful despair and apparently near the last agonies by the side of one of the mountain lakes of Switzerland. He inquired the cause of his sufferings. "Oh," said the latter, "I was very hot and thirsty and took a large draft of the clear water of the lake and then sat down on this stone to consult my guidebook. To my astonishment, I found that the water of this lake is very poisonous! Oh, I am a gone man; I feel it running all over me. I have only a few minutes to live! Remember me to"—

"Let me see the guidebook," said his friend. Turning to the passage, he found, "L'eau du lac est bien poisonneuse" (The water of this lake abounds in fish).

"Is that the meaning of it?"

"Certainly."

The dying man looked up with a radiant countenance. "What would have become of you," said his friend, "if I had not met you?"

"I should have died of imperfect knowledge of the French language."

A Great Man's Simple Speech.

I was lately told a delightful story of a great statesman staying with a humble and anxious host who had invited a party of simple and unimportant people to meet the great man. The statesman came in late for dinner and was introduced to the party. He made a series of old fashioned bows in all directions, but no one felt in a position to offer any observations. The great man at the conclusion of the ceremony turned to his host and said in tones that had often thrilled a listening senate: "What very convenient jugs you have in your bedrooms. They pour well." The social frost broke up, the company was delighted to find that the great man was interested in mundane matters of a kind on which every one might be permitted to have an opinion, and the conversation, starting from the humblest conveniences of daily life, melted insensibly into more liberal subjects.—Arthur C. Benson in Putnam's and the Reader.

An American Admirer.

In a small way an American figures in the journal kept by Rosalie Lamorliere during the revolutionary days of 1793 in France and published under the title, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

Rosalie Lamorliere, a girl of Picardy, was servant to the queen in the conciergerie. "One day," Rosalie has recorded, "M. de Saint Leger, the American, who was coming from the register's office, noticed that I was carrying a glass half filled with water.

"'Did the queen drink the water that has gone from the glass?' he asked.

"I answered that she did.

"With a quick gesture he uncovered his head and drank the water that remained with every indication of respect and piousness."

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope "Tender for Construction," will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 23th day of September, 1908, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Frasquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 161.24 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Frasquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 160 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000.

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use ONLY material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,

P. B. RYAN,
Secretary.

TENDERS FOR MINING LEASES.

Sealed tenders (which must be separate for each parcel) addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Mining Lease" will be received at the Office of the Commission, 25 Toronto, Street, Toronto, up to 12 o'clock, noon, on Wednesday, the 9th day of October, 1908, for mining leases for 999 years of the following parcels:

Parcel 1.—Portions of the Cobalt Station Ground and of the right of way adjoining thereto to the north and to the south containing together 16.83 acres, more or less, all as shown on plan which may be inspected at the Office of the Commission, Toronto, and the Office of the Mining Engineer, Cobalt.

Parcel 2.—Lot 33 in the townsite of Cobalt, including the mining rights under one-half the streets adjoining said lot.

Parcel 3.—Lots 32 and 33 in the townsite of Cobalt including the mining rights under one-half the street adjoining said lots.

An accepted cheque on a chartered Bank of Canada payable to the order of the Chairman and Secretary-Treasurer of the Commission for the amount of the cash bonus tendered for such lease must accompany each tender.

Forms of tender and of proposed lease (reserving a rental of $1.00 per annum plus 2½ per cent. of the gross value at the mouth of the mine of all ore mined) and full information and plans showing location of each parcel may be examined at the Office of the Commission in Toronto, and the Office of the Mining Engineer, Cobalt.

All tenders must be made on the forms supplied by the Commission for the purpose and signed with the actual signatures of the parties tendering.

In case of each parcel the party whose tender is accepted will be required to promptly execute a lease in form satisfactory to the Commission, failing which his deposit will be absolutely forfeited to the Commission.

The checks sent in by unsuccessful tenderers will be returned to them.

The Commission does not bind itself to accept the highest or any tender.

A. J. McCORE,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Toronto, 22nd September, 1908.

Mr. J. H. Brownlee, transportation agent of the Grand Trunk Railway passed through the city yesterday on his way to Toronto, Niagara Falls and other points where he will look for a suitable house for cognes.

First Rehearsal

The first rehearsal of "All the Comforts of a Home," was held in the Knights of Pythias hall last night, and was a big success. The performance is under the direction of Irving Beers and will be put on under the auspices of the Hockey Club.

A Small Fire

A small blaze suddenly broke out yesterday afternoon in Edward's butcher shop on George street, and but for the quick work of the proprietor it might have done considerable damage. As it was it did not get a chance to burn anything. Without any warning the insulation on the wires leading to the motor blazed up and a low rumbling sound was heard. Fortunately some one pulled out the switch leading to the street wires and a pail of water extinguished the fire on the wooden panel.

May Deliver an Address

Endeavors are being made by certain members of St. Paul's church and others that are interested, to bring the Rev Canon Davidson here to address a mass meeting on the Pan-Anglican Conference. Canon Davidson is the rector of St. John's church, Peterborough, and was a unit as one of the Canadian delegates to England. He took an active part in the conference, speaking at several of the meetings and was referred to in some of the leading papers of England. The Pan-Anglican conference is of particular interest to the Christian world and no doubt Canon Davidson's address would be listened to with pleasure. Should it come to Lindsay it is likely that the Academy of Music will be secured.—Lindsay Free Press.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Words of Praise

For the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, as given by leaders in all the several schools of medicine, should have far more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle-wrapper, in a full list of all its ingredients printed in plain English.

If you are an invalid woman and suffer from frequent headache, backache, gnawing distress in stomach, periodical pains, disagreeable, catarrhal, pelvic drain, dragging-down distress in lower abdomen or pelvis, perhaps dark spots or specks dancing before the eyes, faint spells and kindred symptoms caused by female weakness, or other derangement of the feminine organs, you can not do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The hospital, surgeon's knife and operating table may be avoided by the timely use of "Favorite Prescription" in such cases. Thereby the obnoxious examinations and local treatments of the family physician can be avoided and a thorough course of successful treatment carried out in the privacy of the home. "Favorite Prescription" is composed of the very best native medicinal roots known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, contains no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs.

Do not expect too much from "Favorite Prescription;" it will not perform miracles; it will not dissolve or cure tumors. No medicine will. It will do as much to establish vigorous health in most weaknesses and ailments peculiarly incident to women as any medicine can. It must be given a fair chance by perseverance in its use for a reasonable length of time.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this remedy of known composition.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is guarded as sacredly secret and womanly confidences are protected by professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

Mother Earth Got well Soaked

After repeated threats a sample of real rain descended upon the city early yesterday morning, and when the milkman was making his rounds it was falling just like it does at the Sunday school picnic. The patter, patter on the window pane, which has become a strange sound, aroused light sleepers, who in turn announced to other members of the family that something unusual was doing out in the open air. On and on all day the wetness of the clouds descended and late in the afternoon the weather man got tired of it and fairly soaked the earth. The water poured down in torrents, with but brief intervals, until about eight o'clock last night, when it slackened off.

Peterborough has been dry for six weeks and so has nearly every other place for many miles around. Yesterday's moisture was a great relief, but it did not last long, and at seven o'clock it sulked and then went back again. It was enough, however, to remind some who trotted to their toil early that the hole in the sole of the boot needed plugging up, while others were worried trying to think where they left the umbrella six weeks ago, and whose it was.

The cows will be tickled to death with moisture, which made the sick and tired grass perk up a little bit. They have found it difficult of late to turn out milk worth the money owing to dryness. This is a worry to the conscientious cow, even if it does not bother the milkman.

A Bed Outfit Worth While
We have had a number of travellers lately trying to secure our patronage for their beds, which are very inferior articles to the ones we now sell, and in combination with the cheapest spring and mattress we could sell the outfit for $5.00. We prefer to give our customers an outfit that will not only look well now but will hold their patronage for years to come. Our bed is a much more rigid style than what was offered us. The top is heavier and does not look like "enamelled wire." The finish is as good as the high priced beds. Our springs are heavy hardwood framed, coiled steel wire reinforced. The mattress is seagrass with wool tufting and good ticking cover. Altogether an A-1 outfit, worth $9.50. In the Annex Wednesday 5.98

COUNTY COUNCIL SENT APPEAL TO THE ARBITRATORS

Re Lakefield Union School--Debentures for Bridge Sold for $6,067.20--Committees Made Reports which were Adopted

A special meeting of the County Council for the purpose of giving the bylaw to provide for the borrowing of $6,000, by debenture issue, its final reading and passing of the same said money for the purpose of bridge building, was held in the County Chamber yesterday. Warden Thompson, was in the chair, and all the members were present.

On motion of Messrs. Oakman and Russell, the above bylaw was read a third time, and passed and duly signed and stamped with the corporate seal.

On motion of Messrs. Cohen and Hales the Council adjourned to go into regular session at the request of the warden.

REGULAR SESSION.

A deputation from different parts of the county were allowed to address the council, appealing to the council against the awarding of certain arbitrators re school boundaries.

F. D. Kerr, Esq., with other speakers, from the sections interested addressed the council.

On motion of the council, it was referred to a committee of the whole to deal with the matter, Mr. Killen being chairman of the Standing School Committee.

Mr. Cross addressed the council with reference to license for peddlar. Referred to Finance Committee.

The County Council in regular session yesterday afternoon received reports from the Finance Committee re the issuing and sale of debentures for $6,000. A sale was made to Messrs. Breuse, Mitchell & Co., of Toronto, for $6,067.20. The Roads and Bridges Committee reported re a number of accounts, and the School Committee reported be the appeal against the Union School at Lakefield. All the reports were adopted, and by laws were passed confirming the same. The council then adjourned.

Carnival at Auditorium Skating Rink

Prizes for Fancy and Comic Costumes, Good Crowd Present

The carnival at the roller rink last night was a big success. A large crowd was present, including many skaters in costume. The 57th Regiment Band was on hand with a choice program which the skaters appreciated very much. The roller rink under the manag ment of Prof. Genno and Miss Patterson, is very popular and from now on they will put on a number of attractions which are found to draw the crowd. The prize winners last night were;

Lady's fancy—Miss Logan.

Girls' fancy—Miss Cavanagh.

Comic—Peter White, assisted by C. Clothier and W. J. Clancy, representing a giraffe.

Boy's fancy—Govell Hooper.

The program for the balance of the week is as follows;—

Wednesday, 6 pt. 30th — Special grand march, 57th Regiment Band.

Thursday, Oct 1st—"Hoo-Doo" Night, very interesting.

Friday, Oct. 2nd—Social Night. Band concert by the 57th Regiment band, 24 selections.

Saturday, Oct. 3rd.—Hurdle and obstacle races.

Next Tuesday night a flash light photo for post cards will be taken.

Peculiar Weakness in Many Women

Is Promptly Overcome by the Regular Use of Ferrozone.

Many women suffer untold torture from nervous debility arising from disorders of the feminine organs.

Day by day they grow worse.

A false sense of modesty prevents them using a good remedy like Ferrozone,—and it would cure them!

Every pale sickly woman can be cured and nourished back to health by Ferrozone.

Think of it, lost nerve force is brought back.

New vital energy is supplied.

The blood is not only enriched and purified, but is properly circulated throughout the body.

Impossible for any woman who uses Ferrozone to be seriously ill, to suffer from weakness, irregularities or functional derangements, because Ferrozone acts directly on the organs that maintain the balance of health.

Because free from Alcohol, Ferrozone can used by young or old with absolute safety. It causes the spirits to rise, supplies ambition, cheerfulness and new sense of strength that adds much to the pleasure of life

Prepared in the form of a chocolate coated tablet. Ferrozone is sold by all dealers, 50c. per box or six for $2.50.

50th Anniversary of Their Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Green, 326 Water street, are today enjoying the anniversary of their fiftieth wedding day, both being hale and hearty. Mr. Green turned his 83rd mile stone on January 30th last, and Mrs. Green celebrated her 87th birthday on May 24th (Queen's birthday), and notwithstanding their age is able to read, write, sew, etc., without the use of glasses, and although crippled by an accident received through a fall on the sidewalk several years ago, is able to walk up street and do her own shopping, and was also one of the congregation at the re-opening of the George street Methodist church. Mr. and Mrs. Green are numbered among our oldest residents, having lived here continuously since the date of their marriage, September 30th, 1858.

A Square Deal

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formulas are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests, while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate woman or children. Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better plan than to take [illegible] drugging and preparing [illegible] principles used in [illegible] Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is [illegible] extract from the [illegible] root, possessing [illegible] medicinal properties of its roots, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, as attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if it is used persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, deep-seated coughs caused by inflammation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not to be relied on to cure consumption arising from other causes, but it is expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all those obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated, lead on to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

WILL COST ABOUT $200 A YEAR TO PUT LIGHTS ON ARMS

Fire, Water and Light Committee Met--Applications for New Lights--Other Matters Taken Up

The Fire, Water & Light Committee met in the city clerk's office last night and disposed of several matters before them. Those present were, Chairman Ald. Johnston, Aldermen Buller, Turner, McIntyre and Mayor Rush.

A letter was received from the Davis Thompson Co., in reference to insurance on horses and live stock of all kind.

The city clerk was instructed to write the Davis Thompson Co., and ask for full particulars re the insurance of horses.

At a recent meeting the chairman was authorized to interview the Light & Power Co., re the price of having several street lamps on arms reaching out over the street. Chairman Johnston said he had seen the company and had received a letter in reply. The company proposed to put the lamps on arms for the cost of $2 per year per lamp above the regular cost. The matter was left over for the time being.

A petition was received, asking that lights be placed at the corner of Smith and Park streets, and Smith and Freeburn streets. A petition was put in some time ago, and the council granted it, but so far no light has been put up. The writer of the last petition had gone to the Smith township council, and that body had consented to pay one-third the cost.

The difficulty is that the distance from the nearest lamp is over 800 feet, and the council cannot compel the company to put one there. It will be necessary to place two lights up.

On motion the council will be recommended to place a lamp at the corner of Smith and Park streets, and another at the corner of Smith and Freeburn streets, providing Smith township pays one-third of the cost of the latter lamp for five years.

Another petition for a light at the north end of Charles street, was received.

Resignation of Rev. H. Peckover was Accepted

The Presbytery of Peterborough, met at Campbellford yesterday, and had a most interesting gathering. Rev. H. S. Strahan, moderator, occupied the chair. Rev. Messrs. Wm. Johnston, Millbrook; D. A. McKenzie, Lemonville; H. E. Abraham, Port Hope; W. H. Brethschire, Port Hope; James Skene, Baltimore, James G. Potter, H. J. Keith, Peterborough, Dr. Marsh, Springville; S. S. Burns, Lakefield; Horace Peckover, Omemee, G. A. McLennan, Norwood; D. D. Millonald, Keene; A. C. Reeves, Campbellford; G. M. Genin, Pontypool; J. E. Smith, Seymour; Jacob Steele, Campbellford; D. A. Thomson, Hastings.

The elders present were; J. F. Clark, Port Hope; Rev. A. McNaughton and D. Laurie, Port Hope; Bruce Miller, Knoxville; R. Campbell, Roseneath; Wm. Medill, Robert Hamson, Peterborough; John McIntosh, Springville; Jonathan Smith Peterborough; A. Bennett, Omemee.

The Rev. Geo. C. Pidgeon, D.D., of Toronto Junction, convenor of the General Assembly's Committee on Moral and Social Reform was also present and took an interesting part in the discussion of important questions.

The congregations of Roseneath and Bethesda, will be placed under the charge of the Rev. Wm. Beattie of Cobourg, as interim moderator, until they secure a settled pastor.

The resignation of the Rev. Horace Peckover as pastor of Omemee, Lakevale and Mount Pleasant, was accepted to take effect after October 11th. The Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's, Peterborough, was appointed interim moderator, and the pulpit will be declared vacant Oct. 18th.

The Home Mission Committee reported regarding the congregations under its care, and from the reports of the visitors to the different mission circuits throughout the Presbytery excellent work had been done by Mr. F. D. Robinson at Marmora and Cordova, Mr. A. McKenzie at Apsley and Clydesdale and Mr. Duncan at Harvey. These students were certified to their various colleges.

At three o'clock a public conference was held when addresses were given on special phases of work adopted by the General Assembly held in Winnipeg in June last.

The Rev. J. G. Potter of Peterborough, referred to the work of the committee on church life and work as showing most gratifying results throughout the Dominion. All along the line ministers and workers were standing for a righteousness that exalted the nation.

The work of the board in social and moral reform was emphatically commended, and the scope of its influence outlined. Mr. Potter referred particularly to the splendid work being done in the foreign mission field of the church. The Presbyterian Church in Canada, eastern and western actions, are at work in the New Hebrides, North Formosa, Central India, Honan, China, Macao, China; Shanghai, China. Among the Indians and Eskimo of the Dominion, and among the Jews of Toronto. The agencies that seem destined to move the church of the future to larger missionary enterprise are the Young People's missionary movement and the laymen's movement.

The Rev. H. J. Keith followed with a very interesting address on church unions. Mr. Keith held that while there did not seem to be an immediate business over organic union as existed a few years ago, such affiliations as the Young People's and Laymen's missionary movements were in reality forcing the hands of the churches towards practical union. By united co-operation in the home and foreign mission work.

Mr. J. F. Clarke of Port Hope, gave an exceedingly useful address on the Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund. Mr. Clark is evidently alive to the important department of the church's work, and in view of the importance of Mr. Clark's presentation, the Presbytery decided that the address be published in all the church papers.

Dr. Pidgeon then gave a racy speech on the work of the Moral and Social Reform Board. He said that while the work as ministers was to sow the seed of the kingdom they had as wise men to see that the conditions for growth were also favorable, and in this his committee had already done a great deal of good work. Their great policy was to get all the churches to unite on a strong policy in which they were all agreed, and it was most encouraging to note that large numbers in all the churches of the Dominion who were willing to stand together in the suppression of vice and public wrong.

On resuming business again the Presbytery in view of the increased work of the clerk of Presbytery, the Rev. D. A. Thomson, decided to increase his salary from $100 to $125 per annum, and to install in the manse at Hastings a telephone.

Dr. Pidgeon appeared before the Presbytery to urge definite interest in the objects of the Laymen's Missionary movement. He stated as a matter of great moment the fact that the world was organized as never before for evangelization. The representatives of all the Protestant churches had met and arranged a system that should prevent overlapping and at the same time give as a special charge some section of the heathen world. To the Presbyterian Church in Canada had been given the care of 12,000,000 souls. All that this would mean to our people throughout the church would be 25 cents per family a week or 10 cents per communicant. The Presbytery of Peterborough might look up on its share of the amount required as $31,000.

All the members were deeply interested in the address, and in a resolution of thanks to the speaker it was decided to aim at the sum suggested. The matter was given into the hands of a committee of which Dr. Marsh of Springville, is the convenor.

The Presbytery then adjourned to meet in St. Paul's church, Peterborough, on Tuesday, December 15, at 9 a.m.

A FARMER'S GRATEFUL TESTIMONY

No case of eczema, skin disease, or ulceration, should be despaired of until Zam-Buk has been applied. The case of Mr. Francis Benoit, of St. Anne's (Man.), is a powerful illustration of Zam-Buk's efficiency. He says:—"I suffered from eczema for two years, and tried a great number of remedies. None of them, however, seemed to do me any good.

"The ailment was mostly in my legs, and both these were actually raw from the knees down. A small sample box of Zam-Buk was given to me, and even so small a quantity as that did me a little good. I then obtained a proper supply, and by the time I had used a few boxes I was completely cured."

Zam-Buk differs from ordinary salves and embrocations in containing no animal oil or fat. It is compounded from rich, healing, herbal essences, and is an ideal natural combination of power and purity. It is highly antiseptic, and instantly kills bacilli and disease germs, which settling into wounds and skin diseases, set up festering, blood poison, etc.

For cuts, burns, bruises, ulcers, abscesses, pimples, boils, skin eruptions, scalp sores, spreading sores, children's skin troubles, chafing sores, etc., Zam-Buk is unequalled. It also cures piles. All druggists and stores at 50c. a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 3 boxes for $1.25.

Fire Chief Howard Read a Paper on Fire Protection

Good Meeting of Board of Trade--Much Interest Taken in the Subject--Many Sugestions Made by Speakers

A very successful session of the Board of Trade was held last night in the city council chambers, when the benches were all filled with prominent citizens. The attraction to the meeting was a paper to be read by Chief Howard of the new fire brigade on "Fire Protection" (Prevention). The paper was an excellent one and brought forth much discussion.

President Mr. Morrison was in the chair, and in opening the meeting he expressed his pleasure at having the chief of the fire brigade present to give a paper on modern fire protection. The chief was a stranger in the city but he had already made himself popular with a large number of citizens.

The chief was then introduced to the meeting and he read the following address.

One of the necessary qualifications for good citizenship is a constant desire on the part of individuals to protect their fellows from harm. The greatest that can visit any people is fire; hundreds of persons are burned to death annually, and thousands of successful business men are ruined and become bankrupt, and numberless happy homes crumble and fall never to be rebuilt by their former occupants.

The public purse is constantly getting whole communities that have been wiped out of existence. In nearly every instance the cause of these terrible disasters can be traced to the careless handling of fire.

Quite fresh on our memory is the terrible Iroquois theater disaster, where hundreds of women and children lost their lives in the stampede that occurred. The fire loss was a mere bagatelle, but no one can estimate the actual value of the lives that were lost.

During the first three months of the present year, there occurred fifty-eight fires, in schools, in the United States and Canada; and in these fires over two hundred lives were lost, and upwards of One hundred children were injured more or less seriously.

In nearly every case the cause of fire can be traced to the carelessness of some one who should have taken the proper precaution to safeguard the lives intrusted to their care. In many instances we find that persons in charge of public buildings, do not realize the tremendous responsibilities they are compelled to assume. The same can be said of business men, manufacturers, managers, and superintendents of large concerns. They allow their whole time to be occupied with the financial end of their business, and neglect keeping a constant watch upon their employes; and thereby permit carelessness to exist on the premises of which they have the management.

Too often business men are compelled to leave the care and protection of their building to some trusted employee who is overworked. Two-thirds of the fires that occur, start in the basement of buildings, or in the garret, where accumulation of combustible rubbish is permitted, such as waste paper, broken boxes, etc. As a rule people are very careful when handling gunpowder and other explosives, but are very indifferent about this waste-paper business, which has such a horror for the average fireman.

A common saying of today, is "We live in the electric age." Public speakers frequently make use of the term, and it is generally conceded to be a fact. But fire objects put it differently, we say "We are living in the cigarette age." The expression may seem humorous to the average person, but it has a very serious side for firemen.

The cigarette and the combustible rubbish have been the means of starting some of the most disastrous fires that have occurred on the continent of America within the last few years. It is a deadly combination that the people should be taught to fear.

The cigarette habit may be beyond our control, and we may not be able to legislate against it, but it is possible for each and every one of us, as citizens, to remove every particle of combustible rubbish, from the buildings and premises where we have the management. And by so doing we remove a portion of the danger that exists by the careless handling of fire.

One cannot lay too much stress upon this very important question, and it is the duty of every good citizen to exercise his authority, and influence, to safeguard the lives and property of his fellow citizens. In some cases it may mean a financial sacrifice, but it is our honest and lawful duty. Fire protection and prevention is a subject worthy of much thought.

Your representatives to the municipal council have within the last two years made an earnest endeavor to improve the fire fighting facilities in this city, and therefore are deserving of the encouragement, and co-operation of every public spirited citizen.

The judicious expenditure of public money for fire protection, will in many instances prevent disastrous fires, which so often prostrate business and retard prosperity, and if properly managed will prove a profitable investment.

Within the last twenty-five years there has been many clever inventions for the prevention and extinguishing of fire. Some of the brightest and brainest men of the country have given their time and talent to invent efficient appliances, such as the modern fire engine, the chemical fire extinguisher, the quick hoisting device of the aerial ladder, the sprinkler system, the automatic fire doors, the high pressure system, and many other devices too numerous to mention.

Some of these inventions are beyond our reach financially, but quite within the reach of every man is the spirit of caution, and if this spirit is cultivated along the line of fire prevention it will be productive of much good. And when we endeavor to prevent fire on or about our own premises we are not only acting honestly towards ourselves, but doing our duty to our neighbors and the whole community.

I trust the few suggestions and hints I have given, will be in a measure, either directly or indirectly beneficial to the citizens of Peterborough.

I thank you Mr. President, and gentlemen, for your patient hearing; and in conclusion I desire to solicit your co-operation in the matter.

The president stated that personally he was very much interested in the new fire brigade and fighting appliances and the work of the Fire, Water & Light Committee. It is many years since the city had a committee which did so efficient service.

His Worship Mayor Rush, was the first speaker and he made special mention of the chief's reference to the carelessness of cigarette smokers who throw their stubs recklessly around. Continuing his worship said that the city had now launched out into the paid fire brigade system and he believed that it was decidedly in the interests of the citizens.

Mr. D. W. Dumble stated that the paper just read was a peg on which to hang something on, and would do good if the views of the men present were brought out. Mr. Dumble took up the question of chemical engines and he gave some information as to the great value of these engines. He said that in all the cities he had been in he was told that from 75 to 80 per cent. of all fires were extinguished by chemicals.

He next took up the question of fires caused by electrical wires and pointed out how many fires had been started by electric wires, which had been put up carelessly by incompetent workmen. There must be some kind of protection for the people against the electric wires. He also mentioned several other matters in which people were careless, and which caused so many fires.

Mr. J. Coyle Brown referred to the many brick buildings in town where wooden fire traps existed, and said that these should not be allowed.

Chief Howard said that the fire department was costing $9,000 per year. A paid department, well organized and well disciplined, should be the best paying public utility the city could have. Make your fire department up to date and comply with the Canadian Underwriters' Association and secure a reduction of 10 cents in the key rate and it will save the citizens at least $17,000.

Mr. Robt. Nell thought it was a good thing to have the Board of Trade take up these practical matters. He would like the board to take up this question and discuss it until the council was thoroughly equipped the fire brigade.

Mr. Robt. Fair was very pleased to hear the chief's paper and he hoped it would be published in the local press and also that copies of the paper be printed and one put in each house in the city.

Other speakers were, Ald. Phelan, Ald. Buller, J. Coyle Brown, R. M. Roy, Plumbing Inspector Thompson, Ald. Johnston and Ald. R. Neill.

In answer to a question from the president, Chief Howard stated that it will be necessary for the city to maintain a pressure of 80 pounds per square inch at the fire hydrants. The city would also require a chemical engine and one paid man to each 1000 population, which would be 16 men.

Mr. Henderson said that at the present time the water commissioners had a constant pressure of from 40 to 60 lbs., and as soon as an alarm comes in it is increased to 100 lbs.

Moved by D. W. Dumble, seconded by Mr. R. M. Roy, that the council be requested to appoint a wiring inspector for the city at an early date.

Ald. Johnston, chairman of the Fire, Water & Light Committee, spoke very strongly in favor of the expenditure of money on the fire department.

Moved by R. Fair, seconded by Mr. R. Neill, that the city council be requested to have a vote of the people by taken in January as to whether the people will sanction the council's action in bringing the city up from class B to class A.

Orillia was Tired of Being Dry

J. P. O'Donnell Says Business was Seriously Affected

Mr. J. P. O'Donnell, of Orillia, was in the city yesterday engaging a gang of men to go into the bush in the north country. He states that there are lots of men to be had, but that they are holding out for more money. The lumber companies are paying from $18 to $26 a month board and lodgings, while last year they paid in the neighborhood of $30 per month. However the full number of men required will be secured.

Speaking of Orillia, Mr. O'Donnell stated that it was no longer a local option town and it was not a licensed town either. Liquor can be had and those selling it are making a good profit. An effort will be made in January to go back to licensing the sale of liquors. The people are tired of local option. They gave it a trial and found it a failure. The commercial interests of the town were seriously affected, not only those businesses connected with the liquor trade but to all other lines and the license system will be welcomed.

Firemen Just In Time to Stop Blaze

Fire Broke Out at the Gas Co's. Plant Yesterday

It is doubtful if the people living in the immediate neighborhood of the gas works, realize how near they were to paying a visit to the other world. A fire was discovered about 3.30 yesterday afternoon in the roof and an alarm was sent in. The firemen responded quickly and while the flames were shooting under the gas tank they were successful in extinguishing the fire. Had there been any delay however, the flames would have gained such headway that it would have been a big proposition to fight them, and the results would have been serious.

The Suction Hose was Defective

The suction hose on the new fire engine has proven to be defective and as soon as it was discovered the chief notified the chairman of the Fire, Water & Light Committee. Chief Howard was then notified to report to the Waterous Engine Co., of Brantford, and have a new hose sent on at once.

The Coming Winter in Britain Will be Distressing to the Unemployed

London, Sept. 29.—The problem of dealing with the unemployed in the great centers of population throughout the United Kingdom is being seriously considered by the Government authorities, all of whom agree that the number of persons out of work will be greater the coming winter than in many years before. No estimate has been made of the unemployed in London, but a census taken by the newspapers of provincial cities shows alarming numbers.

The conditions in Glasgow are probably worse than in most of the other cities, there being 62,000 men now seeking work at that place.

Sunderland has 13,000 unemployed; Birmingham, 10,000; Liverpool, 14,000; Manchester, 6,000; and other cities from 1,000 to 4,000 each.

These figures do not include the great army of strikers in the Lancashire cotton trade.

Distress funds are now being raised throughout the country.

Hundreds Perished

Bombay, Sept. 29.—Thousands of native houses have been washed away and hundreds off lives lost in the Hyderabad and Deccan districts as a result of the floods which followed an unprecedented rainfall.

The River Mue rose sixty feet; all the bridges were carried away, and the country was devasted for many miles in either direction. Corpses are strewn everywhere, and scores of bodies have been found stranded high in the branches of trees, where they were edged by the swollen waters.

100per Cent. profit, Monthly, for Years and value advanced from 10 cents to $5.00.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumberance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its premises is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 30 feet wide for a distance of 150 feet at 170 feet depth extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $56.00 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

THE AUTOMOBILE AND DUST

A defender of the automobile tells us that the only way to cure the dust nuisance is to provide dustless roads. In the suburban and country districts of Canada, he might as well ask for grass-lined paths or water-less rivers. The goods are made of material which grinds up easily into dust; and like dyeing automobile only needs a very small sprinkling of dust of the highway to be able to fling quite a cloud into the faces of those who come in its wake. It is a common experience, in fact, that just as soon as a road gets dry enough for safe bicycle riding, an automobile will raise quite an annoying dust. City streets may be kept clean enough in some millenium to be practically dustless, and we may treat short sections of road with oils which will keep down the dust, but the suburban and country districts must be given over to perpetual dust storms under this dictum.

This statement by the automobile champion betrays a too common attitude of mind amongst those who ride like "the god on the car." It never occurs to him that the obligation rests upon the motorists to provide a dustless nuisance. The roads, as we have them, were built for carriages, wagons, bicycles and pedestrians. These travelers do not raise any large amount of dust from the the average road. But now comes a stranger to are these highways, with a machine which quickly constitutes itself a nuisance to every other citizen of the road because of its dust. Common sense would immediately say that the stranger must conform himself to the conditions of the highway or seek other roads on which to run. But not so with the automobile. It demands that the highway shall be made over for its special use.

Unless the people have grown tame of late, however, they will demand a dustless car. The automobile should be built so that it will not raise an intolerable dust when travelling at a legal rate over the highway. If that means a higher build and smaller tires, they must be provided. If it requires also a more moderate speed, that restriction will be in the interest of safety as well as of health and comfort. But it is time that people took these matters into their own hands and ceased to be dictated to by the very few who invade their long-established haunts.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The report recently issued by the Commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the progress being made in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the conditions in the canal zone generally, seems to be a most satisfactory character. The report pays a high tribute to the military engineers now in charge of the work, and fully justifies the change which was made in employing them in place of the civil engineers to whom the work was originally entrusted, among other things the improvement in the sanitary conditions in the zone has been remarkable. While under the administration of the French company the locality was one of the most pestilent spots on earth, the conditions are now so good that the public health returns compare favourably with the tables of mortality in cities in the temperate zone. Yellow fever has entirely disappeared; a notable achievement.

The report shows that the actual work of construction has proceeded most satisfactorily. In the opinion of the Commissioners the United States is getting fair value for every dollar expended. When the absence of rain last winter permitted the maximum amount of work to be done, no less than two and one-third million yards of rock and earth were moved each day. As far as appears the work actually accomplished has exceeded, rather than fallen short of, the estimates—a remarkable result when the whole circumstances connected with such an undertaking as this are taken into account. According to a statement in the Commission's report, the engineers in charge of the work estimate that the canal will be completed and open for traffic within five years.

The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the possibility of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men, is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward they have come—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australians.

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being poured into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-minded submitted a report covering the matter which is distinctly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation, and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 200,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, as far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment sand that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of their occupation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allottees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtue? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he argues forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home, for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in fields, mines, factories, ships. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of interoceanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of cities and slums, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute all modern progress to the superior few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the teacher, the engineer, the physician, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most attractive. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless metalled road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could be run without horses with all the trouble some adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed, he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for those vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea Bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Even the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1907 the motor-car-works stock was quoted at close on 600 per cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turin and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing craze, a donkey engine was introduced under the name of "Fabrica Italiano Automobili Turino," the initials of which spelt "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of $60,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $3,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,000 more; but in 1902 it made a gain of some $12,000, and in the next year it gained $18,200. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 6 per cent. and in 1905 the net profit was shown to be $437,216, and it paid a 20 per cent. dividend.

This great prosperity led on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divived the old shares of $40 into 8 new shares of $5. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1905, they were quoted worth $24o, at the end of Jan., 1906, the quotation was $32o per share, at the end of February $340, and at the end of March $440. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $460 per share, or 92 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinians bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $600 and upward." At this juncture the directors, in the belief that a share of $460 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $2 (10 lire); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (100 lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound rapidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1906 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,-067,000, a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $150,000, which had been inflated to $1,340,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 600 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 66 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 36 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car accessoires, with a nominal capital of $20,222,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were jamb-full of unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Itala" make, hard hit by the crisis, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,134,000, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past; and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.84, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1905, stood at $150, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $82, in August to $40, in October to $16, in April, 1908, to $8, in May to $6.80 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $20. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fradulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 19.6, which showed a net profit of $1,067,416. The rival manufactories, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock Exchange madness, are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all crises which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars; and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapses.

It's a pity when sick ones drag the stomach or stimulate the Heart and Kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak Stomach, means weak Stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the Heart and Kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping Stomach, Heart and Kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure as soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Buy the property.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness, meaning that the Nerves, and consequently the Heart itself, is not well; usually diseased. It is almost always a hidden thing little nerve that really is all at fault. This character nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also must have more controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a matter of fact, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, fluttering heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is no mere popular prescription—it is no dilatory tonic to thin and wear out weakened nerve tissues. It feeds Strengthens; it does not stimulate, drug, or narcotize. If you would have strong hearts, strong nerves, strong blood, you must have them so nourished, with

"ALL DEALERS"

Why We Are All Missing.

"If we did not cough in church, the human race would not exist." And the professor, twiddling a piece of chalk in his hand, regarded the sophomores with a quizzical smile.

"What I mean," he continued, "is that the cause of coughing is the cause of our survival. That cause is missionary. Missionary is a better life preserver than footmen or strength. For by missionary we manage not to attract attention, and in prehistoric times they who attracted attention were hunted down by the tribe and roasted for dinner or hunted down by the saber tooth tiger and taken raw.

"Since those dark days missionary has been instinctive with us. Missionary is what causes us to follow the fashion. It causes us, when in England, to say 'cawrk' and 'hawf.' If your friend yawns, you yawn—that's missionary. If he laughs, you laugh—missionary again. If he sneezes, you sneeze—missionary. And if he coughs in church, straightway you and all the rest of the congregation cough, the reason being the same one which saved our forefathers from extermination."—New York Press.

Famous Floggers.

Among English schoolmasters whose names have come down to posterity with the dubious reputation of great floggers Dr. Busby of Westminster school is the generally acknowledged chief.

Of him it is recorded that, one of his head boys having insulted a young French viscount who came to the school to demand satisfaction, he flogged the viscount first for the bloodthirsty intentions and next his friend who was the bearer of his challenge.

Dr. Valpy, too, who edited an edition of the classics, was a potent whisker of the old Archdeacon Groom, who was a pupil of his, tells a story in illustration of his prowess. One of the boys had been flogged by the redoubtable doctor, and the lad's father came to complain.

"Sir," said Valpy to him, "I flogged your son because he richly deserved it. If he again deserves it, I shall flog him again, and," rising, "if you come here, sir, interfering with my duty I shall flog you."

The parent fled.

A Famous Architect's Trick.

When Sir Christopher Wren was building the town hall of Windsor, a clever member of the corporation, on the query game, insisted that the roof required further support and desired the architect to add more pillars. In vain did Sir Christopher assure him that the danger was imaginary. He knew better. The alarm spread, and the great architect was worried into adding the desired columns.

Years passed, and in later times, when architect and patrons were dead, cleaning operations in the roof revealed the fact that the supposed additional supports did not touch the roof by two inches, though this was not perceptible to the gazers below.

By this ingenious expedient did Wren pacify his critics, while vindicating his own unobstructed skill to future generations.

I'm Telling You.

Pat Murphy, who was in lodgings was greatly annoyed by the landlady helping herself to his provisions. She began by taking a piece of Mr Murphy's butter, and when Pat came home she said:

"Pat, I'm taking a little of your butter, but I'm not like other landladies—I'm telling you."

Next day it was an egg, and so on. Every day there was something taken and put off with the remark, "I'm not like other landladies—I'm telling you."

Of course there was never any reduction in Pat's bill. One Saturday his bill came to a larger amount than usual. Pat looked at it, bundled up a few things in his handkerchief, walked to the door and said:

"Landlady, I'm sloping. I'm not like other lodgers—I'm telling you."—London Answers.

Beautifully Arranged.

Brown—Well, you've got the quarter. Is your sister coming down?

"I've arranged it beautifully, old chap. I told her it was you first, and she said to tell you she was out, and then I said I was feeling sad that it was Charley Jones, and you ought to have seen her hustle to get into a clean shirt waist! She'll be right down!"

Still Possible.

Clara—When Tom proposed to me he admitted that he had more money than brains.

Maude—Well, I've no reason to doubt it, although I understand he hasn't a dollar to his name.

Missed a Chance.

"Just, Tommy," said his mother, "just asked for two cakes and I gave them to you. Aren't you satisfied?"

"No, I ain't," growled Tommy. "You was so easy I'm kickin' mesself now 'cause I didn't ask for four."—Philadelphia Press.

Driven to Drink.

Artist—My next picture at the academy will be entitled "Driven to Drink."

His Friend—Ah, some powerful portrayal of baffled passion, I suppose?

Artist—Oh, no; it's a horse approaching a water trough!

RISE OF JOHN BURNS.

Engineer's Apprentice Who Became a Member of Parliament.

Some people are laboring under the belief that England is less democratic than a Republic. They should study the rise of John Burns, now president of the local governing board. Thirty-five years ago he was an engineer's apprentice at $3 a week. This position in England is far more exalted than in this country, because a lad has little hope of rising to an exalted point beyond 6 or 8 shillings a day. But John Burns kept going.

He acquired an education by unit study, because the common school system, as we understand the words, does not exist in Great Britain. He developed the ability to talk upon his feet. He stood for parliament, although he hadn't a shilling besides his earnings as an expert workman.

Members of the British parliament are not paid anything for their services. Friends came to Burns' assistance, and he took his seat with nearly forty other representatives of labor. Today he is a member of the government and as privy councilor may, if he chooses, draw $25,000 per year for the rest of his life, whether in or out of office.

Of course it is not considered regular to take the salary when one is out of office, but some cases of the kind are well remembered. Benjamin Disraeli always drew the money. He needed it, he asserted.

But what I started to say is that a workman has as great a chance in England as here if he makes something of himself beyond a drudge. Such successes are more exceptional there than here, if reference be had to the American born workman, because the foreign born laborer does as little work as he can here or elsewhere. His indolence is infectious, and many formerly earnest toilers have become imbued with the continental belief in shirking duty.

Had Burns felt then he would still be a mechanic and carrying a dinner pail.—Julian Chambers in Brooklyn Eagle.

Pronounce It Lose Ang-el-em.

Mayor Harper may ask concerted action toward promulgating the official pronunciation of the name Los Angeles. Repeatedly inquiries have come to city officials asking for the true pronunciation, which queries have been usually referred to experts for reply.

The latest, from Horace G. Adams of Fort Smith, was turned over to Librarian Charles F. Lummis, an authority on southwestern words and customs, who sent to Mayor Harper a copy of his reply, with a suggestion that some official action be taken to get the correct pronunciation firmly established. This is Mr. Lummis' answer to Mr. Adams:

"The word is pronounced 'Lose' (to rhyme with dose) Ang-el-em approximately—the most vital thing is the hard 'g.' There is no jolly sound in Spanish. I take pleasure in answering your query, which is referred to me by his honor A. C. Harper, mayor of this city."—Los Angeles Herald.

The Cause Was the Cure.

First Flatter—What on earth was that awful shaking in this building last night?

Second Flatter—De Jaggus, who lives on the twenty-ninth floor, came home with the hiccoughs.

First Flatter—Well, but there were only two or three shocks.

Second Flatter—Sure! You see, when things began to shake De Jaggus thought it was an earthquake, and it scared his hiccoughs out of him.—Judge.

Striking Out For the City.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope "Tender for Construction," will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 23th day of September, 1907, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the, Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Fraquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 404.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E,' in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Fraquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 160 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classifications, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E,' $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000.

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,

F. H. RYAN,
Secretary.

TENDERS FOR MINING LEASES.

Sealed tenders (which must be separate for each parcel) addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Mining Lease" will be received at the Office of the Commission, 25 Toronto, Street, Toronto, up to 12 o'clock, noon, on Wednesday, the 16th day of October, 1907, for mining leases for 999 years of the following parcels:

Parcel 1.—Portion of the Cobalt Station ground and other parts of vacant lands adjoining thereto to the north and to the south containing together about 14.86 acres, more or less, all as shown on plan which may be inspected at the Office of the Commission, Toronto, and the Office of the Mining Engineer, Cobalt.

Parcel 2.—The westerly portion of lot 44 in the townsite of Cobalt, containing 4.94 acres more or less as shown by another plan which may be inspected at the office of the Commission, Toronto, and the Office of the Mining Engineer, Cobalt.

Parcel 3.—Lot 33 in the townsite of Cobalt, including the mining rights under one-half the streets adjoining said lot.

Parcel 4.—Lots 32 and 39 in the townsite of Cobalt including the mining rights under one-half the street adjoining said lots.

An accepted cheque on a chartered Bank of Canada payable to the order of the Chairman and Secretary-Treasurer of the Commission for the amount of the cash bonus tendered for such lease must accompany each tender.

Forms of tender and of proposed lease (reserving a rental of $1.00 per annum plus 10 per cent. of the gross value at the mouth of the mine of all ore mined) and full information and plans showing location of each parcel may be examined at the Office of the Commission in Toronto, and the Office of the Mining Engineer, Cobalt.

All tenders must be made on the forms supplied by the Commission for the purpose and signed with the actual signatures of the parties tendering.

In case of each parcel the party whose tender is accepted will be required to promptly execute a lease in form satisfactory to the Commission, failing which his deposit will be absolutely forfeited to the Commission.

The checks sent in by unsuccessful tenderers will be returned to them.

The Commission does not bind itself to accept the highest or any tender.

A. J. McCREA,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Appetite Gone--Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year, Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter sorely tried her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Watmore, P.O., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headaches. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfect. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old, and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength in every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Arrived Home After Long Absence

Rev. Canon Davidson, rector of St. John's church, arrived home yesterday afternoon on the 4.48 C.P.R. train, and was met at the station by a number of the members of the congregation who welcomed him home. He will be tendered a formal reception in the school room this evening at eight o'clock.

Matriculation Class

If a class of eight can be secured a matriculation course will be put on at the local Y.M.C.A. At a meeting of the Educational Committee last night the matter was talked over and it was decided that a class of matriculation students would be a good feature. It was pointed out that there are likely many in the city who would like to matriculate, but who are past the age of going to school, or who are situated in such a way that it is impossible for them to do so. It was decided to go ahead with the project if a class of eight or more can be secured.

Wedding Bells

JONES—MOFFATT.

The marriage took place at St. Andrew's manse Monday night at seven o'clock of Miss Janet Moffat of this city, to Mr. Amos Walter Jones, also of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Potter, in the presence of immediate relatives. The young people were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will reside on Gilliard street.

HUFFMAN—ARMSTRONG

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of Rev. J. R. Webb, Rubidge street, Monday evening, when Miss Angela Armstrong, Waterford street, was united in marriage to Mr. Ald. Huffman of Millbrook. The bride was dressed in pink cashmere with a gray hat to match. She was assisted by Miss Maggie Sharpe of this city, who was becomingly attired in white. The groom was supported by Mr. Alf Huffman, jr., of this city.

After the ceremony a sumptuous supper was partaken of at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Huffman will reside in Millbrook.

TROTTER—GERRARD.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated in Hyndsdale Presbyterian church on Wednesday, September 16, when Miss Sarah A. Gerrard, daughter of Mrs. Robert Gerrard of Clydesdale and Mr. Thomas Trotter, son of Mr. James Trotter, of Clydesdale, were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. Mr. Garbutt.

The bride was prettily attired in a charming costume of cream silk voille trimmed with satin ribbon and applique to harmonize. Miss Ellen Gerrard of Peterborough, a sister of the bride was bridesmaid, was also dressed in cream voille trimmed with lace and applique. Mr. Joseph Telford of Warsaw, cousin of the groom, was best man. The wedding march was played by Miss Fred Rannington.

After the ceremony was performed the happy pair drove to the residence of the bride's mother, where a dainty tea was served to a number of guests.

Many costly gifts were presented and in the evening the young people of the neighborhood spent a very enjoyable time.

Mr. and Mrs. Trotter will reside in Clydesdale.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Beaufort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of the municipalities and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, South Smith and Ennismore, represents convenience to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of steam and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost said counties, to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Queen street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the water line and creating acres for manufactories, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfings now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production., whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Canal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in re-organizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I think I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to the expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offensive and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion in presentative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 81 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 38 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,220,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,708, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lake and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $66,600 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and namely of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage reats with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

"Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. R. Stratton.

CONGREGATION WELCOMED REV. CANON DAVIDSON HOME

St. John's School House Filled with Admirers --Splendid Program Rendered-- Several Addresses

A large number gathered at St. John's Sunday school last night, to take part in the formal reception to Rev. Canon Davidson, who has just returned from a four months' tour to England and Europe. The evening was a most interesting one in every respect, and it was thoroughly enjoyable. Captain Mills, occupied the chair, and after a few opening remarks, called upon Dr. Boucher to extend the welcome of the congregation.

Dr. Boucher upon behalf of St. John's congregation extended a hearty welcome to Rev. Canon Davidson from his lengthy trip abroad. He hoped that the rector had had a pleasant time. He added that if he felt as well as he looked he would be physically much improved. He was glad that Canon Davidson had had the honor of attending the Pan-Anglican Congress.

Rev. Canon Davidson was warmly welcomed when he arose to speak. He said he greatly appreciated the welcome home and the reception he had received. It would be an inspiration for him in his future work. He was glad to see so many present tonight and he was glad that so many had welcomed him back to the city. He stated that he would not touch upon the Pan-Anglican Congress at this time as it was too great a subject and he would take it up later. It was the greatest religious gathering ever attempted in the world. In preparing for the conference the committee sent out requests for those in England, who wished to entertain the visiting delegates to send in their addresses, and it was in this way that all were so well looked after. In addition to this over 4000 invitations were received from different parts of the country for the clergymen of other countries to visit at their homes. There were only 1,200 clergymen from other countries and consequently many invitations could not be accepted. The speaker however, was able to remain in England for some time and he gave a brief review of the many places he had the pleasure of visiting. He also spoke of the several palacial homes he had been entertained and one of the greatest pleasures of his trip was the Sunday he spent in Kidderminster. He was requested and did occupy the pulpit in the Kidderminster church. After the service he met many people in the vestry who had friends and relatives living in Peterborough. He also met many at their homes later. In all his life he had not had such an experience as his trip to England. It was different with his trip to that of the ordinary tourist. He saw England as very few visitors see it. The glory and beauty of England, lies in its home life. In closing he expressed his thanks again for the warm reception he had received, and stated that he was indeed glad that the congregation got along so well during his absence.

The following program was then rendered;—

Piano Duet—Misses Gladman.

Quartette—Tell her how I love her, Mr. Greenhalgh, Mrs. Davey, Mr. Chandler, Miss. Seward.

Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church, and representative of the Ministerial Association, extended upon behalf of the association, a hearty welcome.

Piano Solo—Miss Gladys Seward.

Vocal Solo—Mr. Chandler, with flute and piano accompaniment.

Rev. Mr. Frewer, father of Capt. Frewer and his brother, sent a beautiful flag by Rev. Canon Davidson, to be presented by the boys to St. John's church, Peterborough. The ling was unfurled by the church wardens and was admired by all present. A vote of thanks was moved by Wardens Mitchell and Capt. Mills was tendered Rev. Mr. Frewer.

Mrs. Richardson, mother of Stanley Richardson, a member of St. John's choir. A vote of thanks was also passed to Mrs. Richardson.

Vocal Solo—Chas. Coleman.

Recitation—Miss Hill.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's, was also present, and extended a hearty welcome to Canon Davidson.

A Reward of Twenty-Five Dollars

For Capture of Party Who Sends in False Alarms

It is a pleasure to learn that the Fire, Water & Light Committee will offer a reward of $25 for information leading to the capture of the parties sending in false alarms. This matter was advocated by The Times last week, and the aldermen connected with the fire department were quick to realize the importance of the move. It was not the new firemen who were suffering by the false alarms being so numerous, but it is killing work for the horses to run through the city two or three times a day with the big truck and a load of men. It is to be hoped someone will earn that $25.

New Rules Governing Fire Dept.

Were Adopted by the Fire, Water and Light Committee

A new set of rules and regulations have been prepared and submitted to the Fire, Water & Light Committee. They were read to and considered by that body at the last meeting and were adopted. The new rules were prepared by Chief Howard and, as soon as they are presented to the council will be put into force. In the meantime the city solicitor will prepare a bylaw confirming the same. The new rules do not differ materially from the old ones in force, and the men will not have much trouble in acquainting themselves with them.

Fritz Mohl Arrived Last Night

Fritz Mohl, the big wrestler from Buffalo, arrived in the city on the midnight last night, and is registered at the Red Oriental. He is in good shape for his bout with Hurtubise at the Brock street rink tomorrow night and this bout will be one of the best ever seen here and will no doubt draw a big crowd. The preliminaries include an exhibition of boxing by Davey Burns and Tom Daly of Toronto.

Baptist Worshippers are Shot Down by a Drunken Gang

Jellico, Tenn., Sept. 30.—One of the bloodiest affairs in the history of East Tennessee occurred near the Tennessee-Kentucky line north of Anthras Post Office yesterday. The scene was a little Baptist church within 50 yards of which is a "blind-tiger" which has been operated for months.

The service had closed, and nearly all the entire congregation had emerged from the church when a crowd of drunken men who had visited the "blind tiger" began firing into the worshippers with pistols. John Bennett, J. W. McKinney and Edward Thoma were shot down at the church door and died almost instantly, streams of blood from their wounds, flowing down the steps of the little church.

The preacher, a Rev. Kind, was shot and mortally wounded., falling in the church yard. Another worshippir named Gibson was also shot down in front of the church, but is not dangerously hurt.

Anthras is five miles from a railroad, and has no telephone connections. Jellico officers could not learn the names of any of the drunken gang.

Perched on Rock, Blown Skywards--Was Badly Shattered by Fall

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Tomorrow William Oakley, of Lowering, Northern Ontario, leaves the General Hospital, after being confined there for the past three months.

A small piece of the bone of his skull pressed upon his brain. It was to have been removed that he came to Toronto 13 weeks ago.

Oakley is the luckiest or unluckiest man, just whichever way you want to look at it, who has visited Toronto in some time.

Two years ago he was in the employ of the Toronto Construction Company, working on the C.P.R. Sudbury line. He was engaged in blasting a foundation for a bridge over the Severn River, near Buckskin, and had charge of 72 sticks of dynamite, the sum of the blast.

He used his tamping rod in placing the explosive, and it stuck. Drawing it upwards he allowed it to fall again with a little more force than he intended. A tremendous explosion resulted. Every one of the 72 sticks joined in.

A huge piece of rock nearby, about six feet square and four feet through, was blown upwards fifteen feet. Perched on it, Oakley sailed heavenwards. At the altitude mentioned, the rock ceased to ascend, but not so with Oakley. Being a lighter body he continued until he was thrown directly over a cable 35 feet above the ground. This rock on which he had gone up protected him from the shower of smaller stones below.

In falling he alighted on a pile of broken stone, scattered enough to break his fall. His companions started to gather him with a shovel and a broom, but when they found him he was alive, though his skull was fractured, his right leg was broken in three places, his right arm broken, three ribs broken, his chest bone was literally caved in, but he was breathing.

The fracture of his skull allowed a piece of the bone to press upon his brain, and, as it was not at once discovered, he was declared to be insane. A doctor discovered it, and today Oakley is in first rate shape, and will leave the hospital tomorrow.

Query; Is Oakley lucky or unlucky?

CITY RUGBY LEAGUE WILL OPEN SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Rough Riders Meet the Collegiate Bunch at Riverside Park--Senior Series Dropped --Will be Good Junior Series

Affairs shaped definitely at the meeting of the City Rugby League last night at the Examiner office, and a three-team junior series was formed. The teams entered are the T.A.S. Athletic Association, Rough Riders and P.C.I. The Crescents, who thought of entering a team in the junior division have withdrawn. There may be four teams in the series, the entry of the Y.M.C.A.'s being the one required to make the quartette. It would seem that the "Y." should be able to get a husky aggregation together for the junior division, and their entrance into the ranks is looked for. There will be no senior series as the T.A.S. Athletic Association and Y.M.C.A. are thinking of placing teams in the Junior series of the O.R.F.U. or Inter-Provincial.

The question will be taken up by the temperance players at a meeting on Monday night, when the Y. M.C.A. will also decide what steps they will take in the matter.

OPENING OF SEASON.

Saturday next will see the opening of the Rugby season in Peterborough, when the Rough Riders play the Collegiate's at three o'clock at Riverside Park in the first championship game of the junior series. The game will doubtless be fast and interesting, and as it will set the season going a big attendance seems assured. A nominal admission fee of ten cents will be charged, and with the price so extremely reasonable a big gate is anticipated.

Those in attendance at last night's meeting were quite enthusiastic over the prospects and the clubs are pleased that such a healthy interest is being taken in city rugby this year. The club representatives at the meeting were, Y.M.C.A., C. Simson; T.A.S. Athletic Association, J. Donard; Peterborough Collegiate Institute, Norman Geal; Rough Riders, Park Porter and L. Giroux. The president, Mr. R. F. McWilliams, was in the chair, and Secretary Clark was there in his capacity.

TROPHY PRESENTED.

A handsome silver cup has been donated by the H Low sporting goods house, Toronto, and will be the championship trophy of the junior series.

J. Creighton on Trial for Murder of His Wife and Her Daughters

EVIDENCE IN BRIEF.

Waking in the morning with a strange feeling, and, determining to end his life, James F. Creighton entered his wife's room in their house at Owen Sound to say goodbye, with no thought of violence, but, seized by an uncontrollable impulse, shot the woman, as well as her two daughters, slashing the bodies terribly with a common bread knife. This appears to be the prisoner's own story, as retold by different witness called during the trial yesterday. And yet one witness testified that the revolver had been reloaded, after being emptied, and used a second time, indicating a certain amount of deliberation. The physician who was called saw no signs of mental aberration. Two person to whom Creighton talked said he expressed no remorse for the death of his wife; only for the girls. That he had planned suicide seems certain, one witness testified to having refused to sell him strychnine. Evidence as to Creighton's previous stormy matrimonial experience was also brought out.

Owen Sound, Sept. 30.—The court room was crowded to the doors when, at nine o'clock this morning, Judge Riddell ascended the bench to hear the case of James Creighton, the self-confessed murderer of his wife, Lillie Eliza Creighton, and her two daughters, Katherine Belle Chapman and Clara Belle Chapman, on May 26th last, at their home here, beside the rail, beside the counsel for the Crown and prisoner, and a number of expert medical witnesses, were the prisoner's brothers, W. J. Creighton and George P. Creighton; Rev. G. A. Woodside, Owen Sound, his spiritual adviser; Rev. J. B. Fraser, Annan, and Mr. T. D. Cowper, Crown Attorney of Wellland. The public space was filled, but by instructions of the judge no one was allowed to stand, and the strictest order was enforced.

EMPANELLED A JURY.

The prisoner was arraigned yesterday, so that little time was lost in proceeding to call the jury. The Crown exercised its right in rejecting three of those called; counsel of the prisoner, Hon. A. G. MacKay, K.C., challenged thirteen. The jury finally empanelled was composed of William J. Cook Angus, McColeman, John A. Jarrett Kirman Irish, John Halliday, William Halliday, John Canning, James Morrison, Homer S. Needlands, Gregor McGregor, John H. Hart and John Fadden.

A SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

Mr. George T. Blackstock, Crown prosecutor, in opening, referred to the case as one of the most shocking and terrible tragedies in the history of the Province of Ontario. He sketched shortly the prisoner's history. His first marriage many years ago, and his subsequent unhappy married life, the death of his first wife in the fall of 1906, and his subsequent marriage in March, 1907, to his victim, who was a Mrs. Chapman.

Creighton had, he continued, been of intemperate habits, but for a time after his second marriage he had abstained. In the winter of 1907-8, however, he had again given way to the habit. This exercised such an influence on his wife, who was very much grieved by it, that she had felt that they could not continue to live together. The circumstance that she was about to leave him, it appears, awoke resentment in the prisoner, and he seems to have entertained feelings of resentment.

On the night of May 25th the wife went for a doctor to see the prisoner, who was in misery, as he said, on account of the loss of his wife's affections, and said that it would all be over in the morning. The doctor, however, thought it was an idle threat of suicide.

A GRUESOME SCENE.

Next day, however, about six o'clock, parties passing near the line which passes the prisoner's house heard the prisoner calling from an upper window, and the prisoner told them that he had shot his wife and her daughters. They broke in the door, and going upstairs, found Mrs. Creighton and her daughters dead, shot and stabbed in terrible fashion.

Mr. Blackstock in quiet words painted the gruesome scene with even more horrible distinctness than the most florid orator could have done. The Crown, he continued, would produce admissions by the prisoner that he had committed the crime, and that, though he had expressed remorse for the death of the girls, he had shown no regret at having killed his wife. Nine or ten shots had been fired from the revolver—a five-chambered one—used by the prisoner, showed that he must have reloaded it.

Mr. Blackstock referred to the probability of the girls having come to the aid of their mother, with whom it appeared they had taken sides in a quarrel a day or so before.

Mr. Blackstock said he understood the defence would be that the prisoner was insane, and not responsible. But he warned the jury that a man, though insane, was responsible if he knew the nature of his act, its probable consequences, and that it was wrong. The insanity plea, he said, must be very narrowly scanned. It must be given its due weight, however. The Crown would never ask for the punishment of a person mentally so defective.

J. R. Stratton's Meeting in May's School House

A splendid meeting in the interests of Hon. J. R. Stratton, Liberal candidate for West Peterborough, was held in May's school house last night. The chair was occupied by Mr. Thomas Williams, who expressed the pleasure the electors of North Monaghan felt in having Hon. Mr. Stratton with them.

The first speaker was Mr. R. B. Hall, who devoted considerable time to the matter of Canada's trade conditions. He compared the progress made by Canada, commercially, during the past 12 years, with the progress made during the 18 years of Conservative rule. Notwithstanding the increased expenditure under Liberal rule, the rate of taxation had been reduced from $50 per head in 1896 to $40 per head this year. Conservatives complain about the increased expenditure, but Mr. Hall pointed out that this was very necessary by reason of the development of the country.

HON. MR. STRATTON.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, the candidate, received a warm reception. He expressed his great pleasure in meeting the electors of that section of North Monaghan, and referred to the fact that although he had been in public life for 25 years, this was the first opportunity he had had of addressing a meeting in May's school house. Proceeding, Hon. Mr. Stratton dealt at home length with the labor question, pointing out the excellent legislation in this connection that had been enacted by the present Dominion Government. They had introduced the Labor Gazette, which furnished information as to the labor conditions in all parts of the Dominion. They also remodelled the sweating system which they found to exist in various manufacturing districts. They had also enacted legislation with a view to the settlement of strikes, lockouts and labor disputes. The enacting of legislation whereby contractors were obliged to pay the current rate of wages of the locality was an outstanding feature of the government's labor legislation.

Mr. Stratton gave an interesting statement as to the benefit to Peterborough of the government's trade policy.

The meeting closed by cheers for the King and the candidate.

RUGBY

The Rough Riders Rugby Club will practice this evening at the Riverside Park, and the following players are urgently requested to be on hand; Giroux, Porter, Corkery, Kelly, Wantham, Hayes, Pough, O'Brien, Cahill, Hogue, Stokes, and others who intend turning out this year.

They will go up against the P.C.I.'s aggregation on Saturday, and no doubt a good game will take place.

Rare Plants are on Exhibition

Cactus Plants Can be Seen in the Window of Chief Blackcloud's Office

Chief Blackcloud, the Indian Medicine man, has a unique display in the window of his office on Water street, below Mason's greenhouses. It consists of an unusually fine display of the rarest parts of cactus plants which are from all parts of the world. Curious thorny plants are seen, such as grow on the barren wolds of South Africa, strange specimens of columnar shape from the slopes of the Andes in South America, great little prickly varieties, such as are found in profusion on the hard hills of our own Canadian North-west, and magnificent globular plants from the burning Alkali plains of the Southern States and Mexico. A great oddity, called the fish hook cactus, is a natural producer of this indispensible article to the fisherman. The hooks are extremely strong and about two to four inches long. The mammillaria plant is called the water barrel of the desert. It attains a large size, about the dimensions of a wash-tub, and the thirsty traveler can hollow out the crown and procure a drink from the juice which quickly gathers there. As a window display it is an effective one, and has attracted considerable attention from passers by. The collection is probably unequalled in Canada for rarity and number of fine specimens.

—Mrs. E. Hutchinson, No. 340 Water street, who for the past several weeks, has been a patient in the Nicholls Hospital, was able to return to her home last evening.

You feel tired All the Time

Night comes and it's hard to sleep. Morning dawns and the anxious tired feeling is still there. Unwilling to get up, a strong desire to rest just a little longer.

Unwise to neglect this gradual decline. It can't cure itself—but Ferrozone by forming rich pure blood at once supplies nutriment for building up the system. This extra nourishment is distributed throughout the entire body, gives force to the nerves, strength to the muscles and power to the digestive organs.

At once you feel braced, toned, strengthened. You know a powerful force is building up depleted energies, you realize what it means to have the vim and spirit of robust health.

Search the world over and you won't find a tonic to nourish, build up and fortify a weak body like Ferrozone. Physicians claim it is the best all round strengthening medicine ever discovered.

To take Ferrozone regularly is an insurance policy of health, a guarantee that you will be free from vexatious spells of tiredness and debilitating sickness of every kind. Surely it is well worth trying a medicine that Mrs. H. S. Gold, of Bowmanville, Man., speaks of as follows;

"I want to state my case, because I think it may be the means of assisting other suffering women to health. A year ago I was almost a wreck. I was pale and emaciated, suffered from nervousness and hysteria. Little things that went wrong in the house bothered me. The doctor advised different treatments, but they didn't help. He said my low condition of health was due to weakness that might never be cured. Ferrozone had a peculiar grateful effect and built me up quickly. The ills I suffered from are cured. I am now strong and vigorous, and was made so by Ferrozone." (Signed) Mrs. H. S. Gold.

Before your ill-health assumes a grievous or malignant form build up with Ferrozone. Sold everywhere. 50c. per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

P. C. I. Annual Field Day of Sports will be Held Later This Year

The annual field day of sports for the Collegiate Institute pupils will be held this year, somewhat later than the previous year. The cross country run will be held on Monday evening evening, Oct. 12, at 4.15 o'clock. It will start from in front of the Collegiate Institute, and proceed along McDonnell street, to the boundary, up the boundary to Smith, down Smith to Water, and down Water to McDonnell, thence proceeding to the school.

Most of the students are getting into shape and as far as can be learned about twenty runners have tendered entering. The jumps will be held the following Wednesday at the Riverside Park, and the field day proper will take place on Friday afternoon at the Nichols Oval. All relatives and friends of the P.C.I. students are cordially invited to attend all the sports.

Floods May Cost About 10,000 Lives

Hyderabad, Sept. 30.—Later reports from the flood districts point to a much heavier mortality than was at first supposed. The rescuers up to the present time have only touched the edge of the desolated area, but from the numbers of bodies already found it is feared that the fatalities will total several thousand. One report places the death list at 10 000.

The village of Ghoulgunda, which consisted of one thousand houses on the bank of the River Musi, has been entirely engulfed in the mud.

A Peterborough Exhibit

Last Saturday's Montreal Standard showed several Franco-Anglo exhibition pictures, among them being the exhibit of the Canadian Canoe Company, Peterborough, being especially prominent their display was being readily recognized.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the aim of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A ting, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. With in 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

PANAMA CANAL

The report recently issued by the Commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the progress being made in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the conditions in the canal zone generally, seems to be a most satisfactory character. The report pays a high tribute to the military engineer now in charge of the work, and fully justifies the change which was made in employing them in place of the civil engineers to whom the work was originally entrusted. Among other things the improvement in the sanitary conditions in the zone has been remarkable. While under the administration of the French company the locality was one of the most pestilent spots on earth, the conditions are now so good that the death rate returns compare favorably with the returns of mortality in cities in the temperate zone. Yellow fever has entirely disappeared, a notable achievement.

The report shows that the actual work of construction has proceeded most satisfactorily. In the opinion of the Commissioners the United States is getting full value for every dollar expended. When the absence of rain last winter permitted the maximum amount of work to be done, no less than two and one-third million yards of rock and earth were moved each day. As far as appears the work actually accomplished has exceeded, rather than fallen short of, the estimates—a remarkable result when the whole circumstances connected with such an undertaking as this are taken into account. According to a statement in the Commission's report, the engineers in charge of the work estimate that the canal will be completed and open for traffic within five years.

THE AUTOMOBILE AND DUST

A defender of the automobile tells us that the only way to cure the dust nuisance is to provide dustless roads. In the suburban and country districts of Canada, he might as well ask for grass-lined lawns or water-lined rivers. The roads are made of material which grinds up easily into dust; and the flying automobile only needs a very small sprinkling of dust of the highway to loose a thing quite a cloud into the faces of those who come in its wake. It is a common experience, in fact, that just as soon as a road gets dry enough for safe bicycle riding, an automobile will raise quite an annoying dust. City streets may be kept clean enough in some millennium to be practically dustless, and we may treat short sections of road with oils which will keep down the dust, but the suburban and country districts must be given over to perpetual dust storms under this dictum.

This statement by the automobile champion betrays a too common attitude of mind amongst those who ride like "the god in the car." It never occurs to him that the obligation rests upon the motorists to provide a dustless machine. The roads, as we have them, were built for carriages, wagons, bicycles and pedestrians. These travelers do not raise any large amount of dust from the average road. But now comes a stranger to use these highways, with a machine which quickly constitutes itself a nuisance to every other citizen of the road because of its dust. Common sense would immediately say that the stranger must conform himself to the conditions of the highway as it is, or that roads on which to run, but not so with the automobile. It demands that the highway shall be made over for its special use.

Unless the people have grown tame of late, however, they will demand a dustless car. The automobile should be built so that it will not raise an intolerable dust when traveling at a legal rate over the highway. If that means a higher body and smaller tires, they must be provided. If it requires also a more moderate speed, that restriction will be in the interest of safety as well as of health and comfort. But it is time that people took these matters into their own hands and ceased to be dictated to by the very few who invade their long-established haunts.

AN ERRONEOUS IDEA

The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the possibility of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward they have come—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australians.

URBAN LIVING AND THE GENERAL HEALTH

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being poured into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-minded submitted a report covering the matter which is directly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

SMALL HOLDINGS IN ENGLAND

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotments Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 30,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, as far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment and that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of their occupation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allottees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtue? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he argues forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in all its mines, factories, ships. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of interoceanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of ideas into forms, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute an modern progress to the energies of few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the banker, the engineer, the physician, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

THE MOTOR CAR TRADE, AND A COLLAPSE

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most attractive. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless metalled road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could be run without horses with all the troublesome adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for those vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Even the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1906 the motor-car-works stock was quoted at close on 600 per cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turin and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing craze, a donkey engine was introduced under the name of "Fabrica Italiano Automobili Torino," the initials of which spelt "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of $80,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $3,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,400 more; but in 1902 it made a gain of some $1,200, and in the next year it gained $12,200. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 6 per cent and in 1905 the net profit was shown to be $427,336, and it paid a 20 per cent dividend.

This great prosperity led on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divided the old shares of $40 into 5 new shares of $8. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1905, they were quoted worth $240, at the end of Jan. 1906, the quotation was $320 per share, at the end of February $360, and at the end of March $400. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $460 per share, or 23 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinists bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $600 and upward." At this juncture the directors, in the belief that a share of $460 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $2 (ie div); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (ie lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound rapidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1905 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,-607,408, a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $800,000, which had been inflated to $1,600,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 400 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 60 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 36 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car accessories, with a nominal capital of $28,212,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were jam-full of unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Itala" make, had hit by the crash, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,134,000, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past; and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.84, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1906, stood at $150, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $52, in August to $40, in October to $16. In April, 1908, to $6.40, in May to $6.60 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $20. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fraudulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 1906, which showed a net profit of $1,607,416. The rival motor companies, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock Exchange madness, are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all cities which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars, and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapses.

Practical Scaling.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, making the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nerve excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general help to the system. For positive local help, use as well

A Cure For Despondency.

A large, fleshy man with whiskers told me of a sovereign cure for despondency the other day. He had a number of girls in his employ, among them one that he knew was in straitening circumstances and supporting a sick mother on a none too healthy salary. She had come into the store and laid her purse and somber widow hat on the counter while she did something about the place. The large fleshy man got between her and the purse, and when she was not looking he slipped a five dollar bill into it and moved unconsciously about his business. In the afternoon he noticed that she had a red spot in each cheek, and she was heard asking other girls if they believed in fairies. She never solved the mystery—it was two years ago—and never will unless she reads this. But the five dollar bill was very useful in its little way, and the large despondent man felt so good for two whole days that he hip-hopped on the sidewalk on his way home.—Minneapolis Journal.

Living on Next to Nothing.

Most people do not need the evidence of recently published statistics to prove to them that it costs more to live in London than it once did. But it is doubtful if any Londoner now living was ever able to do it on £30 a year, as Boswell's poor Irish painter did. "He allowed £30 for clothes and linen. He said a man might live in a garret at 18 pence a week. Few people would inquire where he lived, and if they did it was easy to say, 'Sir, I am to be found at such a place.' By spending threepence at a coffee house he might be for some hours a day in very good company. He might dine for sixpence, breakfast on bread and milk for a penny and do without supper." Of course dirt and cold can always be reduced to a minimum by doing without things. The question is, Which of our various expenses is unessential? Boswell's Irishman hinted at one. "On clean shirt days he went abroad and paid visits," says his ingenious chronicler.—London Chronicle.

The Midget Snakes.

"I see by your paper," says a correspondent, "that you want to find a man who can tell a snake story with the sound of originality to it. Here it is: Nearly forty years ago in the woods of Indiana I captured three snakes, each less than three and one-fourth inches in length, a combined length of less than ten inches, a little longer and a little larger in the middle than an old fashioned wool darning needle. Although these snakes were so small they would crawl around with their heads up and dart out their tongues like larger snakes, I put these reptiles in an eight ounce bottle, and they had plenty of room to crawl around on the bottom of it without crowding. These were not the kind of snakes generally seen in bottles, but genuine snakes. Among those who saw them was a minister of the gospel, and he had not been taking anything to make him see snakes either."—Esperia Gazette.

The Pirates.

The Chicago News fails to name the hero of this story, but has it that the visitor to the home of a well known Hoosier State author found his three youngsters romping in the hallway.

"What are you playing, boys?" he inquired.

"We are playing pirates," elucidated the smallest.

"Pirates? Why, how can you play pirates in Indiana? There are no seas bordering on this state."

"Oh, we don't need any seas. We are literary pirates, like pa."

And five minutes later a chorus of yells from behind the barn told that the hand that wields the pen can also wield the shingle.

Outside of His Practice.

"All that is the matter with you, sir," said the eminent physician after a thorough examination, "is lack of nutrition. You don't eat enough."

"I eat all I can hold, doctor," said the attenuated caller.

"Then you need to have your capacity enlarged, and that's a case for a surgeon. Five dollars, please. Good morning."—Chicago Tribune.

Overstudy.

Books are pleasant, but if by being overstudious we impair our health and spoil our good humor, two of the best pieces we have, let us give it over. I, for my part, am one of those who think that no fruit derived from them can recompense so great a loss.—Montaigne.

Funerals in Peru.

According to social usage, women in Peru cannot attend funerals, and they do not appear at weddings unless they are very intimate friends. When a funeral procession passes through the streets the coffin is carried upon the shoulders of the pallbearers, who are followed by an empty hearse drawn by two, four or six horses, according to the means of the mourners and their desire for display. All the male members of the family and friends of the deceased follow on foot, with a line of empty carriages behind them. As long as they are in the presence of the dead it is considered a proper and necessary evidence of respect to walk. After the body has been committed to the grave those who attend the funeral are brought home in carriages.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

A BAD PLAN OF TRAVEL.

The Scheme That Worried One Woman on Her Trip Abroad.

"When I hear of people joyfully making plans for their first trip abroad," said a man who has made many a transatlantic voyage, "I am tempted to give them a little bit of advice, based, of course, on my own observations, but particularly upon a remark made to me by a middle aged woman whose seat in the saloon was next to mine on my return trip last summer. This woman had a husband, and it was to him that she referred in answering my question one day. I asked her what she had been doing on the other side. She looked half quizzically, half reproachfully, at her spouse and said, 'Well, my principal occupation was trying to keep track of John.'

"It developed that her concern was not over what John might do in European capitals, but simply related to the difficulty each had in meeting the other after pursuing their several ways in a strange city, she to browse among the shops and he, an inveterate sightseer, to visit this, that and the other spot of interest. Their general scheme, as I was informed, was to diverge, say, in the morning, following their respective bents and arranging to meet at a certain place at a certain time. The plan sounds feasible, but it is experimental, and, as both of them found, it was an experiment that didn't work well. First one would be delayed and then the other, and if you have ever waited for a person in a foreign city you can appreciate the particular variety of anxiety that comes in about ten minutes. There's a feeling that something has happened to the missing person, for one thing, and, for another, there's an increasing realization that you yourself are wasting time. If you start out to look up the delinquent, the case becomes practically hopeless. The needle in the haystack is easy compared to that search. When the reunion does come at dinner time in the hotel or pension, explanations are received with tears or haughty disdain. Oh, I know; I've been through it."

A Kaleidoscope of Fashions.

For my part I commend a quick changing fashion and could I have chosen my period would have fixed on the fickle years of the first empire, when fashions shifted from week to week, and that, too, with such fine shades of difference that only the most frivolous could follow them. Then the great conqueror brought to Paris finery from the ends of the earth, muslins from India, garlands of roses from Bengal, stuffs shining with gold and silver from Cairo; from Turkey, of course, turbans, and from the far east shawls—shawls from Kashmir, from Persia and from the Levant; shawls particolored, blue—bright blue—and red and green and black and the sheer yellow of the sun; shawls patterned with all the interlacings of Asian caprice and fit not only to hang from the shoulders of the fair, but to give a coquette of eastern fancy day long visions of the orient. From the past, for all time as well as all the earth was then Napoleon's, came the fashion of the troubadours—chapeaux à Cronaux, sleeves à la mameluk, cheveux à l'enfant, leading to a very modern period who can say what charming Gothic airs? How do not such revelations of fashion enlarge the feminine heart and teach it to live in all ages and all climates!—Lucy M. Donnelly in Atlantic.

Still Possible.

Clara—When Tom proposed to me he admitted that he had more money than brains.

Maude—Well, I've no reason to doubt it, although I understand he hasn't a dollar to his name.

A Trying Moment.

Professor Leopold Schroetter was called to see the Crown Prince Frederick in 1887 before Sir Morrell Mackenzie had reached San Remo. The prince, evidently suspecting the worst, turned to Schroetter after the examination and said, "I request the truth as to my ailment." Schroetter hesitated and made an effort to direct the conversation in another direction, but Frederick insisted. "I am a soldier," he said, "and can look death in the eye. I ask you now plainly, to the point, Is my complaint cancer?" Schroetter could hardly contain himself, and years after the scene when he recalled it he spoke of it as the most painful in his life. He conducted the crown prince to a chair and asked him to be seated. Then he said, "Your imperial highness, you are suffering from a serious complaint, and it is possible that it may develop into carcinoma, but that cannot be determined positively at this moment." Frederick became deathly pale, but never for a moment lost his self control and smiled grimly when he thanked the physician for his honesty.

Coming to an Understanding.

In the amiable way of villagers they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' these hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd seldom knowed each other for a matter o' seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said an interested lady listener.

"Long one? Bah! Ye're wrong! When a body's courtin' he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship lasted a matter o' nineteen year!"

"You certainly were careful," agreed the lady listener. "And did you find your plan successful when you were wed?"

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope 'Tender for Construction,' will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 23th day of September, 1908, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Fauquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 104.24 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Fraquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 108 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, labourers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,

F. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust, Hearty, Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state, read what J. W. Jewell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.—They possess mystic power surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize delicate glands, search out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today. 25c at all dealers.

The new bowling alleys at the Y.M.C.A., are open, and are in constant use by the young fellows who find so much pleasure and who derive so much benefit from the Y.M.C.A. The fee charged for the use of the alleys is so small that all can afford to use them for pleasure and exercise.

MEMBERSHIP CONTEST

The membership contest, started by the Y.M.C.A. boys a few days ago has been progressing very favorably, but at the request of the young men who are on the different teams, and who are unable to work during the day, the contest has been extended until Saturday night at ten o'clock.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Domestics for Canada

The S.S. "Canada" which sailed from Liverpool on the 24th inst., brings a party of fifty domestics for the Women's Domestic Guild of Canada situated at 71 Drummond street, Montreal. These girls have been selected with great care by the representative of the Guild in Great Britain, Mrs. Francis, the organizer of the Guild, who has recently returned from Great Britain, visited the different centres from where the girls come, and by personal interviews impressed on her representatives in Great Britain what the requirements are in Canada, and the necessity of selecting only such girls as will meet these requirements. The result of the instructions given, will, no doubt, do the means of still further increasing the usefulness of the Guild, and the sending to Canada of a large number of desirable recruits to meet the requirements of Canadian homes.

Wedding Bells

McMILLAN—JOHNSTON.

A pretty autumn wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. E. Johnston, Brown street, when their daughter, Miss Effa M. Johnston, was united in marriage to Mr. Hibert McMillan, Ashburnham. The ceremony was performed in the drawing-room, which was tastefully decorated with the season's floral offerings. The bride was married in her traveling suit of navy blue broadcloth, with hat to match. Miss Addie Dickson played the Wedding march.

After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served in the dining-room. Mr. Thos. Hooper catering for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. McMillan left on the 4.48 C.P.R. train on a trip to Buffalo and Toronto. Among the many presents received was a handsome chair from Mrs. Jas. Dickson, aunt of the groom.

SULLIVAN—McCORMACK

Toronto, Sept. 30.—Miss Loreen Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Clancy, of 132 Bellwoods avenue, was married at seven o'clock this morning to William H. McCormack of Toronto. The ceremony was performed at St. Francis church, Toronto, by the Rev. Father W. McCann.

The bride was given away by her step-father, Mr. Samuel Clancy. Her sister Margaret attended her, and the bridegroom was supported by Mr. John Primeau, of Lindsay. The bride wore a beautiful dress of white silk crepe de chine with hat to match, and the bridesmaid was dressed in Regent silk voile.

After a delightful little wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan left on the nine o'clock train for the east. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

Mr. McCormick is a former resident of Peterborough, and will be remembered by many when he played lacrosse for the T.A.S. team.

Making Good.

There is no way of making lasting friends like "Making Good;" and Doctor Pierce's medicines well exemplify this, and their friends, after more than two decades of popularity, are numbered by the hundreds of thousands. They have "made good" and they have not made drunkards.

A good, honest, square-deal medicine of known composition in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It still enjoys an immense sale, while most of the preparations that have come into prominence in the earlier period of its popularity have "gone by the board" and are never more heard of. There must be some reason for this long-time popularity and that is to be found in its superior merits. When once given a fair trial for weak stomach, or for liver and blood affections, its superior curative qualities are soon manifest; hence it has survived and grown in popular favor, while scores of less meritorious articles have suddenly flashed into favor for a brief period and then been as soon forgotten.

For a torpid liver with its attendant indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, perhaps dizziness, foul breath, nasty coated tongue, with bitter taste, loss of appetite, with distress after eating, nervousness and debility, nothing is so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's an honest, square-deal medicine with all its ingredients printed on bottle-wrapper—no secret, no hocus-pocus humbug, therefore don't accept a substitute that the dealer may possibly make a little bigger profit. Insist on your right to have what you call for.

Don't buy Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription expecting it to prove a "cure-all." It is only advised for woman's special ailments. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Less advertised than some preparations sold for like purposes, its sterling curative virtues still maintain its position in the front ranks, where it stood over two decades ago. As an invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine it is unequaled. It won't satisfy those who want "booze," for there is not a drop of alcohol in it.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the original Little Liver Pills, although the first pill of their kind in the market, still lead, and when once tried are ever afterwards in favor. Easy to take as candy—one to three a dose. Much imitated but never equaled.

PANAMA CANAL

The report recently issued by the Commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the progress being made in the construction of the Panama Canal, and the conditions in the canal zone generally, seems to be a most satisfactory character. The report pays a high tribute to the military engineers now in charge of the work, and fully justifies the change which was made in employing them in place of the civil engineers to whom the work was originally entrusted. Among other things the improvement in the sanitary conditions in the zone has been remarkable. While under the administration of the French Company the locality was one of the most pestilent spots on earth, the conditions are now so good that the public health returns compare favourably with the tables of mortality in cities in the temperate zone. Yellow fever has entirely disappeared; a notable achievement.

The report shows that the actual work of construction has proceeded most satisfactorily. In the opinion of the Commissioners the United States is getting fair value for every dollar expended. When the absence of rain last winter permitted the maximum amount of work to be done, no less than two and one-third million yards of rock and earth were moved in a day. As far as appears the work actually accomplished has exceeded, rather than fallen short of, the estimates—a remarkable result when the whole circumstances connected with such an undertaking as this are taken into account. According to a statement in the Commission's report, the engineers in charge of the work estimate that the canal will be completed and open for traffic within five years.

RISE OF JOHN BURNS.

Engineer's Apprentice Who Became a Member of Parliament.

Some people are laboring under the belief that England is less democratic than a republic. They should study the rise of John Burns, now president of the local governing board. Thirty-five years ago he was an engineer's apprentice at $2 a week. This position in England is far more menial than in this country, because a lad has little hope of rising to an earning point beyond 6 or 8 shillings a day. But John Burns kept going.

He acquired an education by self study, because the common school system, as we understand the words, does not exist in Great Britain. He developed the ability to talk upon his feet. He stood for parliament, although he hadn't a shilling besides his earnings as an expert workman.

Members of the British parliament are not paid anything for their services. Friends came to Burns' assistance, and he took his seat with nearly forty other representatives of labor. Today he is a member of the government and as privy councilor may, if he chooses, draw $25,000 per year for the rest of his life, whether in or out of office.

Of course it is not considered regular to take the salary when one is out of office, but some cases of the kind are well remembered. Benjamin Disraeli always drew the money. He needed it, he asserted.

But what I started to say is that a workman has as great a chance in England as here if he makes something of himself beyond a drudge. Such successes are more exceptional there than here, if reference be had to the American born workman, because the foreign born laborer does as little work as he can here or elsewhere. His indolence is infectious, and many formerly earnest toilers have become imbued with the continental belief in shirking duty.

Had Burns felt thus he would still be a mechanic and carrying a dinner pail. — Julius Chambers in Brooklyn Eagle.

Pronounce It Loss Ang-el-ess.

Mayor Harper may ask concerted action toward promulgating the official pronunciation of the name Los Angeles. Repeatedly inquiries have come to city officials asking for the true pronunciation, which queries have been usually referred to experts for reply.

The latest, from Horace G. Adams of Fort Smith, was turned over to Librarian Charles F. Lummis, as authority on southwestern words and customs, who sent to Mayor Harper a copy of his reply, with a suggestion that some official action be taken to get the correct pronunciation firmly established. This is Mr. Lummis' answer to Mr. Adams:

"The word is pronounced 'Loce' (to rhyme with dose) Ang-el-ess approximately—the most vital thing in the hard 'g.' There is no jolly sound in Spanish. I take pleasure in answering your query, which is referred to me by his honor A. C. Harper, mayor of this city."—Los Angeles Herald.

Young's Point

Perhaps the work of the present Dominion Government is in evidence to a greater extent at Young's Point than at any other of the smaller places throughout the county.

The many thousands of people who yearly travel to Stony Lake will remember that a few years ago, Young's Point presented a very unattractive appearance. The old wooden swing bridge which was placed immediately over the lock to allow vehicle and passenger traffic while boats were being locked through. In fact the bridge was useless. The appearance of the Government property at Young's Point was not what it should have been.

Since the present Government took office, the old wooden bridge has been replaced by a substantial steel structure, costing in the neighborhood of $8,500. The new bridge has been placed north of the lock, and not over the lock as was the former bridge, with the result that vehicle and passenger traffic is not tied up while boats are being locked through. The lower entrance to the lock has been dredged, and instead of a channel of 5 feet as was formerly the case, a splendid channel of 9 feet depth is now available for steamboats entering the locks. The entrance to the lock above has likewise been improved by dredging and widening the channel, whilst a splendid new concrete pier, 400 feet in length, has been constructed above the lock, and a similar concrete pier 300 feet in length has been built below the lock.

The Government property around the lock has been generally cleared up, sodded, and beautified, with the result that today Young's Point is considered, by the people who pass through it, as being one of the prettiest spots on the Trent canal.

The present Dominion Government has done well by Young's Point, and the people of the village will undoubtedly show their appreciation of the Government's efforts in their behalf by supporting the Government candidate, Hon. J. R. Stratton, who is sure of election, and who will prove a valuable member of Parliament for this district.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Dredging at Port Arthur, Ont.," will be received until Friday, October 9, 1908, at 4.00 P.M., for dredging required at Port Arthur, in the Province of Ontario.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the works. Only dredges can be employed which are registered in Canada at the time of the filing of tenders. Contractors must be ready to begin work within twenty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honorable the Minister of Public Works, for six thousand dollars ($6,000.00) must be deposited as security. The cheque will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

NAP. TETRAULT,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, September 22, 1908.

Section No. 7

Notice to Contractors

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Trent Canal," will be received until 12 o'clock on Tuesday, the 20th October, 1908, for the works connected with the construction of Section No. 7, Ontario-Rice Lake Division of the Canal.

Plans, specifications, and the form of the contract to be entered into, can be seen on and after the 20th September, 1908, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the offices of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at which places forms of tender may be obtained.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages Schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which Schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered, unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signatures, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10,000 must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,

L. K. JONES,
Secretary.

THE AUTOMOBILE AND DUST

A defender of the automobile tells us that the only way to cure the dust nuisance is to provide dustless roads. In the suburban and country districts of Canada, he might as well ask for grass-lined lawns or water-less rivers. The roads are made of material which grinds up easily into dust; and the flying automobile only needs a very small sprinkling of dust of the highway to be able to fling quite a cloud into the faces of those who come in its wake. It is a common experience, in fact, that just as soon as a road gets dry enough for safe bicycle riding, an automobile will raise quite an annoying dust. City streets may be kept clean enough, in some millennium to be practically dustless, and we may treat short sections of road with oils which will keep down the dust, but the suburban and country districts must be given over to perpetual dust storms under this dictum.

This statement by the automobile champion betrays a too common attitude of mind amongst those who ride like "the god in the car." It never occurs to him that the obligation rests upon the motorists to provide a dustless machine. The roads, as we have them, were built for carriages, wagons, bicycles and pedestrians. These travelers do not raise any large amount of dust from the the average road. But now comes a stranger to use these highways, with a machine which quickly constitutes itself a nuisance to every other citizen of the road because of its dust. Common sense would immediately say that the stranger must conform himself to the conditions of the highway or seek other roads on which to run. But not so with the automobile. It demands that the highway shall be made over for its special use.

Unless the people have grown tame of late, however, they will demand a dustless car. The automobile should be built so that it will not raise an intolerable dust when travelling at a legal rate over the highway. If that means a higher build and smaller tires, they must be provided. If it requires also a more moderate speed, that restriction will be in the interest of safety as well as of health and comfort.

VOL. XXXVI NO 221 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1908 PRICE TWO CENTS

Wants $20,000 from Man Who Failed to Appear and Marry Her

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Because Roland M. Boswell, a young man of Elora, Ont., failed to appear and marry her on the day set for the wedding last June, and has since neglected to make her his wife, Miss Wilhelmina Cummings of West Toronto, is suing the laggard swain for $20,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage.

It will be remembered that after a brief three months' courtship Mr. Boswell and Miss Cummings were to be wedded at the bride's home in West Toronto. On the fatal day the prospective bridegroom called at the home of his bride-to-be and left the house about 11 a.m., to go down town and make some purchases.

The hour for the ceremony found Rev. Dr. Haslewood there to tie the knot, but though the bridal party waited for hours, the lover came not. He had decided not to wed, and was off on a trip to Europe.

Now that he has returned the girl is on the trail, and if she couldn't get matrimony, she will be satisfied with money—$20,000 of it.

Boswell is the son of a well-to-do widow near Elora. He is about 23 years old.

Hon. A. G. MacKay Makes His Last Plea for Life of Creighton

Owen Sound, Oct. 1.—When court resumed this morning, the court-room was again crowded. The jurors, when brought in, showed signs of having spent a rather uncomfortable night, but answered the roll call sharply, and appeared ready for another hard day's work. The prisoner seemed brighter, but, as yesterday, took but little interest in the case. He sat most of the time with his head on his hand, leaning on the side of the box. During Mr MacKay's address he kept from time to time.

No time was lost in preliminaries. As soon as the roll was called, Hon. A. G. MacKay rose to make his last plea for the life of the prisoner.

In opening his address to the jury, Mr. MacKay asked them to free their minds of anything they had heard outside the courtroom, and deal only with the evidence as presented here. The defence, he continued, is not asking for from the prisoner absolutely. If the only one of two choices of the Crown succeeds, the prisoner must go to the gallows. If the defence proves its contentions, he must go to an asylum for the insane, to be treated for his disease. The speaker then touched on the prisoner's history, his excessive drinking, which, he claimed, had weakened his power of self-control. In this all the medical witnesses agreed.

The prisoner's general disposition, witnesses had stated was kindly, and his relations with his wife and step-children were always cordial. Mr. MacKay dwelt strongly on this point, for, as he said, no sane man kills those he loves. That needs no doctor's evidence to support it, and the speaker reflected somewhat strongly on the fact that Government experts had harrowed the prisoner with questions. On the question of motive, Mr. MacKay insisted that the fact that he prisoner's wife meant to leave him was no sufficient motive.

There was nothing certain as to when she intended to leave, so why kill this woman, who, as matters stood then, might or might not leave. All their relations, Mr. MacKay insisted strongly, were most friendly.

DRAMATIC EFFECT.

Tracing the course of events following the prisoner's drunken outbreak of the middle of April, with the consequent coolness on the wife's part, the speaker suggested that her action was in the way of disciplining her husband. He dwelt strongly on the prisoner's letter to the wife on May 17th, bringing out was dramatic effect the endearing terms in which it was written, and the pledges of better conduct it contained. This was written nine days before the murder. Was it the letter of a man who cherished animosity towards his wife? Of a man with murder in his heart?

Mr. MacKay then dealt with the evidence of Weir, Foster, and others, contending that the prisoner's troubles had unbalanced his mind, weakened by excess. He bore strongly on the evidence of the medical witnesses.

"There should not be much difficulty in this case apart altogether from expert evidence," were Mr. MacKay's closing words. "Do you believe that the man who would write that letter; whose relations with those people were so friendly, could do such a deed? I think you will come back to the commonsense view and say, 'We feel this man was not responsible for he edeed he has done.'

"I am not here to beg for sympathy or mercy. I feel that I need ask nothing but cold justice for this man. I leave it to you with confidence."

Mr MacKay had been on his feet almost two hours.

Poultry Men Will Ask for a Grant

From City Council to Help Meet Expenses of Winter Show

About a dozen poultry fanciers gathered in their hall on Simcoe street last night to talk over the prospect of a poultry show here this winter. The first business taken up was the appointment of a delegation to wait upon the City Council next Monday night in reference to securing a grant to help meet the expenses of the show. Considerable time was also spent in discussing the best and cheapest way to furnish the necessary coops. The members also talked of the date of the proposed show but nothing definite was decided upon.

New Walk for George St. South

A great piece of work will be started by the Board of Works committee next week. They will build an eight-foot granolithic walk from J. J. Turner & Co.'s factory on George street, down to the C.P.R. station, on the east side of the road. This will be one of the best pieces of work to be undertaken for a long time, and one which has been hanging fire for many years. The object of the walk is to relieve the traffic on the west side of the road which at times is far too heavy. It will also add a hundred per cent. to the appearance of George street, and will be a great convenience to the public generally.

From George street the sidewalk gang will move to Ashburnham bridge where they will finish up the season.

Had a Splendid Rehearsal

The third rehearsal of "All the Comforts of Home," was held in the Knights of Pythias Hall, last night. The full cast was present and Mr. Boers, the producer, is highly pleased with the progress being made.

The piece is a clever comedy by Wm. Gillette, and enjoyed a long Metropolitan run, both in England and America.

BISHOP O'CONNOR'S PASTORIAL VISIT TO THE NORTH COUNTRY

Celebrated Early Mass at the Former Place and Gave Instruction---At Victoria Road Delivered Eloquent Sermon and Confirmed 50 Children

Kirkfield, Sept. 29.—His Lordship His Lordship Bishop O'Connor made his pastoral visit to Victoria Road and Kirkfield parish Saturday and Sunday last. His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor said the early mass in Kirkfield, and gave a most practical instruction. At 10.30 o'clock Father O'Sullivan said High mass at Victoria Road, after which his lordship preached a most eloquent sermon, taking for his text, 'Be not deceived; God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap"—Galatians, 6.7. After the sermon Bishop O'Connor said he was very much delighted at the great improvements made since his last visit to the parish, and highly appreciated the remunerable efforts put forth by the pastor, Father O'Sullivan. His lordship spoke in most praiseworthy terms of the chief benefactress and the cooperation of the whole parish.

Miss Gallagher sang the solemn high mass. Solos were beautifully rendered by Miss Shields, accompanied by Miss Graham, which was followed by the confirmation of fifty children, who marched from the presbytery to the church singing "Come, Holy Ghost," the little girls looking very sweet in their wreaths and veils.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament took place at four o'clock p.m. at which Father O'Sullivan addressed the children.

Something Must be Done for U.S. Consumptives --Cost Over a Billion

Washington, Oct. 1.—That 5,000,000 people now living in the United States are doomed to fill consumptives' graves unless something is done to prevent it, was the startling declaration of Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University, in an address on "The Cost of Tuberculosis," before the International Congress on Tuberculosis yesterday. Prof. Fisher's address, which was the feature of the day, created a sensation among the hundreds who listened to his statements. Prof. Fisher further declared that the 138,000 persons, who die of consumption annually in this country cost in hard cash over one billion dollars a year.

Surgeon-General Simon Von Ustelberger of St. Petersburg, honorary physician to the Czar's Court, contributed his views of "Heredity in Tuberculosis." "All tendency to disease appears in any individual," asserts Dr. Ustelberger, "is to be regarded as hereditary, whether or not the care spending disease can be traced back each time to parents or ancestors. The tendency to consumption is inherited and may be developed by various agencies. Numerous autopsies show that every man over thirty years of age has old remains of a tuberculous infection. These facts show how comparatively easily the human organism can overcome the tubercule bacilli and give us the indication for our treatment, the strengthening of the organism by hygienic and dietetic means."

Mystery Surrounds Mansion of Dead New York Banker

"The House of Mystery" was the title of the mansion of Banker Giovanni P. Morosini, at Riverdale, New York, and the aged man's recent death has revealed the secret of the name.

It concerns the tragedy of the banker's youngest daughter, Amelia, of whose existence the public has known nothing and whose name, in strange contrast to the publicity given to her sisters Giulia and Victoria, never appeared in print.

COMPLETELY LOST TO VIEW.

The neighbors at Riverside knew that ten or fifteen years ago a bright eyed little girl was included in Mr. Morosini's family of five children. A few years after her mother's death, in 1893, the youngest child was lost to view—as completely swallowed up as was the older sister, Victoria, after her elopment with Ernest Schilling, the family coachman, and banishment by her father to a Vermont convent. A few intimate friends heard indirectly that Amelia had been beaten and frightfully disfigured for life by some animal—a dog, a polar bear or a horse, so different versions of the story ran—but none of the family would mention the subject.

SAW MYSTERIOUS WOMAN.

For several years the neighbors have gossiped about a mysterious woman occasionally seen in the evenings on the balcony projecting from the apartments occupied by the old banker. So seldom was she seen that superstitious neighbors might well have imagined her to be the spirit form of the banker's beloved wife, in whose memory he erected the $100,000 mausoleum in Woodlawn cemetery, where is body will be laid beside hers. The mysterious woman is now known to be the youngest daughter, Amelia, who for eighteen years has been as though a prisoner in a castle.

Rumors that the millionaire had turned against his unfortunate child because her once beautiful face had been disfigured were proved absolutely false.

"Mr. Morosini," said one of his few very intimate friends and advisers, "always spoke of his youngest daughter as 'My darling Amelia,' she fully as much as Miss Giulia, was the apple of his eye, and her misfortunes did much more than the elopement of Victoria with the coach man to sadden his later years. He never told even me the particulars of Miss Amelia's disfigurement, but I know that he spent hours with her every day, and that the family did everything in its power to make her comfortable and happy.

Amelia Morosini is now twenty-two. She was about twelve when the savage dog attacked her and inflicted the injuries which have kept her from the public gaze ever since.

CHILDREN SHARE EQUALLY.

The provisions of Mr. Morosini's will, disposing of an estate said to be worth about $3,000,000, will be of especial interest because of the long estrangement of father and Victoria Morosini, the daughter who eloped. At the time of her mother's death she was excited on account of her elopement. Her husband, Ernest Schilling, has been completely lost to the Morosini family. Attorney Thompson would give no intimation of what provision has been made for Victoria in the will, but from another and perhaps more intimate friend and business associate of Mr. Morosini, it was learned that all differences were sunk and that all the five children have been so provided for as to assure no contest.

Wall street variously estimated the Morosini estate at $5,000,000 to $15,000,000, but both of these figures are said by close business associates to be far above the actual.

Fought on Cliff's Edge, Both Fell 40 Feet--Instantly Killed

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 1.—David R. Reardon, 285 Laurier avenue west, was instantly killed, and Thomas Fox, a brother of Mrs. T. H. Squirrel, 64 Percy street, sustained a fractured elbow and internal injuries as the result of falling over the edge of Primrose Cliff, behind St. Jean Baptiste church, last night, while engaged in a fearful fight for life. The row was brought on, it is alleged, by Reardon attempting to interfere with Fox and a young woman named Elena Williams, who, up to last night, was rooming at 64 Percy street.

The cliff at the point where the accident happened is overhanging and rises to a height of about 40 feet. Fox's life was saved by falling on Reardon. Whether Fox will be charged with murder remains to be seen.

THE GIRL'S STORY.

According to the story of Miss Williams, who is held by the police, she was called for by Fox last night. He had been keeping company with her for some time, and she had been staying with his sister.

With Fox, she walked down to Primrose Hill, and was sitting there near the edge of the cliff, when a stranger, Reardon, came up behind, and whispered to Fox that he was a detective, and that it would be more discreet to get away from the place. Fox retired to a distance, whereupon Reardon seated himself beside the girl, and she says, insulted her. Fox, realizing the real state affairs, immediately stepped up to Reardon shouting; "Now it's you and I for it," and threw himself upon Reardon.

FELL OVER THE CLIFF.

The two men struggled closed to the edge of the cliff and went over, falling to the ground below. Reardon was dead when picked up, and Fox, suffering terribly, was removed to Water street hospital.

Policeman Flynn, who happened to be near the spot, arrived shortly after the affair and detained the Williams' girl as a witness.

CONSTABLE'S STORY.

Constable Flynn afterwards stated that he was going down the steps at the foot of Empress avenue, and and when about half-way down noticed a young man and young woman sitting on the cliff. A moment later he heard the words, "Now it's you and I for it," and saw an object fall over the cliff. He summoned assistance, and on going to the foot of the cliff, found the body of Reardon, his skull badly fractured, and Fox, to all appearances little hurt, lying on the ground.

FOX NOT IN DANGER.

Dr. C. A. Young attended Fox, whom he pronounced in no danger, and Coroner Craig ordered the remains of Reardon to be removed to the morgue.

Inspector George Lang, 44 Lorne avenue, who was near the scene of the accident at the time it happened, rendered valuable assistance to Constable Flynn.

King's Daughters Tea Rooms Open

The opening of the King's Daughters' tea room in the old Bank of Montreal building yesterday afternoon was a great success. The place was crowded all the time between the hours of four and six o'clock. A great many ladies took advantage of the opportunity to secure a cup of hot tea or coffee and light refreshments while they were down street shopping, and there appears to be every reason to believe that the undertaking will prove a financial and social success. The rooms, which are in charge of the King's Daughters, who will use the funds to promote their good work, will be open every afternoon from four until six o'clock, and all the ladies are cordially welcome.

Wedding Bells

UMPHREY—WILSON.

Lindsay, Oct. 1.—A wedding of considerable local interest took place Wednesday afternoon at the bride's brother, Mr. W. E. Wilson, of Russell street, when Miss Martha A. Wilson was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. W. Umphrey of East Toronto, and formerly of Lindsay.

On account of the illness of the bride's brother, the wedding was a very quiet one and only the immediate relatives of the contracting couple were present. Rev. J. R. Real performed the ceremony. Miss Alice Stanton of Peterborough, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Stanley Umphrey, of Burnt River, supported the groom.

The bride was dressed in cream point d'esprit over cream taffeta silk trimmed with Irish point lace and ribbon, and the bridesmaid in cream raw silk.

Mr. and Mrs. Umphrey left on the 6.23 train for Stratford, where they will spend a few weeks. After their return they will take up residence at 223 Garrard street, East Toronto.

New Walk Ready for the Market

Fine New Crossings Also Put In --Good Job Done

The new granolithic walk around the market square is progressing very favorably and will be completed today and ready for use for tomorrow's market. The walk is being particularly well built under the supervision of Mr. John Thirtkeck. There is a solid stone foundation covered with several inches of concrete and along the outside edges, is an iron strip, as a protection against the wheels of the farmers' wagons as they back up against it. Besides the 13-foot walk five crossings have been put in—one from the police station; one across Water street about midway, one at the corner of Charlotte, one across Charlotte to the National Hotel, and one to the market building which heretofore had been a mud puddle. The farmers and citizens who go to the market tomorrow will hardly know the place.

Wrestling Bout Tonight

Hartubise and Mohl will Meet This Evening

Arrangements are now complete for the big wrestling bout between Gene Hartubise and Fritz Mohl of Buffalo, which will take place tonight in the Brock street rink. That the bout will be a good one is assured as Gene is out to win, and he will not let an opportunity to secure a fall go by. There will no doubt be a big crowd present.

Ethel Barrymore Roasts American Society Women

Chicago, Oct. 1.—A despatch to the Tribune from St. Louis, Mo., says, 'Ethel Barrymore, the actress, whose entry into the fast of American and English society is unwelcomed, made the astonishing declaration in an interview yesterday that the most useless, brainless and purposeless order of beings in the world constitute the elite society of America. She expressed the opinion that the mass international marriages with American society girls is a failure is because the brides haven't enough mentality, culture, education and serious purpose to interest the foreign bridegrooms or meet the requirements of the situation they find there. There is no occasion for brains in our society, at least not in that in New York, which I have seen, and consequently girls don't prepare themselves or cultivate their capacities. The women of wealth are merely selfish and priggish, and are utterly content with comfortable living quarters, a good dinner, a little pale or bridge, or a rapid automobile or two. They are empty shells and perfectly meaningless, and useless to the country."

Three Italians Were Beaten and Shot at Glen Road Near Belleville

Belleville, Oct. 1.—A holdup in which it is said that one man was fatally injured, took place early Wednesday morning on the Glen Miller road, about twelve miles from this city. A big gang of Italians are working on the Trent Canal, and near the place where the holdup took place some negroes, male and female, have a shanty. Here, it is said, there is both gambling and drinking. The three Italians were on their way back to camp from this place when they were attacked and robbed. They say their assailants were negroes. The robbers took everything the Italians had, and one man was stripped naked. They were all beaten and shot, two men very badly wounded, and the report says one has since died.

Lindsay was Stung by Two Concerns

About two weeks ago, a meeting of the several committees, two letters were read from two different gentlemen; one of them asked for inducements to bring a maple industry to Lindsay, and the other was very desirous of opening up a shoe factory in the town. At the time the matter was brought up, the council were not in favor of doing anything to help bring these industries to town unless they could know that they were all right, but the town clerk was instructed to write the gentlemen offering them certain inducements and advising them to come before the council when the matter could be duly considered. In the first letter read the writer wanted somebody to build a brand of his an enormous factory and he would establish a staple industry in the town. The next letter was from a shoe factory. It seemed a little more reasonable, but the council wanted the scheme thoroughly explained before they made any advances.

The clerk wrote letters to both parties after the meeting, but up to date has not received any reply, and it is thought that the promoters have dropped the idea of coming here.—Lindsay Free Press.

Obituary

ALTA LILY MCFADDEN.

Lindsay, Oct. 1.—The death took place yesterday of Miss Alta Lily, daughter of Mrs. J. W. McFadden, 138 William street, at the early age of 27 years and three months, after an illness of two and a half years from internal troubles.

The deceased young lady, who was of a kind and lovable disposition, leaves behind her to mourn her loss her sorrowing mother, three sisters and three brothers;—Mrs. J. W. Parkin, in British Columbia; Mrs. A. Joyce and Lida at Lindsay; Mr. Albert McFadden, Buffalo; James and George of Lindsay.

The deceased was a member of the Anglican church, and her remains will be taken to Peterborough tomorrow morning on the 10.50 G.T.R. train, interment taking place in Little Lake cemetery in that city.

50th Anniversary of Their Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Green, 326 Water street, are today enjoying the anniversary of their fiftieth wedding day, both being hale and hearty. Mr. Green turned his 83rd mile stone on January 30th last, and Mrs. Green celebrated her 87th birthday on May 24th (Queen's birthday), and notwithstanding her age is able to read, write, sew, etc., without the use of glasses, and although crippled by an accident received through a fall on the sidewalk several years ago, is able to walk up street and do her own shopping, and was also one of the congregation at the re-opening of the George street Methodist church. Mr. and Mrs. Green are numbered among our oldest residents, having lived here continuously since the date of their marriage, September 30th, 1858.

The wise mother's harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to over very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing coughs and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by all dealers.

THE FALL OF THE AIRSHIP

The human mind reacts upon misfortune. Since the discovery of the potentialities of radium nothing has so stirred the thoughts of men as the practical application of the principles of aerial flight. The long voyages of Count Zeppelin's rigid and dirigible balloon airship caused universal wonder but the triumph of his idea was not assured until tempest and fire had engulfed its first embodiment. Then the German nation rose and provided the aeronaut with the means to build a fleet of airships. The fatal plunge of the Wright aeroplane at Fort Myer may not have precisely this result, nevertheless it is the shock and challenge of nature not to desist, but to carry the struggle to the point of conquest.

In the emergence of the conquering idea, the first crude types of airships may disappear. We may be sure that the gigantic gasbag of Zeppelin's passenger ship will most survive—it is too much at the mercy of the elements and human destroyers. Will Lilienthal's gliding machine, as developed by Prof. Langley, Octave Chanute and the brothers Wright, and lately driven at express train speed in successful flights overcomes the defects that brought its first inventor to his death? On the morning before the catastrophe at Washington, an interview with Mr. Bridgeon appeared, in which he made this prophecy:—

"The weak point of the present aeroplane, it counts which the Wright inventors will never be able to get, is that the operation of the machine lies wholly in the wonderful brain of its operator. Every movement made by the Wrights in manoeuvring their machine must be done in perfect harmony with the working of the planes. One fractional misMovement would mean destruction to the machine and operator, too."

Mr. Edison elaborated his objection further;—

"The aeroplane is a primitive adoption of the bird-wing theory, and as we do not possess the ability to secure the automatic action of the bird, it is impossible. In commercializing any new invention we must not follow nature. For instance, in the effort to discover some means of propelling physical bodies without employing elemental forces, as muscle, we did not turn to the human leg's theory. Far from it. We invented first the bicycle, then the automobile—both great improvements over nature's methods."

Mr. W. R. Kimball's helicopter will soon be launched, a machine which, with its tangential planes running from a central motor, its small propelling planes, and its adaptation to the use of the gyroscope, Mr. Edison believes will insure equilibrium in case of ordinary accidents. Meanwhile Mr. Wilbur Wright repeats in France his brother's splendid achievements in the United States. The indomitable Mr. Orville Wright, we trust, will recover from his injuries, rebuild his machine, and endeavor to overcome the cause of its first undoing. Still other inventors are in the field. The interest and the scientific thought of the world have at last concentrated upon the problem. That is the significant thing. The triumphs and accidents of the present experimenters are also of significance though only as they have evoked and set in motion forces the inertia of which must insure, and at no distant date, secure success. It is saddening that Lieut. Selridge may not be the last martyr to the cause.

PENSION ALLOWANCES

All are familiar with the extremely liberal pension allowances in favor of those who fought for the preservation of the Union in the Civil War. The fact is not so generally known that the governments of the several States which formed the Southern Confederacy have made some provision at least for those who served on the other side. Alabama alone spending over three-quarters of a million dollars for this purpose annually.

The News and Courier of Charleston in commenting on what Southern States are doing in this way calls attention to something which is a cause of constant irritation in the South. For every dollar the people of the old Confederacy voluntarily pay in direct taxation, through their State Governments, for the benefit of Union soldiers of the lost cause, they are compelled to pay six dollars through the National Government to the pension fund of which Northern soldiers alone have the benefit. Under these conditions, the News-Courier thinks it is hardly surprising that all the bitterness of the Civil War has not yet disappeared from the South.

The journal quoted overlooks another way of looking at the matter in question. Is not a good deal of magnanimity shown in allowing public taxes of any kind, even when raised locally, to be diverted to the making of grants to men who took up arms for the purpose of destroying the nation in which these taxes are collected?

The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the possibility of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men, is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward they have come—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australasians.

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being poured into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-mined submitted a report covering the matter which is distinctly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation, and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 300,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, as far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment sand that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of their occupation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allottees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtue? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he argues forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home, for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in fields, mines, factories, shops. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of inter-oceanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of cities and towns, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute all modern progress to the superior few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the teacher, the engineer, the physician, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

Of all the human luxuries introduced of late years, the motor-car is doubtless the most artificial. To those who witnessed them in use on transatlantic highways with their dustless metalled road-beds, they seemed particularly desirable, and to all those who could afford horse-carriages it was consoling to contemplate vehicles which could be run without horses with all the trouble some adjuncts of feed, repairs, veterinary surgeons, saddlery, coachmen, stable-boys and their various perquisites. The chauffeur was not thought of, as everybody who could handle the reins in ordinary, believed he could guide his "machine" also.

What has been termed the "Motor-Crash" in Europe has directed attention of late to a state of affairs, chiefly in Italy, which seems anything but creditable to the people of the northern part of that country. The enormous development of motor-car manufacture in the United States together with the demand for those vehicles by persons in high stations seems to have turned the heads of the public, and there were not wanting ingenious promoters near and far to induce the formation of joint stock companies for the supply of the machines on a large scale. A South Sea Bubble dazzled the people, and a boom was begun in the Turin Stock Exchange with the motor shares as the principal securities quoted. Even the banks rushed in to buy—on the quiet. In March 1906 the motor-car works stock was quoted at close on 600 per cent. of the nominal price of issue, and about that time began in Turin and other centres an era of share speculation so unrestrained that the modern world has rarely witnessed. Nothing daunted by the existing craze, a donkey engine was introduced under the name of "Fabrica Italiano Automobili Turino," the initials of which spell "Fiat," by which it became known the world over. Founded some nine years ago with a capital of 800,000 lire, or nearly $40,000 in shares of about $40 each, "it led for some years," as we learn from a London newspaper correspondent at Turin, "a hard life", so that its shares could be bought for half the price of issue. The next year the company lost equal to $3,614, and the year following it dropped nearly $1,400 more; but in 1902 it made a gain of some $1,200, and in the next year it gained $18,200. Up to this period it paid no dividend, but in 1904 it paid 6 per cent. and in 1905 the net profit was shown to be $427,836, and it paid a 20 per cent. dividend.

This great prosperity fed on the managers and directors to make some blunders. In the first place, they divided the old shares of $40 into 8 new shares of $5. These new shares—owing to the splendid dividends that had been paid, and to the still higher ones that were hoped for the future—began to rise without ceasing, so that at the close of 1906, they were quoted worth $240, at the end of Jan., 1907, the quotation was $320 per share, at the end of February $340, and at the end of March $440. "There were days even," says the writer, "when the price rose to $460 per share, or 92 times the nominal par of issue, and many Turinians bought the shares in the hope that they should rise to $600 and upward." At this juncture the directors, in the belief that a share of $460 was too large for the medium and the small capitalist, proceeded to divide it a second time into two and a half shares, each of $3 (10 lire); to these, however, they set the nominal value of $20 (100 lire), stating that this was in reality the value of the company's property. Many persons predicted that the new shares would bound rapidly; all the more so, because at the end of 1906 the balance-sheet of the "Fiat" showed a net profit of $1,067,404 a colossal figure for a paid-up capital of $160,000, which had been inflated to $1,800,000, and a dividend of 40 per cent. was paid on the new shares of $20, which corresponded to 400 per cent. on the paid-up capital. But ruin was waiting in the pathway. The concern had provoked the formation of numbers of rival companies. There were as many as 66 companies for the construction of motor cars proper, and 56 works for making the carriage parts and other motor car assessoires, with a nominal capital of $20,222,000.

A certain number of the companies were organized to manufacture motor-cars and accessories, but many were launched with the object solely of making their shares rise on the Stock Exchange and then selling them to the eager and ignorant public. But the day of reckoning must come. Halfway through 1907 the manufactories were jam-full of unsold. The United States, great purchasers of motor-cars of the "Fiat" and "Itala" make, hard hit by the crisis, abruptly stopped purchasing. The "Fiat" balance-sheet of 1907 showed a loss of $1,124,800, in addition to the loss of several reserves accumulated in the past; and not only was the company unable to pay any dividend, but it was forced to confess that the $20 shares were now only worth $6.80, and to call on the shareholders to make them up to $20 again by paying up $13.17 per share.

The latest shares of $20 nominally which in November, 1906, stood at $150, had fallen in January, 1907, to $101, in May to $52, in August to $40, in October to $16, in April, 1908, to $6.40, in May to $6.80 and in June (after the fresh payment of $13.17 per share) they stood at about $20. The Turin Tribunal has begun penal proceedings against some of the directors of the "Fiat" for jobbing the shares (spreading fraudulent rumors which make the shares go up), and for falsifying the balance-sheet of 1906, which showed a net profit of $1,067,616. The rival manufactories, which sprang up like mushrooms in the days of the Stock Exchange madness are in no better plight. Any one who goes outside the town of Turin sees scattered about in the suburbs great factories which are deserted, though quite new. They are manufactories of motor cars which have had to close for want of work.

We are chiefly indebted to the London "Economist" for this Turin episode of the "Fiat", thus given at some length, because of the world-wide fame of this make of motor-car. But in all the big Italian towns there were similar cases; at Milan, Genoa, Florence and Rome. "It is the story of all cities which has always repeated itself, specially in countries which are industrially young," says our contemporary.

The newspaper press on both sides of the ocean abounds in notices of auction sales of motor-cars; and we hear of extraordinary bargains in the purchase of machines. Many of the lots offered are probably of the "Fiat" class of Italy, but a considerable quantity have doubtless also had their origin on this side of the Atlantic. Some of either sex who would give "an eye out of their heads" to possess, or have the use of, a motor-car, may not feel so extravagant for some time to come. They can be bought a great deal cheaper before another season elapses.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-no's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Synopsis of Canadian North-west

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else normally. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr Shoop's Headache Tablet—relieves blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

A Simple Salad.

Cabbage scorned as plebeian takes on an air as a salad—not cold slaw or hot slaw, but a crisp, easily mixed salad with French dressing.

Cut the cabbage with fine grater and put it in ice water for an hour before serving. Dry on a clean napkin and cover with a highly seasoned French dressing about ten minutes before serving.

If a clove of garlic is rubbed over the bowl in which the dressing is made, the flavor is much improved for many persons.

While one would not serve this salad at a formal meal, it makes an appetizing lunch dish.

A Pan Broil.

When it is not convenient to open the lid of a stove, as on ironing day, a beefsteak or chop can be given a pan broil.

This is not frying, as many persons think, since not a particle of grease is used.

Have the pan very hot. Put the meat in it and turn almost immediately to the other side until seared. Keep turning the meat occasionally till it is done, though this need not be quite so often as when the steak is over live coals.

A Mark of Respect.

Andrew Carnegie was entertaining a Montenegrin prince at Skibo castle. The morning after the prince's arrival a party of guests set out in a huge motor car for a long run, and as they whizzed past an inn a great crowd of highlanders rose from the benches before the inn and saluted.

The prince seemed amazed at the highland dress.

"Why," he asked, "do these men go bare legged?"

"It is a local custom," said Mr. Carnegie, "a mark of respect for you, sir. In some places people take off their hats to show honor to distinguished visitors; here they take off their trousers."

A Hen Hunt.

An English paper says that the hat of a certain shortsighted master at Eton blew off one day and as he started in pursuit a black hen dashed out of the gateway. The schoolmaster saw the hen and thought it was his hat, and all Eton was electrified by the spectacle of a hatless and breathless reverend man hunting a black hen circling from one end of the street to the other.

A Rather Novel Complaint.

An English traveler once met a companion sitting in a state of the most woeful despair and apparently near the last agonies by the side of one of the mountain lakes of Switzerland. He inquired the cause of his sufferings. "Oh," said the latter, "I was very hot and thirsty and took a large draft of the clear water of the lake and then sat down on this stone to consult my guidebook. To my astonishment, I found that the water of this lake is very poisonous! Oh, I am a gone man; I feel it running all over me. I have only a few minutes to live! Remember me to"—

"Let me see the guidebook," said his friend. Turning to the passage, he found, "L'eau du lac est bien poissonneuse" (The water of this lake abounds in fish).

"Is that the meaning of it?"

"Certainly."

The dying man looked up with a radiant countenance. "What would have become of you," said his friend, "if I had not met you?"

"I should have died of imperfect knowledge of the French language."

A Great Man's Simple Speech.

I was lately told a delightful story of a great statesman staying with a humble and anxious host who had invited a party of simple and unimportant people to meet the great man. The statesman came in late for dinner and was introduced to the party. He made a series of old fashioned bows in all directions, but no one felt in a position to offer any observations. The great man at the conclusion of the ceremony turned to his host and said in tones that had often thrilled a listening senate: "What very convenient jugs you have in your bedrooms. They pour well." The social frost broke up, the company was delighted to find that the great man was interested in mundane matters of a kind on which every one might be permitted to have an opinion, and the conversation, starting from the humblest conveniences of daily life, melted insensibly into more liberal subjects.—Arthur C. Benson in Putnam's and the Reader.

An American Admirer.

In a small way an American figures in the journal kept by Rosalie Lamorlaye during the revolutionary days of 1793 in France and published under the title, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

Rosalie Lamorliere, a girl of Picardy, was servant to the queen in the conciergerie. "One day," Rosalie has recorded, "M. de Saint Leger, the American, who was coming from the register's office, noticed that I was carrying a glass half filled with water.

"'Did the queen drink the water that has gone from the glass?' he asked.

"I answered that she did.

"With a quick gesture he uncovered his head and drank the water that remained with every indication of utmost satisfaction."

First Dining Car.

"Just forty years ago," said T. C. Newton, a Chicago railroad man, "the Chicago and Alton railroad put on the first dining car ever operated on any railway train in the world. This was on the run between Chicago and St. Louis. If that car could be exhibited now it would create universal merriment. It had oilcloth table covers, the seats were screwed to the floor, and its illumination depended on candles.

"Think of the contrast between that primitive affair of 1868 and the modern dining car, finished in solid mahogany, with gorgeous furniture and a menu as elaborate and cooking as dainty as those supplied by any of the finest hotels of America. Verily we have been 'going some' in the four decades that have gone by since the Alton's first crude experiment."—Baltimore American.

Camera Eye and Index Brain.

What would you say of a gentleman who having looked once into the face of each of those soldiers that made up the grand army which Napoleon took to Russia and being told the soldier's name would know him, name and face, two years, ten years, twenty years later? Think of a gentleman who could thus have called the muster roll of an army of 100,000 men. Such, however, would seem to be the full power of eye and memory which belongs to Detective William P. Sheridan of Mulberry street, New York, the "man with the camera eyes," and a few estimate declares that he has filed away in his brain, each tagged with the proper name, the pictures of no fewer than 100,000 men.—Broadway Magazine.

Wrecking Windmills a New Industry.

The passing of the windmill in England, antiquated by such recent power producers as the gas engine and electric motor, has given life to a new industry—windmill wrecking. The old windmill builders understood their business and meant their handiwork to last, and as the demolishing of such structures is no simple task. Many of the old mills stood 100 feet high and had eight or nine floors fitted with four runs of stones and contained tons upon tons of brick. Often these huge mills stand close to other buildings, and accidents would be inevitable if the wreckers did not have experience in their tasks.—Popular Mechanics.

SAILORS' UNIFORMS.

Copied From England and Not Representative of America.

All are familiar with the American man-of-war sailor's suit, but has any one ever stopped to consider how he comes by it and what the origin of it is? With the exception of the fit itself and the stars in the corner of the collar the whole suit is copied from the English. One would have thought that by this time the American nation would have fallen upon some original costume for its navy in some way more representative of America.

In the early days of the British navy it was still the custom to tie the hair in a cue after well greasing it, but much annoyance was felt by the men in consequence of the oil getting on the rough serge of their jumpers or blouses. This caused the blue collar of the same material as the jumper to be added, but without much success, as the collar looked quite as untidy, so at length the idea of putting the blue drill one over the serge was adopted, the drill collar being a separate appendage and therefore easily washed and kept clean. The lanyard was worn to represent the ropes and rigging of the ship, and the jackknife indicated that (to be paradoxical) the bluejacket's object in life was death—to his enemy.

In those days the neck was exposed, but as time went on and more thought was given to the welfare of the men this was found to be injurious to the health; hence the substitute of the white neck flannel, white being used to give the effect of the uncovered neck.

The two rows of white braid at the top of the cuff represent England and Ireland, the one row at the bottom showing that Scotland had not become annexed. The rows of braid on the collar represent wholly and solely the victories of Nelson.

A Preserve Owner's Sick Trout.

A man whose experience as a sportsman had been limited to an occasional day's fishing in the mountains bought for himself a place with a fine trout preserve on Long Island. He looked forward with great interest to the last opening day, as that would be his first opportunity to fish in his own pond, and when the day at last arrived the first streak of daylight found him leaving his house, rod in hand.

A day or two later a sportsman friend inquired as to what luck he had had.

"I caught plenty of fish, and big ones, too," responded the owner of the preserve. "There are plenty of trout in the pond, but they all seem to be sick."

"Why, what's the matter with them?" asked the sportsman.

"Well," answered the preserve owner, "to tell the truth, we were afraid to eat them. Their flesh is pink, and I never saw a brook trout that color before."

"Don't you know, man," exclaimed the sportsman, with a laugh, "that any trout will turn pink if it lives in salt The Ugliest Beast.

Probably the ugliest beast in the world is a monkey, a grewsome looking animal called the bearded saki. This is so utterly grotesque a beast that it would scarcely be safe to let a child or nervous person see it. The ugliness is not of an amusing kind, but of an evil, sinister nature. The beast has a sort of beard and a countenance unlike anything else in shape and lines. The monkey itself is not particularly savage, but is so hideous that the natives of its country, South America, say that no beast of prey, however hungry, will tackle it. Even a hungry jaguar will starve in a cageful of sakis.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope 'Tender for Construction', will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 23th day of September, 1908, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Frauquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 104.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Frauquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 160 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,

P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

What Every Woman Requires for Headache Lanqour

Mrs. Mary Flanagan Gives Advice that is Sound, Useful and True.

Has your strength given out? Do you feel languid and tired this spring?

Are you pale, somewhat nervous, finding it hard to do your housework?

Thousands feel just the same,—feel the enervating influence of spring, whether that brings out latent symptoms of disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flanagan of Bayner Junction — here is her experience.

"I will never again suffer the tortures of deadening spring illness — never will I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I lived through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, Hotham—Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite—I relished my meals and grew strong. Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic, blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Women who are continually pale, tired and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, aching muscles, bearing down pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that sorely need Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c at all dealers.

Life's Road

Smoothed by Change of Food

Worry is a big load to carry and an unnecessary one. When accompanied by indigestion it certainly is cause for the blues.

But the whole trouble may be easily thrown off and life's road be made easy and comfortable by proper eating and the cultivation of good cheer. Hear what a Troy woman says;

"Two years ago I made the acquaintance of Grape-Nuts and have used the food once a day and sometimes twice, ever since.

"At the time I began to use it life was a burden. I was for years afflicted with bilious sick headache, caused by indigestion, and nothing seemed to relieve me.

"The trouble became so severe I had to leave my work for days at a time.

"My nerves were in such a state I could not sleep and the doctor said I was on the verge of nervous prostration. I saw an adv. concerning Grape-Nuts and brought a package for trial.

"What Grape-Nuts has done for me is certainly marvelous. I can now sleep like a child, am entirely free from the old trouble and have got find a headache in over a year. I feel like a new person. I have recommended it to others. One man I knew ate nothing but Grape-Nuts, while working on the ice all winter, and said he never felt better in his life."

"There's a Reason."

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heartburn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, and you need Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz., Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherry bark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of "American Dispensatory"; Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., Author of "Specific Medicines"; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. The Very Latest Cobalt News

Captain Edwin Pauley, the Cobalt hero, who saved the lives of two children during the terrible explosion and fire at Cobalt in 1908, for which deed he was authorized by vote of the Council of Canada, approved by the Governor-General, to wear the bronze life saving medal of the Royal Human Society on his right breast in a position corresponding with war medals, is only now fully recovering his former well-known energy, after nearly two years of suffering and illness in various hospitals. Capt Pauley, however, has an indomitable tenacity of will, and owing to the intense desire of the many thousands interested in the great Cobalt Silver Camp, is announcing the early publication of a new, live, up-to-date newspaper—The Cobalt Star—which it is needless to say will fill a long felt want and will undoubtedly exercise a great influence. Captain Pauley's knowledge of the Cobalt district is perhaps unequalled by many others as he was one of the first to prospect over the silver fields, and he is deserving of every success in his new undertaking. My reading dan two Hollars at Cobalt, New Ontario. It will place in your home or your desk every week for a year, a fine right page newspaper, embracing in part, all the latest and most reliable mining news of the wonderful district, with Subscribers' Special Information Department, Editorial and Financial Comment, Flashes from the Wires, the Captain's Own Corner, etc., all linked with the most interesting local sayings and doings of a great and unique mining camp. By sending at once you will be sure to receive a first copy of The Cobalt Star, containing the opening chapter of a brand new, never yet published, thrilling serial story of mining life by Captain Pauley himself, who is an inimitable writer of fascinating fireside stories. The captain's popularity and the merits of his undertaking together with the channels of his experiences, ensures a tremendous circulation, and when ordering for yourself you can also help him and his good work along by subscribing for relatives and friends who will thoroughly enjoy the lively paper and look for it every week. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Obituary

The death of Mr. John Williamson, formerly a resident of this city people will remember in the earlier days, and who now resides at Pilot Butte, Sask., together with three sisters is also deceased, he also leaves one brother, Dr. W. T. Williamson of Portland, Oregon.

The remains of the late Mr. Williamson arrived in the city via C.P.R. local last evening, and will leave the undertaking establishment of Mr. D. Hellegias at one o'clock p.m., today to Little Lake cemetery.

Interment in Moose Jaw, Sask., on Monday last, September 28th, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. Cunningham.

The late Mr. Williamson was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and was in his 76th year.

Those left to mourn the death of their father are two sons and three daughters, viz., Miss Agnes Williamson, formerly kindergarten directoress of this city, and now of Moose Jaw; Mrs. A. Cunningham, Moose Jaw, Sask; Mrs. Wm. Davidson, Oromble; Mrs. D. Williamson, New Dickend, and Mr. R. G. Williamson, Toronto, besides the sons and daughters, Mr. Williamson leaves his aged father, who celebrated his 98th birthday in June of this year, and is hale and hearty, and whom many of the Keene and Allendale

Alive to Local Necessities

While it is always important to view the canal as a national waterway, designed to carry the grain of the west to the seaboard, it is important as with less for governments to keep a watchful eye on the requirements with respect to local uses, that from time to time may arise. The present Dominion Government has shown itself alive to the interests of West Peterborough in this respect, and has been liberal in the matter of making grants for wharves for the farmers of West Peterborough, and for the public generally. On the Otonabee river, between Peterborough and Rice Lake are two particularly fine docks—one at Wallace's Point, and one at Bridgenorth Bridge. These have been built during the past few years—since West Peterborough saw fit to return an aggressive member, who would be alive to the requirements of his constituents. The Bridgenorth wharf is a substantial structure and affords excellent accommodation to the farmers of that particular section of South Monaghan. The structure cost over $1,200. The wharf at Wallace's Point cost in the neighborhood of $1,200, and is a splendid piece of work. In addition to this a small dock has been built at Smithson's Landing, a point a short distance below Wallace's Point, but on the opposite of the river. A great many farmers embark for Peterborough each Saturday from this dock.

Under the former government nothing of the nature had been accomplished.

But the Otonabee river is not the only place in Peterborough where docks have been built. Who is there from Peterborough, who has visited Burleigh Falls, without being thankful for the splendid dock erected at that point? A grant for $1,200 was made by the Dominion Government for this wharf and a substantial structure has been built. The wharf and a substantial structure has been built. The wharf at Gannon's Narrows is another instance of the parsimonious government's efforts in behalf of the people of West Peterborough. A handsome new wharf has been built at that point affording accommodation to a great many farmers of that particular neighborhood. The grant for this wharf was $1,400.

In addition to this the Dominion Government at the last session made an appropriation of $5,000 for the rebuilding of the Wolfe street wharf in Peterborough, and the construction of a new dock in Ashburnham. In fact, all along the canal throughout West Peterborough, handsome and substantial new docks have been built for the benefit of the farmers, and the travelling public generally.

There is no doubt that by returning Mr. Stratton, as the representative of West Peterborough, the necessities of the riding will be kept continually before the government.

Work Progressing on New Wharf

Construction at This Season is Inconvenient for Boat Men

Very favorable progress is being made on the construction of the new government wharf at Wolfe St., which was started a week or ten days ago under the supervision of Mr Wm Quinn. The dock will be a great improvement and a great convenience to both the boat men and the public generally as the old wharf had long since seen its best days. Just at this particular time the progress of the work is very annoying to the boatmen, who are handling a great deal of freight, and who will have considerable more before the end of the season. The government did not display any great consideration to transportation in starting the work before the close of navigation. Just now there is barely room for a small steamer to land a cargo. Next year, however, the shipping facilities will be very improved and the steamboat men will have to stand for the inconvenience this fall.

Wolves and Bears Annoying the Farmers in Some Parts of North Hastings

Bancroft, Oct. 2.—Farmers in this neighborhood and all through the wilder parts of North Hastings, report that wolves and bears are becoming very numerous and bold. Sheep are being killed and cattle molested. Mr. Mark Mawson of Brand to kill it to end its ravages.

Greenbush, Limerick township, went out one morning to find one of his calves with a large portion of the flesh eaten completely off its hind leg, leaving the bone bare, evidently the work of either wolves or bears.

A Hungry Crowd of unemployed Storm a Church in Glasgow

A despatch from Glasgow says there is a great deal of excitement over the attitude of the unemployed there, a veritable panic having been created over the attempt to storm the citadel on Sunday. No such scene ever had been witnessed in the city before.

The day when Prince Arthur was hooed by the crowd was like a scene in a Sunday school compared to what has happened almost daily since.

The rioters, if they can be so called, have styled themselves "The Out of Work Executive Committee." There was a tremendous crowd gathered around the cathedral—several thousand in fact—when the police were called to the scene. One mounted a rostrum that had been erected and made a very fiery speech. He declared there were 100,000 hungry beings in Glasgow, and asked how can they expect fair play from a municipality that spends thousands on entertaining a prince, and in putting up expensive luncheons at the cost of the people that they might stand in with the favored few?

When the cathedral bells began to toll there was a pause, and the police began to line up to protect the edifice.

"Listen to the bell," cried the reformer. "It calls us to pray. Let us pray, let us go into the church and learn how to starve. Come on." Then the crowd began to storm towards the church. The police prevented them. One man pressed forward and wanted to know why they were prevented from worshipping.

Someone cried out, "Rush the police," and then a fierce struggle started, the crowd behind pressed forward on those in front. The deputy police constable authorized the police to draw their batons. This held the mob back for a while, but the pressure was too strong, and the crowd were clubbed. But the men were too much for the police. When they had the upper hand, they explained that they had nothing against the officers, who, they said, they recognized as doing simply their duty.

Then three cheers went up for the police and groans went up for royalty and the capitalistic classes.

"What is the matter with Prince Arthur?" and there was a great shout went up; "To —— with Prince Arthur and all the other princes." The police did not interfere so long as the agitation was kept to words, and soon the meeting dispersed.

Creighton will Have to Hang on Thursday, Dec. 3rd--Warning to Others

Owen Sound, Oct. 2.—James Farish Creighton, who was accused of having on the 20th of May last, murdered his wife and two stepdaughters, unless he obtains a reprieve, will be executed on Thursday, Dec. 3. He was found guilty by the jury yesterday after two hours' deliberation and sentence was pronounced upon him at 8.30 last night.

WARNING TO OTHERS.

The judge said he did not desire to add to the poignancy of the prisoner's grief or add in the least to the pangs of anguish and the tortures which this poor soul must suffer from. It was in the hope that his words might reach others who were on the brink of taking the first awful step downwards, whose feet were about to take hold on hell, and that they might be saved from the prisoner's awful doom, he would say the little he intended to say.

A loved and petted son, a loved brother, the prisoner had early in life given himself up to the gratification of one or the other lust, and he was tast the only one. God knows that the careers many of our countrymen who were in the perilous condition that the prisoner had been in years ago, when a had begun that career which was terminating as it was.

ASK MERCY BEYOND.

Prisoner ought to spend the few weeks that were left to him in seeking mercy from that throne at which it was never refused the penitent. With mercy from that source he might meet those whom he had slain with a smile, knowing first all was forgiven. That was all he could do for him. That was all he could hope for him.

The judge then put on the black cap and sentenced the prisoner to be executed on Thursday, December 3rd.

The jury took two and a half hours to consider their verdict, but were unanimous.

The prisoner on receiving sentence, broke down completely, and had to be practically carried out of the court by the guards.

A Hurtubise Won from Mohl in 57 Minutes

After a terrific struggle which lasted 57 minutes Gene Hurtubise of Peterborough, defeated Fritz Mohl at Brock street rink last night, and by doing so made secure his reputation as one of the best heavyweight grapplers in America.

About 600 people saw the match at the Brock street rink, and there was something doing all the time from 8.29 o'clock till within an hour of midnight. It was a great program that was presented.

Mohl was introduced as the champion of Germany and looked in good condition. He weighed 232 pounds. Hurtubise went on the mat weighing around the 200 mark. A. C. Yokom of the Rowing was referee, and gave satisfaction. Both men were very wary at the start and the first few minutes were without incident. Hurtubise took the offensive but the German picked a weak spot at a critical point and with a fast roll got Gene's back on the mat, getting the first fall in 31-2 minutes.

Hurtubise became aggressive as soon as hostilities were renewed, and went after his big opponent in fine style. The German tried the fast rolling movement time and again, but Hurtubise was wise to it, and got away nicely. Finally the local man broke out of a scissors hold and taking advantage of Mohl's awkward position, pinned him a cavalry. The time was 17 1-2 minutes.

Hurtubise again went after the man on returning to the mat and seemed fresher than the Buffalonian. At least a half dozen times he secured arm and body combinations that looked good, but Mohl wriggled out of them after desperate struggling. The strain was telling on him however, and at the end of 61 minutes Hurtubise got his shoulders to the mat. A great outburst of athusiasm greeted the local grappler's success.

Mohl made a speech, stating that that he had no excuse to make. He said that a small bone in his right arm had been broken by Gene's pummeling, but this was to the credit of the local man. He would have done the same if possible. Mohl predicted a bright future for Hurtubise, acknowledging him to be a good man.

THE PRELIMINARIES.

The main preliminary was a boxing bout between Tommy Daly of Brantford, and Corney Burns of Peterborough. It went four rounds, and was declared a draw by the referee, Mr. Geo. N. Graham. Both boys mixed it up freely, and there was little to choose between them. Burns did most of the leading.

Geo. Lillie and "Kid" Turner went four lively rounds. Lillie, who showed considerable cleverness, getting the decision.

Joe O'Toole and Jack Patterson went three rounds. The youngsters provided good sport. The bout was declared a draw.

Ken Morris and Murphy Sullivan wrestled ten minutes without getting a fall.

The agreement called for a fall to win the side bet of $500. George Graham refereed all the preliminaries except the wrestling part which was handled by Fritz Mohl.

Mr. Yokome who handled the main bout proved a most capable referee. "Tim" is considered one of the best authorities on the grappling game in the country.

EAST CITY WALKS WILL BE BUILT AFTER GEORGE ST. WALK

Ald. Morgan Made Complaint to the Board of Works--Gang Will Go Over in About a Week--Other Matters Taken Up

A meeting of the Board of Works was held last night for the purpose of considering a difference of opinion between the city solicitor and the Peterborough Gas Company's solicitor in reference to a change the company desired in the recent agreement as to regulating the company doing work upon the city's streets. The Gas Company was represented by Mr. J. H. Farmouth and Mr. S. A. Peck.

Those present were Chairman Phelan, Mayor Hall, Aldermen Bradburn, Bulles, Elliott and Morgan, City Engineer Hay and City Solicitor Hall.

The meeting was called for the purpose of considering a couple of proposed changes in the agreement between the city and the Peterborough Gas Co., in reference to making connection between residences and the company's mains. The original agreement gave the engineer or the chairman of the Board of Works power to allow or disallow any request to make a connection what the company asked was that they be only required to give the engineer three days' notice, and that the work be done under the engineer's approval.

The matter was discussed at great length. Each alderman gave his view of the matter when it was decided to allow the change to be made. The company to send a plan to the city engineer of the proposed connection, and if the engineer does not object within three days then the company shall be allowed to consider it is carried.

WANTED A WALK.

Residents were present asking for a granolithic walk on the east side of Maitland avenue. It has been petitioned for a year and a half ago, and as there are now three houses on that side of the street, and the walk is very rough, they would like something done for them.

The board decided to fill the hollows up with gravel to do for this fall and winter.

Another deputation was present in reference to the drain on Victoria avenue. This is the same old creek which has caused so much trouble between the residents of the north end and the city.

Mr. Morris wanted the city to place a tile pipe through his property to protect the foundation. Mr. Bradburn said the town had no right to go to private property to do this work. He would have to do it himself. The board will however, look into the matter next week, and endeavor to settle the whole question at an early date.

ASHBURNHAM WALKS.

Ald Morgan brought up the usual complaint that the Board of Works was neglecting Ashburnham, and he did not propose to stand for it any longer. He would move a motion to the effect that the sidewalk be built in Ashburnham as soon as the market square is completed, and that the George street walk be started after that.

The Board of Works, however, stuck to their decision to first build the walk east from Hamilton Co.'s to the C.P.R. station. This is the first time that any council has been able to handle this proposition, and if it was not done this year it would be allowed to drag for years. This was the opportunity, and it cannot be missed.

It will only take a week to complete the George street walk, and then the gang will be moved to Ashburnham, and remain there until the season closes. This will save the expense of moving the apparatus over to Ashburnham and back again, and the Ashburnham walks will have all been built.

Ald. Morgan insisted on his motion being put, and Ald. Elliott seconded it, but it was lost.

Moved by Ald. Elliott and seconded by Ald. Morgan, that notice be given of the city's intention and pass a by-law to expropriate a portion of Mrs. H. Best's property for the extension of Aylmer street.—Carried.

New Dock at Lakefield to be Started

The deepening of the channel at the Preston Falls locks has been completed, and the locks are now in fine shape. It was necessary to drill the rock bottom to a depth of three feet and then dredge it out.

The drill is now on its way down to Lakefield and the dredge will be brought down today. On Monday it is expected that the new wharf at Lakefield, opposite the Portland Cement Co.'s plant will be started. A set of rock drilling and dredging will have to be done at this point. The dock will be a good one when completed.

A Sad Suicide in Haliburton

Well Known Woman Takes Her Own Life—Gets Up Early Wednesday Morning and Plunges In Burnt River

The body of Miss Bain, of Haliburton, was found in the Burnt River near that village Thursday morning. The woman had been missing for some time, and it is believed that she committed suicide. Previous to her disappearance the unfortunate woman had been in a despondent mood and it is believed that the tragic act was committed while in that state of mind.

Miss Bain was forty-three years of age, and the daughter of Mr and Mrs. William Bain, of Haliburton. There are also several sisters living, some in that village and in Montreal. A brother lives in Haliburton, and one in Kinmount. The deceased has been nursing a sick sister for upwards of five years. It is surmised that the constant attendance at the sick bed had unbalanced her mind.

The victim of the tragedy was missed Wednesday morning, when the rest of the family had arisen from their night's rest. The family became uneasy and were thoroughly frightened when a neighbor girl stated that she had heard the gate open and shut during the night, between one and two o'clock. A search party was organized at once and the entire village turned out to assist.

SEARCH PARTIES FORMED.

The men from the three saw mills were formed into separate search parties and they dragged the river and searched the banks. At Lakeling's dam the body of the unfortunate woman was discovered at the bottom of the river, the head resting between two logs. Gently the men raised the object to form and conveyed it to her parent's home, where many gathered to expressed their sympathy with the parents and relatives of the deceased.

The parents of the woman are well known and respected throughout the village and neighborhood. Mr. Blain is the caretaker of the English church, and the town hall, and also serves the municipality in other ways.

The sad affair created the deepest grief in the village. The victim was known as a gentle, good-natured woman and her friends were numerous. When her disappearance was made known hardly a soul remained in the village and all took up the search around. The mills shut down until the body was found.

NERVOUS DEBILITY CURED

Diseases and indiscretions are the cause of more sorrow and suffering than all other diseases combined. We see the victims of vicious habits on every hand: the sallow, emaciated face, dark circled eyes, stooping form, impaired development, youthful, sunken countenance and timid bearing proclaim to all the world his folly and fault to blight his existence. Our treatment positively cures all weak men by overcoming and removing the effects of former indiscretions and excesses. It stops all drains and quickly restores the victim to what nature intended—a healthy and happy man with physical, mental and nerve power complete.

For over 30 years Drs. K. & K. have treated with the greatest success all diseases of men and women.

If you have any secret disease that is a worry and a source to your health consult old established physicians who do not have to experiment on you.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumberance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quarts ledge 80 feet wide for a distance of 180 feet at 170 feet depth extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $68.06 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

A New Siding to The Matthews Co. via George St

From C.P.R.--It Will be Used Entirely for Unloading Purposes

A new siding is being laid by the C.P.R. across George street to the Geo. Matthews Co.'s factory. Some of the members of the Board of Works were very much surprised that no application had been made to the Board of Works by either company and were even indignant to think that the work was being done. Upon applying to the city clerk and city solicitor however, it was learned that the council and the railway commission had granted the C.P.R. permission some two or three years ago. The new switch will be used for the purpose of unloading of their plant, while the old siding will be used for loading, and it is claimed that it will reduce the amount of traffic over George street instead of increasing it as would be naturally supposed.

Raymond Perry Found Unconscious

Raymond Perry, the seventeen year old son of Mrs. J. E. Perry, 231 Hunter street, was the victim of a hold up on Aylmer street, just north of the tannery, last evening about half-past seven. Yesterday morning the young fellow was still in a semi-conscious condition, and was unable to give the particulars of the affair.

He was found shortly after ten o'clock lying unconscious at the north side of the tannery. He was carried into the office of Dr. Leach. Dr. Marshall was called. The young man must have received a severe blow on the back of the head which stunned him. When he partially recovered he found that his watch had been taken.

The police were notified and are working on the case. As the particulars of the affair gained from the victim were not very vague, not much clue was given them to work on.

But Tells Facts About Postum

"We have used Postum for the past eight years," writes a Wis. lady, "and think it three times a day. We never tire of it.

"For several years I could scarcely eat anything on account of dyspepsia. Bloating after meals, palpitation, sick headache—in fact was in such misery and distress I tried living on hot water and toast for nearly a year.

"I had quit coffee, the cause of my trouble, and was using hot water but this was not nourishing.

"Hearing of Postum I began drinking it and my ailments disappeared, and now I can eat anything I want without trouble.

"My parents and husband had about the same experience. Mother would often suffer after eating, while yet drinking coffee. My husband was a great coffee drinker and suffered from indigestion and headache.

"After he stopped coffee and began Postum both ailments left him. He will not drink anything else now and we have it three times a day. I could write more but am no gusher—only state plain facts."

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and vouches for the truth. This he finds he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood by doctors, the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, inflammation, ofttimes, with a debilitating pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic disease of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made, for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

IN THE TRANSVAAL

The decision as announced by dispatches, of the Transvaal Government to spend £700,000 on resettling the country districts with the poor whites who have drifted into the towns, is a welcome sign of their desire to solve one of the most difficult problems ahead. The mining industry is prosperous, but its prosperity has been gained at the cost of right economics or ideas on the Rand. It has now been settled once for all that white labor in the mines can only be used for supervising the work of the coolies and natives who are chiefly employed. And there is a social as well as an industrial drawback to the employment of more whites on the Rand. In the unemployed are there in numbers, and their ranks have been augmented by those who, from one cause or another, have failed on the land, and thus gradually drifted into the towns. But while the Botha Government is to be congratulated both on its desire to settle the unemployed question, and on its wish to develop the rural as well as the urban districts of the Transvaal, it is unwise not to recognize that their task is to be great in attacking the matter in this fashion. The men who are unemployed, from whatever reason it may be, are nearly always the residuum of the community, the unskilled workings. It is impossible that they should be asked, for they are less likely to be a permanent asset to the state when they have been helped to start a business, to open a farm, or what not than when they are left to sink into an unemployed residuum. But farming is work which one cannot learn in a week, whether one possesses initiative and brains or not. And while it is to be hoped that the Botha Government will be generally successful in their settlement here, the best means to avoid that there will be a good many individual failures among those whom they assist.

CRIMES OF VIOLENCE IN GREAT CITIES

An English equal provincial discusses recent epidemics of crime and and expresses the opinion that the increase of murder and violence would seem to constitute a grave and critical feature of modern life in great cosmopolitan communities. In Great Britain, it says, outrages and atrocities are reported in the centers with alarming frequency, and from the continent of Europe similar complaints are heard. Paris has for years been fighting its "Apaches"—youthful hoodlums and hold-ups who display amazing audacity and savagery, and whose leaders often remain undiscovered. A sense of insecurity spreads among certain elements of the population, and there are demands for more police, better detectives, speedier criminal justice.

While these demands are perfectly natural, the deeper questions as to the causes of the crime epidemics and the tendency to violence should not be neglected. Do the contrasts of life in rich and gay cities make for temptation and crime? To what extent do the industrial maladjustments contribute to the evil? Idleness voluntary and involuntary, the decay of the apprentice system, the lack of moral training in the schools, the relaxing of home discipline, are generally named as other factors in the situation.

And then there is the whole chain of complications that immigration introduces. Officers who do fairly efficient work in circumstances with which their experience has made them familiar may display glaring unfitness under conditions that are strange to them. In New York, we know, the police commissioner is urging the establishment of a special secret service force for operations in the Italian quarter and in other foreign colonies. In Chicago the White Hand is asking for the appointment of more Italian police officers and detectives. The suggestion that foreign criminals should be pursued by men who understand their language and know their habits and faction is as reasonable as it is natural. In every great city there are strangers of all sorts and conditions, and among these strangers are those are characters who left their own country for its good.

There are also in great cities the difficulties that arise from tolerated vice, from overcrowding houses and ranges of vagrants, from the facility with which suspects dodge the officers of the law, and from the failure to prevent the carrying and indiscriminate selling of deadly weapons.

But, complicated as the problem of city crime is, there is no cause for despair or for agitation. Epidemics of violence are not an inevitable feature of "concentrated civilization." Efficient and honest police work, with proper ordinances regarding weapons, vice regulation, night closing of saloons, etc., will make life in crowded cities much safer than it is.

The human mind reacts upon misfortune. Since the discovery of the potentialities of radium nothing has so stirred the thoughts of men as the practical application of its principles of aerial flight. The long voyages of Count Zeppelin's rigid and dirigible balloon airship caused universal wonder but the triumph of his idea was not assured until tempest and fire had engulfed its first embodiment. Then the German nation rose and provided the aeronaut with the means to build a fleet of airships. The fatal plunge of the Wright aeroplane at Fort Myer may not have proved by the result, nevertheless it is the shock and challenge of nature not to desist, but to carry the struggle to the point of conquest.

In the emergence of the conquering idea, the first crude types of airships may disappear. We may be sure that the gigantic gasbag of Zeppelin's passenger ship will most survive—it is too much at the mercy of the elements and human destroyers. Will Lilienthal's gliding machine, as developed by Prof. Langley, Octave Chanute and the brothers Wright, and lately driven at express train speed in successful flights overcome the defects that brought its first inventor to his death? On the morning upon the catacombs at Washington, an interview with Mr. Edison appeared, in which he made this prophecy;—

"The weak point of the present aeroplanes, around which the Wright inventors will have to be able to get is that the operation of the machine lies wholly in the wonderful brain of its operator. Every movement made by the Wrights in manoeuvring their machine must be done in perfect harmony with the working of the planes. One inadvertent movement would mean destruction to the machine and operator, too."

Mr. Edison elaborated his objection further;—

"The aeroplane is a primitive adoption of the bird-wing theory, and as we do not possess the ability to secure the automatic action of the bird, it is impossible to counteract using any new invention we must not follow nature, for instance, in the effort to discover some means of propelling physical bodies without employing elemental forces, as mused, we did not turn to the human legtheory far from it. We invented first the bicycle, then the automobile—both great improvements over nature's methods."

Mr. W. R. Kimball's helicopter will soon be launched, a machine which, with its tangential planes running from a central motor, its small propelling planes, and its adaptation to the use of the gyroscope, Mr. Edison believes will obtain equilibrium in case of ordinary accidents. Meanwhile Mr. Wilbur Wright repeats in France his brother's splendid achievements in the United States. The indomitable Mr. Orville Wright, we trust, will recover from his injuries, rebuild his machine, and endeavor to overcome the causes of his first undoing. Still other inventors are in the field. The interest and the scientific concentrated upon the problem. That is the significant thing. The triumphs and accidents of the present experimenters are also of significance though only as they have evoked and set in motion forces the merits of which must inspire, and at no distant date, secure success. The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the possibility of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward they have come—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australians.

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being pointed into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-minded submitted a report covering the matter which is distinctly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation, and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 250,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, so far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment sand that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

The experiment of putting the people back on the land by means of small holdings will be followed with close attention. So far the class of people who have applied for allotments has been of an excellent description, and has induced the Board to waive the condition in some instances requiring the applicants to have a certain amount of capital. Another favorable circumstance has been the fact that landowners in a number of cases offered tracts on reasonable terms, while in others the Board has been able to assist applicants to deal direct with private owners and without the official intervention of the Board. It may be considered, therefore, that the scheme has been started under very favorable circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the results of their occupation and cultivation of their holdings will prove remunerative to the allotees, and show that much more can be got from the soil under these conditions than when the land is farmed in large holdings, whether by the owners or tenants. Undoubtedly the success on a large scale of this experiment in settling large numbers of small holders on the land would work a great economic change in Great Britain.

The Earl of Meath, writing in a British review, expresses the fear that certain portions of the community are losing grit. He finds grave evidence of a decadent spirit and decline of virility in all classes of the English nation, and most of his indictment would seem to apply to other civilized, rich and expanding peoples. Do the men and women of this age make light of pain, rejoice in victory over adversity, regard the performance of duty as the supreme virtues? Is industry honored as it was by our forefathers, and are children trained, as they used to be, to respect authority and admire integrity, high-mindedness and useful service? The distinguished writer has no difficulty in finding and citing signs of moral retrogression, and he argues forcefully for better discipline in the school and at home, for greater attention to moral culture and character building.

To the argument itself, or rather to the appeal in which it ends, no thoughtful person will take exception. But while certain tendencies in education need to be checked and corrected, it would be a mistake to charge sweepingly the present generation, or any considerable portion of it, with lack of grit.

The present generation can fight and endure privation and hardship. It can and does toil in fields, mines, factories, ships. It is strenuous, inventive, ambitious, resourceful. The age of wireless telegraphy, of aerial navigation, of five-day ocean steamers, of railway construction in the wilderness and desert, of vast schemes of irrigation and reclamation, of intercoeanic water ways, of wonderful applications of science to art and industry, of triumphs over dreaded diseases, of transformation of cities and slums, of social reform, of great economies in production, of virtual abolition of obstacles in the way of rapid transportation and communication, of universal popular education, is not an age that can be regarded as degenerate.

Nor is it reasonable or just to attribute all modern progress to the superior few. The co-operation of all is back of it. The farmer, the workman, the teacher, the engineer, the physicians, the merchant—all contribute to the grand result, and all in turn profit by it. It is not the danger of retrogression and demoralization that causes dissatisfaction among so many earnest thinkers, but rather the feeling that we can do more than we are doing. Our standards of conduct and efficiency are higher, our sense of moral responsibility keener. Each improvement becomes a cause of other improvements, each step suggests further steps. The age is doing well, but it wishes to do even better.

At the Theatre

One of the most delightful comedies ever presented in a Peterborough play house was that which was held last night, viz; "The Tyranny of Tears." Canada no doubt cherished Tears." During the four acts last evening Mr Gaultbois clearly demonstrated by his appearance, ability and renowned fact that stage critic could find no fault with whatever in his manner of acting.

Miss Hazel Stanmore, who strongly supported him, must be given special mention in her manner also of of acting. The rest of the company were also very good, and no doubt Peterborough theater goers sincerely hope that the management may be able to make arrangements for a return engagement of this company before the season closes. The next attraction at the Grand will be something unusual, when Eddie DeNoyer and his strong line of vaudeville performers will be here for two nights and a matinee.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says he does, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a deadly drug poison. It's strange how great things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." (and) Very much ill for after for this very reason—men, women and children, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must be law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chances then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the differences. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

"ALL DEALERS"

A Mark of Respect.

Andrew Carnegie was entertaining a Montenegrin prince at Skibo castle. The morning after the prince's arrival a party of guests set out in a huge motor car for a long run, and as they whizzed past an inn a great crowd of highlanders rose from the benches before the inn and saluted.

The prince seemed amazed at the highland dress.

"Why," he asked, "do those men go bare legged?"

"It is a local custom," said Mr. Carnegie, "a mark of respect for you, sir. In some places people take off their hats to show honor to distinguished visitors; here they take off their trousers."

A Hen Hunt.

An English paper says that the best of a certain shortsighted master at Eton blew off one day and as he started in pursuit a black hen dashed out of the gateway. The schoolmaster saw the hen and thought it was his hat, and all Eton was electrified by the spectacle of a hatless and breathless reverend man hunting a black hen circling from one end of the street to the other.

A Simple Salad.

Cabbage scorned as plebeian takes on an air as a salad—not cold slaw or hot slaw, but a crisp, easily mixed salad with French dressing.

Cut the cabbage with fine grater and put it in ice water for an hour before serving. Dry on a clean napkin and cover with a highly seasoned French dressing about ten minutes before serving.

If a clove of garlic is rubbed over the bowl in which the dressing is made, the flavor is much improved for many persons.

While one would not serve this salad at a formal meal, it makes an appetizing lunch dish.

A Pan Broil.

When it is not convenient to open the lid of a stove, as on ironing day, a beefsteak or chop can be given a pan broil.

This is not frying, as many persons think, since not a particle of grease is used.

Have the pan very hot. Put the meat in it and turn almost immediately to the other side until seared. Keep turning the meat occasionally till it is done, though this need not be quite so often as when the steak is over live coals.

A Rather Novel Complaint.

An English traveler once met a companion sitting in a state of the most woeful despair and apparently near the last agonies by the side of one of the mountain lakes of Switzerland. He inquired the cause of his sufferings. "Oh," said the latter, "I was very hot and thirsty and took a large draft of the clear water of the lake and then sat down on this stone to consult my guidebook. To my astonishment, I found that the water of this lake is very poisonous! Oh, I am a gone man; I feel it running all over me. I have only a few minutes to live! Remember me to"—

"Let me see the guidebook," said his friend. Turning to the passage, he found, "L'eau du lac est bien poissoneux" (The water of this lake abounds in fish).

"Is that the meaning of it?"

"Certainly."

The dying man looked up with a radiant countenance. "What would have become of you," said his friend, "if I had not met you?"

"I should have died of imperfect knowledge of the French language."

A Great Man's Simple Speech.

I was lately told a delightful story of a great statesman staying with a humble and anxious host who had invited a party of simple and unimportant people to meet the great man. The statesman came in late for dinner and was introduced to the party. He made a series of old fashioned bows in all directions, but no one felt in a position to offer any observations. The great man at the conclusion of the ceremony turned to his host and said in tones that had often thrilled a listening senate: "What very convex tant jugs you have in your bedrooms. They pour well." The social frost broke up, the company was delighted to find that the great man was interested in mundane matters of a kind on which every one might be permitted to have an opinion, and the conversation, starting from the humblest conveniences of daily life, melted insensibly into more liberal subjects.—Arthur C. Benson in Putnam's and the Reader.

An American Admirer.

In a small way an American figures in the journal kept by Rosalie Lamorlere during the revolutionary days of 1793 in France and published under the title, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

Rosalie Lamorliere, a girl of Picardy, was servant to the queen in the conciergerie. "One day," Rosalie has recorded, "M. de Saint Leger, the American, who was coming from the register's office, noticed that I was carrying a glass half filled with water.

"'Did the queen drink the water that has gone from the glass?' he asked.

"I answered that she did.

"With a quick gesture he uncovered his head and drank the water that remained with every indication of the most profound reverence."

SAILORS' UNIFORMS.

Copied From England and Not Representative of America.

All are familiar with the American man-of-war sailor's suit, but has any one ever stopped to consider how he comes by it and what the origin of it is? With the exception of the fit itself and the stars in the corner of the collar the whole suit is copied from the English. One would have thought that by this time the American nation would have fallen upon some original costume for its navy in some way more representative of America.

In the early days of the British navy it was still the custom to tie the hair in a cue after well greasing it, but much annoyance was felt by the men in consequence of the oil getting on the rough serge of their jumpers or blouses. This caused the blue collar of the same material as the jumper to be added, but without much success, as the collar looked quite as untidy, so at length the idea of putting the blue drill one over the serge was adopted, the drill collar being a separate appendage and therefore easily washed and kept clean. The lanyard was worn to represent the ropes and rigging of the ship, and the jackknife indicated that (to be paradoxical) the bluejacket's object in life was death—to his enemy.

In those days the neck was exposed, but as time went on and more thought was given to the welfare of the men this was found to be injurious to the health; hence the substitute of the white neck flannel, white being used to give the effect of the uncovered neck.

The two rows of white braid at the top of the cuff represent England and Ireland, the one row at the bottom showing that Scotland had not become annexed. The rows of braid on the collar represent wholly and solely the victories of Nelson.

First Dining Car.

"Just forty years ago," said T. C. Newton, a Chicago railroad man, "the Chicago and Alton railroad put on the first dining car ever operated on any railway train in the world. This was on the run between Chicago and St. Louis. If that car could be exhibited now it would create universal merriment. It had oilcloth table covers, the seats were screwed to the floor, and its illumination depended on candles.

"Think of the contrast between that primitive affair of 1868 and the modern dining car, finished in solid mahogany, with gorgeous furniture and a menu as elaborate and cooking as dainty as those supplied by any of the foremost hotels of America. Verily we have been 'going some' in the four decades that have gone by since the Alton's first crude experiment."—Baltimore American.

Camera Eye and Index Brain.

What would you say of a gentleman who having looked once into the face of each of those soldiers that made up the grand army which Napoleon took to Russia and being told the soldier's name would know him, name and face, two years, ten years, twenty years later? Think of a gentleman who could thus have called the muster roll of an army of 100,000 men. Such, however, would seem to be the full power of eye and memory which belongs to Detective William P. Sheridan of Mulberry street, New York, the "man with the camera eyes," and a few estimate declares that he has filed away in his brain, each tagged with the proper name, the pictures of no fewer than 100,000 men.—Broadway Magazine.

Wrecking Windmills a New Industry.

The passing of the windmill in Holland, antiquated by such recent power producers as the gas engine and electric motor, has given life to a new industry—windmill wrecking. The old windmill builders understood their business and meant their handiwork to last, and so the demolishing of such structures is no simple task. Many of the old mills stood 100 feet high and had eight or nine floors fitted with four runs of stones and contained tons upon tons of brick. Often these huge mills stand close to other buildings, and accidents would be inevitable if the wreckers did not have experience in their tasks.—Popular Mechanics.

A Preserve Owner's Sick Trout.

A man whose experience as a sportsman had been limited to an occasional day's fishing in the mountains bought for himself a place with a fine trout preserve on Long Island. He looked forward with great interest to the last opening day, as that would be his first opportunity to fish in his own pond, and when the day at last arrived the first streak of daylight found him leaving his house, rod in hand.

A day or two later a sportsman friend inquired as to what luck he had had.

"I caught plenty of fish, and big ones, too," responded the owner of the preserve. "There are plenty of trout in the pond, but they all seem to be sick."

"Why, what's the matter with them?" asked the sportsman.

"Well," answered the preserve owner, "to tell the truth, we were afraid to eat them. Their flesh is pink, and I never saw a brook trout that color before."

"Don't you know, man," exclaimed the sportsman, with a laugh, "that any trout will turn pink if it lives in salt

The Ugliest Beast.

Probably the ugliest beast in the world is a monkey, a gruesome looking animal called the bearded saki. This is so utterly grotesque a beast that it would scarcely be safe to let a child or nervous person see it. The ugliness is not of an amusing kind, but of an evil, sinister nature. The beast has a sort of beard and a countenance unlike anything else in shape and lines. The monkey itself is not particularly savage, but is so hideous that the natives of its country, South America, say that no beast of prey, however hungry, will tackle it. Even a hungry jaguar will starve in a cageful of sakis.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed Tenders addressed to the undersigned, marked on the envelope "Tender for Construction," will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, at Ottawa, until twelve o'clock noon of Monday, the 28th day of September, 1908, for the work required for the construction, in accordance with the plans, profiles and specifications of the Commissioners, of the following sections of the Transcontinental Railway, viz:—

(1) Districts 'D' and 'E'. — From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, being at the western end of Fauquier Bros.' Abitibi contract, in the Province of Ontario, in a westerly direction for a distance of about 164.34 miles. Date of completion, 31st December, 1910.

(2) District E.—From a point designated on the plans of the Commissioners, about sixty miles west of the easterly boundary of District 'E', in the Province of Ontario, westerly to the end of Fraquier Bros.' contract, north of Lake Nepigon, a distance of about 160 miles. Date of completion, 31st December 1910.

Plans, profiles and specifications may be seen in the office of the Chief Engineer of the Commissioners at Ottawa; also in the office of John Ayles, Acting District Engineer, North Bay, Ont., and T. S. Armstrong, Nepigon, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made in duplicate, and on the printed forms supplied by the Commissioners.

A separate tender must be submitted for each section.

Tenders shall not be in any way entitled to reply upon the classification, or any other information given by any person on behalf of the Commissioners; and before submitting any tender, bidders should make a careful examination of the plans, profiles, drawings and specifications, and read the forms to be executed, and fully inform themselves as to the quantity and quality of materials, and character of workmanship required; and are understood to accept, and agree to be bound by, the terms and conditions in the form of contract, specifications, etc., annexed to the form of tender.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, as follows:—

For Sec. No. 1, Districts 'D' and 'E', $150,000.

For Sec. No. 2, District 'E', $150,000

Any person whose tender is accepted shall within ten days after the acceptance thereof furnish such additional approved security as may be required by the Commissioners; sign the contract, specifications, and other documents required to be signed by the said Commissioners; and, in any case of refusal or failure on the part of the party whose tender is accepted to complete and execute a contract with the said Commissioners, and to furnish the additional approved security within ten days after the acceptance of the tender, the said cheque shall be forfeited to the Commissioners as liquidated damages for such refusal or failure and all contract rights acquired by the acceptance of the tender shall be forfeited. The cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are accepted will be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada as part of the security for the due and faithful performance of the contract according to its terms. Cheques deposited by parties whose tenders are rejected will be returned within ten days after the signing of the contract.

Attention is called to the following clauses in the form of contract:—

'All mechanics, laborers, or other persons who perform labor for the purposes of the construction of the works hereby contracted for, shall be paid such wages as are generally accepted as current for competent workmen in the district in which the work is being performed, and if there is no current rate in such district, then a fair and reasonable rate; and, in the event of a dispute arising as to what is the current or a fair and reasonable rate, it shall be determined by the Commissioners, whose decision shall be final.'

'This agreement is subject to the regulations now in force, or which may at any time hereafter be in force during the construction of the works hereby contracted for, made under the authority of the Department of Labour, and which are, or shall be, applicable to such works.' (The schedule of minimum wages determined upon by said Department will form part of the contract.)

'The contractor shall in connection with the whole of the said work, as far as practicable, use only material, machinery, plant, supplies and rolling stock manufactured or produced in Canada, provided the same can be obtained as cheaply, and upon as good terms, in Canada, as elsewhere, having regard to quality and price.'

The contractor shall conform to the fire regulations adopted by the Commissioners, and also to the laws and regulations respecting fires in the different provinces wherein the work is being performed.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,

P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

The wholesome, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by all dealers.

A pain prescription is printed on each 25c. box of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. Ask your Doctor or Druggist if this formula is not complete. Head pains, womanly pains, pains anywhere get instant relief from a Pink Pain Tablet. For sale by all dealers.

Raising Hull of Sunken Dredge

The hull of the old dredge which sank in the canal near the Quaker Oats Co. last fall, and later rowed down to where the derrick stands below the bridge, is now being raised. The canal officials have a scow on the site and started yesterday to get the old hull out, but it is a bigger job than at first anticipated.

Family was Nearly Asphyxiated

As regular as the cold season itself comes, the stories of the narrow escapes of families from asphyxiation by coal gas and probably the first to be a victim for this autumn is that of several of the members of Mr. Alex Reid's family, 715 George street. Thursday morning when Miss Annie Reid arose from her bed she was overcome by gas when she attempted to stand on the floor. Her sister called for help and was herself under the influence of the fumes. One of her brothers rushed into the room and attempted to lift his sister, but was, for the time rendered powerless, seeming unable to exert his strength. Another brother, Robert, came to the rescue, making straight for the window, which he meant to raise. For a time he was unable to do so as the heavy fumes acted upon him.

It was a predicament which for the time being looked very dangerous. The boys finally succeeded in relieving the situation, but after considerable difficulty. The father, Mr. Alex Reid was not in the house at the time, having gone out shortly before to meet an early train. He had noticed the odour of gas, but his room was in a part of the house remote from the stove from which the gas had leaked. Mrs. Reid was not at home, having just returned yesterday from visiting friends out of the city.

THE CAUSE.

The cause of the escape of the gas is explained by a small fire having been made in a coal stove in the front of the house. It was mainly to drive off the chill of the October weather and the feeder had not been filled. The gas therefore went up through the feeder and easily leaked through the grown to the room when it went out and upwards to the second story.

The family have all recovered from the experience but they will not soon forget it.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A Valuable Asset

The City of Peterborough owes a great deal to the present Dominion Government for what it has done for the city during the past few years. A view of the water front as it is today, compared with a view of it five years ago, discloses a remarkable change, the sum of $24,000 has been spent in dredging the Otonabee River above the C.P.R. railway bridge with a view to having navigation extended to a point above Hunter street bridge. A splendid right-foot channel from the C.P.R. bridge north has been made. At this point there is now a beautiful stretch of water capable of accommodating the largest vessels that navigate the Trent Canal, and when a swing is placed in the C.P.R. railway bridge, these boats will be able to navigate up to Hunter street bridge. It is the intention of the present government to grant an additional appropriation with the view to constructing a concrete dock extending along the water front from Hunter street.

In dredging the river, the dredgings were taken from the bed of the river and used in filling in and reclaiming many acres of valuable land for the city of Peterborough. The city, of course, paid the cost of hauling the dredgings to their property, but the cost of obtaining these dredgings from the river, which of course, was borne by the government, was an important feature in connection with this work. The city of Peterborough, therefore, at the present time, has a valuable asset in the several acres of land they now own on the east bank of the river, from Hunter street south, and which a few years ago was nothing but an unsanitary, stagnant pool of water. This property which has been acquired for city, by reason of the action of the Dominion Government in handing over the dredgings, will prove a most valuable site for warehouses, and the like, from this time forward. The work of the present government has in this particular instance been worth thousands of dollars to the City of Peterborough.

The interest the present Dominion Government has taken in the city of Peterborough in this respect should certainly be recognized. The only proper way to recognizing it is by returning a supporter of the Liberal Government from West Peterborough. In this manner we can show our appreciation of what the present government has done for us. It is reasonable to suppose that with an aggressive member such as Mr. Stratton has in the past shown himself to be Peterborough will receive further attention in this respect. A constituency can only receive proper attention from a government when it has a live and aggressive member. Peterborough can have such a representative by sending Mr. Stratton to Ottawa.

Mr. L. A. Cote, Assistant Manager Hotel Victoria, Quebec, Canada, writes a letter to the Peruna Drug Mfg. Co. given below:

MR. L. A. COTE.

AFTER USING PE-RU-NA I AM COMPLETELY CURED

Mr. L. A. Cote, Assistant Manager Hotel Victoria, Quebec, Can., writes:

"I suffered with catarrh for about eight years, and have tried many physicians or specialists for this sickness, and never obtained any relief. It was only after using your Peruna medicine that I began to get better. I have used ten bottles up till now, and am glad to say that I am completely cured. I am glad to let the public know it. A good thing is never too dear."

We have on file many testimonials like the one given here. Probably no other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to those failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

I will send ten days' treatment of the famous Orange Lily FREE to every sufferer who writes for it. This home treatment cures without the aid of a physician. It cures female weakness, leucorrhoea, tumors, cancers, in their earlier stages, displacements, lacerations, painful periods, pains in back, sides of abdomen, bearing down sensations, and all irregularities. Read the following letters and be convinced of the efficiency of this truly wonderful remedy.

Merlin, Ont., March 27, 1902.

Mrs. K. F. Currah, Windsor Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Currah, your letter of the 24th received today. Please find enclosed $5.00 for 6 boxes of Orange Lily. I would not think of discontinuing its use, and I know that 6 more boxes will produce a permanent cure. Even now I am an entirely new creature since using O.L. At present I know of two other cases the same as mine (long standing leucorrhoea) and as you give some trial boxes free, if you would send me a few I would gladly hand them to my friends, for I know it will produce the same good results in every case. I intend sending you my photo and testimonial letter later, for I feel we cannot say too much in favor of Orange Lily, and know if more of same was used among suffering womankind the surgeon's knife would be cheated of its many baptisms in the blood of suffering women. Hoping God may ever bless and prosper you and Dr. Cowley in the noble work. Believe me, ever your sincere friend, Miss R. McK., Merlin, Post Office, Kent County, Ont.

Kingston, Ont., July 15, 1908.

Dear Friend,—Sometime ago I wrote and told you the great good your wonderful medicine had done for me. Since then I have continued to use it, and after five years of terrible suffering and undergoing three operations, I am completely cured by Orange Lily, after using it for eight months. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Knowing, as I do, that so many women in this city suffer as I did, and knowing what it did for me, I would like to take the agency. Will you please send me instructions and terms to agents?

Gratefully yours.

A BANQUET WITHOUT GUESTS, GOOD LADIES WERE STUNG

Sent Food to Y.M.C.A. for Sunday Afternoon Tea—But Young Men Had Not Been Invited --Pickles, Etc. will be Returned

A banquet without guests; a supper without suppers, was the result of efforts of the part of enthusiastic ladies of one of the leading churches in the city. In the past it has been the custom for the ladies of the different churches to furnish the menu for Sunday afternoon tea at the Y.M.C.A., once a month during the fall and winter. To this feast are invited all the young men who have recently arrived in the city for the purpose of becoming acquainted with themselves and others. It is a splendid idea and many very enjoyable afternoons have been spent by the home less gentlemen who float into this metropolis for the purpose of securing at least three meals a day, a bed at night, and occasionally a little recreation.

Last week notices were sent to the different ladies connected with the particular church which was to provide the necessary for the gratification of that all important portion of a man's anatomy — sometimes called the inner man, to have their contributions of good things at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday afternoon. During that afternoon the secretary of the institution was surprised when basket upon basket of good things arrived. There were pickles, soda biscuits, bread, jam cans, cold potatoes with some kind of gravy on top, cold cabbage chopped up fine, and last of all a lemon pie with white frosting on top. When the latter arrived the secretary could stand it no longer. He could not guess what was up. He had made no appeal for charity, because the last part of his last month's salary still jingling in his pocket. He examined the lemon pie carefully and he thought he recognized the peculiar design of the frosting. He called up the supposed donor and inquired what it all meant. It is easy to guess what were the feelings of the dainty pie-baker, when such a question was asked by one with the authority of the Y.M.C.A. secretary.

Why our church is going to give the strange young men in the city a supper tomorrow afternoon in the "Y" she explained.

"It's the first I knew of it," said the secretary.

Then it dawned upon the president of the Ladies' Aid Society that she had forgotten to notify the Y.M.C.A. secretary of the society's intention. As a result the strange young men had not been invited and there was no one to eat the grub.

Those who sent pickles, biscuits, tin cans, etc., may have same by calling today at the Y.M.C.A. The proposed supper will be given later.

Bible Study Rally at the Y. W. C. A.

A Splendid Address by Little of Toronto-- Miss Reeser Sang

The Bible Study department of the Y.W.C.A. held a very successful rally yesterday afternoon when a very interesting address was delivered by Miss Little of Toronto, the National secretary of the Y.W.C.A. Bible Study Department. Her address brought out the necessity of Bible study. She also touched upon the mission work which is being carried on in Japan through the support of the girls in Ontario (the president of the department, Mrs. W. M. Rogers presided, and Miss Reeser rendered a vocal solo.

On Tuesday night there will be an educational and social rally to which all young women are invited. The program will include addresses by Rev. Mr. Hoskinson of the George street Methodist church, and Mr. Cornish of the Normal school staff, as well as several musical selections. At the close refreshments will be served.

Obituary

WILLIAM JOHN O'GRADY.

With the death Friday evening of William John O'Grady, at the early age of 31 years, there passed away one of the best known young men of the city, and one of the most popular. He was the young st son of Mr. David O'Grady, 522 Rogers street, Ashburnham. His death was due to appendicitis, for which trouble he was operated on some three weeks ago. His brothers who survive him are David, of Peterborough; Patrick, of Douro; and James, of Washington Territory, U.S.A., and his sisters, Mrs. Thos. Raymond, Ashburnham; Mrs. B. Condon, Douro; Mrs. Jerry O'Connor, Seymour township, and Miss Margaret, at home. The deceased was a member of the T.A.S., and a favorite with the young men of that organization. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, to St. Joseph's cemetery, Douro.

MRS. JAS. MIGHT.

At 603 Stewart street Friday night the death occurred of Mary Greer Might, in her 68th year, after a brief illness. She belonged to one of the oldest and most respected families in Durham County, being the eldest daughter of the late Henry Greer. She was born in Cavan township on February 15th, 1830, and was married to her now bereaved husband almost 57 years ago on October 10, 1857. Besides her husband she leaves four sons and three daughters. Her sons are (W. J. Might of Britannia, Peel County; S. H. Might, Calgary, Alta.; G. P. Might, Moosejaw, Sask., and F. J. Might of Peterborough. W. H. Greer, Winnipeg, Man.; John G., of St. John, N.B., and Dr. Greer of this city are brothers. Deceased had been a faithful member of George street Methodist church for 25 years. The funeral will be held from the residence at 2.30 this afternoon, and interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

Wedding Bells

ADAMS—LEAN.

St. John's church, Norway, was the scene of a pretty wedding recently, when Dr. G. Arthur McAdams, the youngest son of Dr. J. G. Adams, 93 Hazelton avenue, was married to May, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. Lean, Harwood. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Oliver E. Newton, and Miss Ella G. Farr played the wedding march. The choir, consisting of ten little girls in white, friends of the bride, sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden." The bride, who wore white satin trimmed with Irish lace, came in leaning on the arm of her cousin, Mr. Gammow, of Cobourg, who gave her away. Her tulle veil was draped over a coronet of natural lilies-of-the-valley and she carried a white prayer-book, which with a pearl and diamond ring, was the gift of the groom. Miss Olive B. Hutton of West Toronto, was bridesmaid and wore a pale blue silk voile, with garniture of white Irish lace and point d'esprit, white hat with pink roses and blue velvet ribbon, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. She wore the groom's gift, a pearl crescent pin. The groom's gift to the usher, Mr. Wm. Drope of Harwood, was a pearl stick pin. While the bride and bridegroom were signing the register, Mr. Richard Clapperton sang "Oh Fair, Oh Sweet, Oh Holy." The bride's going-away dress was of navy blue cloth, with plumed hat to match. On their return from a short honeymoon Dr. and Mrs. Adams will reside in West Toronto.

Rough Riders Defeated P. C. I. in the Opening City League Game

On Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park, the Rough Riders defeated the P.C.I. aggregation in a very closely contested game, the score being 2—0. The game all through, was exciting, and at many stages of the play the spectators thought the P. C.I. would win out, but towards the last of the game, their chances seemed somewhat slight. Mr. R. A. Morrow officially opened the league by kicking the first ball. He also started the rugby ball which was given to the Rough Riders for winning the game. Ex-Mayor McWilliam referred the game and Mr. James Clark was umpire, both men were very impartial throughout the game.

The following was the line-up:

Rough Riders—Laing, Cahill, O'Brien, Quinlan, Giroux, Hollingshead, Heffernan, Corkery, Hayes, Porter, Wareham, Coughlin, Eastwood and Furnan.

P.C.I.—Quinlan, Giroux, Gibson, Layfield, Hall, Fortye, Leahey, Kirn, Anderson, Dobbie, Sheehy, Rankin, Meldrum and Matthews.

This game puts the Rough Riders ahead in the league, and they will strive hard to stick to this position.

Byron's Poem Saved Prisoner, Jurors Shed Tears of Sympathy

Eloquent Lawyer Read Don Juan and Won Hearts of Jurors--Man on Trial for Shooting His Wife

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Cantos, from Lord Byron's famous story of "Don Juan," read by an eloquent lawyer, resulted yesterday in the acquittal of Martin Schleyer, who had been on trial in Kenosha for six days on a charge of shooting his wife, Mary, then Schleyer, with intent to murder.

The defence of Schleyer announced by his attorneys, George W. Taylor and Calvin Stewart, was to have been the "unwritten law," but before the case itself was tried, a special plea of insanity was made, and the jury, after considering the matter for more than four hours, decided that Schleyer was insane when he shot the woman, but that he had entirely recovered his sanity. The jury held him "not guilty."

The "Don Juan" parallel was the big feature of the defence. Schleyer went on the stand and told of his wife's conduct with Herman Kechler, whom he had shot at the time he shot the woman on May 10, last. He declared his wife's actions "made of him a wanderer, and that on each returned to his home he found the house closed to him, with nothing to comfort him except his two little children. He said this had made him insane.

WEEP AS POEM IS READ.

When the attorneys for the defendant came to argue the case Attorney Taylor gave all of his time to the discussion of the legal points and a technical discussion of emotional insanity. Attorney Stewart paid no attention to the law and not a great deal to the evidence, but declaring that the sanctity of the man's home had been invaded he declared that Schleyer had been like the famous hero of Bryon's poem. While the jury brushed the tears from their cheeks Stewart with great feeling read cantos from "Don Juan." They were weeping for Schleyer, but the lawyer was reading about one whom Byron called "the mildest mannered man that ever scuttled ship or cut a throat."

He compared the character of Lambro in "on Don Juan" to the Kenosha man, who had returned only to find his home and fireside wrecked, and his children turned against him. In his final emotional appeal to the jury he realted with dramatic feeling the scene which runs;

"He entered in the house—his home no more,
For without hearts there is no home —and felt
The solitude of passing his own door
Without a welcome; there he long had dwelt,
There his few peaceful days time had swept o'er,
There his worn bosom and keen eye would melt
Over the innocence of his sweet child,
His only shrine of feelings undefiled.

SURPRISES DEFENDANT.

District Attorney E. V. Baker had made a bitter arraignment of Schleyer, but Stewart had reached the hearts of the jurors through the power of Byron and they were visibly inclined to his vision of the wrongs of Schleyer. If anything, the instructions of Judge E. D. Hadden favored the state, but on the first ballot taken the majority of the jurors were favorable to a finding of insanity and after three hours of argument a verdict to this effect was found. One of the jurors in discussing the verdict declared that in his opinion some of the prosecuting witnesses and not Schleyer, should have been sent to prison.

Notwithstanding the defense, the verdict was unexpected, and when it was brought into the court the defendant sat with tears in his eyes expecting the trial would go on with the charge of attempted murder and the "unwritten law" as a defense. When the verdict of the jury was read he all but collapsed and sat sobbing like a child. He was taken from the courtroom by the sheriff before he fully understood the purport of the verdict. At the jail he admitted that he had not expected the verdict.

CHARGE MAY BE DROPPED.

Schleyer is charged also with shooting Kohler, and after the verdict the court remanded him to jail for trial, but reduced the bail from $5,000 to $2,000. It is probable that this case will be nolled, as the attorneys for the defendant have already put in a plea of "res judicata" in this case and claim that the decision of the jury in the case settled forever the Kechler case on account of the fact that the circumstances about the two cases were identical. They will demand the release of Schleyer on a writ of habeas corpus.

Schleyer was formerly a prominent resident of Rochester, N.Y., and just before moving to Kenosha, was in business there.

Departing Officer Took Family Away

Mr. Devlin, the departing officer from Ottawa, was in the city Friday afternoon, making arrangements for the departing of an Englishman, his wife and family. He will call here this latter part of the week and take them to Montreal.

The man is unable to get workmen and he and his family have been of some expense to the city.

Charity Agent, Mr. Frank Miller, related an example of the impertinents of some of the English immigrant families in the city.

A man who had been living with the one he deported called on him Friday, and told him that when the friend is gone he would most likely be turned into the street.

"And if I can," he said, "I will bring my wife and children to you for the town to support."

Mr. Miller informed him that he better not try anything like that or he would throw them all on the street.

This Englishman is not working and consequently nothing to live on.

Terrible Chances Taken in 24 Hour Automobile Race

Brighton Beach Race Track, N.Y., Oct. 3.—With a trail of injured and dying men and hopelessly wrecked racing machines behind them, six of the twelve automobiles which started in the 24-hour race at the Brighton Beach race track last evening were still in the mad whirl at eight o'clock today.

Apparently prudence had been cast to the winds and no chance was considered too great, no danger too menacing, to the daring pilots at the steering wheels of the flying machines. As a result all previous records had been left far in the distance, and it was apparent that if the terrific speed of the leaders was maintained to the end 100 miles would be added to the 24-hour figures.

The four leaders at the end of the tenth hour were in advance of the best previous mark from here to forty-three miles. This was not accomplished, however, without a fearful array of accidents in which the driver and mechanician escaped death by the narrowest margin.

WENT 55 MILES AN HOUR.

In the third hour a piling up of racing machines going at better than 55 miles an hour was avoided by a miracle, four cars grouped close together being thrown into confusion by the crossing directly in the path of M. G. Fickett, special patrol officer. Three of the cars managed to avoid the dodging machine, but Robertson's machine struck him with fearful force and hurled him 60 feet. He was picked up unconscious and is now in a critical condition at a hospital.

The mishaps crowded fast upon one another through the night, the French car, No. 14, catching fire in the seventh hour, and the Italian entry, No. 15, crashing into the fence soon afterward, retiring both for the remainder of the contest. No. 4, which had been smashed in the mix-up, resulting from the running down of Fickett, remained off the track six hours undergoing repairs, but re-entered the contest in the ninth hour.

The Italian entry, driven by De Palma, and the American car driven by Chevrolet, were next to come to grief, the former cracking two cylinders and the latter freezing its bearings. The Italian car retired in the eighth hour and the American car in the seventh.

How Children are Quickly Strengthened

Develops Them with Ferrozone, which Makes Rich Blood, Sturdy Muscle, Steady Nerves.

Children brought up on Ferrozone are known by their strong rugged frames, their chubby cheeks and healthful appearance.

Ferrozone is an ideal nerve tonic and body builder, and in thousands of homes no other remedy is used.

EVERY CHILD IMPROVES ON FERROZONE.

Mrs. E. Montgomery, of Pittsburg, writes; "A niece came to visit me, and noticing her pale and haggard looks, I started her on a course of Ferrozone. The change that girl underwent in a few weeks was marvellous. Her appetite sharped up, she had more spirit and strength, and a rosy color came into her cheeks that I never saw there before. I weighed my niece about the time she started to pick up, and in seven weeks she gained almost eight pounds, and just looked the picture of health. I think this should be an example to many mothers, and I hope that others will try Ferrozone for their little boys and girls. I am thoroughly convinced that it's the most strengthening tonic. It has my strongest endorsement."

The reason Ferrozone works so beneficially with Ferrozone is that it acts directly on the blood, freeing it of all unhealthy matter, at the same time giving it an additional supply of iron.

This at once results in more strength, new spirit and renewed vitality. Just one tablet at meal time works wonders.

Refuse to accept anyarticle the druggist may say is just as good. Get Ferrozone, and the result we guarantee will be satisfactory. Price 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When those "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. With in 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

Ketchecum Lake Club Going North

To Spend Two Weeks Fishing--Will Leave Tomorrow

The reading public are hereby given fair warning to prepare for the usual budget of fish stories, wolfe hunts and big fish yarns that are handed out by the hunters and fishermen who go north for a week or two each fall. As a rule there is not much doing in the news market while the sports are out of the city, and the press is glad to get hold of a romance or from the wilds and to reproduce for the benefit of the less fortunate and more timid public, the experiences of the returned Hercules. The first bunch of jolly good fellows with pack their knapsacks and start tomorrow for the back country, where they will, under non de plume of the Ketchecum Lake Hunt and Fish Club, spend a couple of weeks with the trout in the lakes and streams surrounding their hunting grounds. They will return in time for the election, and it is said that the fortunate candidate will be tendered a complimentary fish banquet.

At the Opera

Eddie de Nogar, supported by his strong vaudeville company including the three Dunie Sisters, played before a large audience in the matinee on Saturday afternoon, and also at night. The play throughout although not based on any particular line, was full of specialties and fun. Mr. de Nogar, took well with the crowd, by his clever actions and witty sayings as a vaudeville entertainer. The three Dunie sisters were also very clever especially in their acrobatic stunts. The management have been able to secure a return engagement of that high class musical success, viz.; "Three Little Maids," which will be here on Thursday evening.

Big Rally in Conservative Club Room Saturday Night

"Tis getting warmer, says the weatherman; so do the politicians, and it is really beginning to look like an election campaign. Saturday night the Conservative party held their second weekly rally in the young Conservative Club rooms where an enthusiastic gathering met to hear the candidate who is representing purity in elections and a government for the people. The large club rooms were filled all evening and half the people could not find seats. There were many present too, who are very seldom seen in there, and altogether the rally was a most encouraging one for the Conservative candidate.

The program included addresses from some gentlemen who are well known and who stand high in the public esteem, and each speaker was given a splendid reception and an attentive hearing. There was a lot of enthusiasm display d, and the evening was decidedly successful.

The first speaker was the candidate, Mr. J. H. Burnham, and he was indeed warmly received. The whole Conservative party is apparently unanimous and in sympathy with the choice they have made, and Mr. Burnham is receiving excellent support. His address was devoted mostly to the attacks made upon him by the Examiner and Mr. J. R. Stratton, the Liberal candidate, who accuse him of mud throwing. Mr. Burnham defined the meaning of mud throwing, which is making charges that are groundless and slander without foundation, and continued it with the policy he had adopted, viz., giving facts taken from the Dominion Government blue books, and bringing a man's character into the limelight. Mr. Burnham claimed that a public man has no right to ask to be allowed to represent this people in parliament if he has not a clean record in private business, and if he is not willing to go to the people upon that character. He stated that he had warned the Liberal candidate months ago that if he entered the field he would have to explain his conduct in connection with the Home Life transaction, and his evidence before the Insurance Commission. This Mr. Burnham claimed was not slander nor mud slinging. He considered the people of West Peterborough should know the truth before they were called upon to cast their ballot.

Mr. Burnham was followed by Messrs. Jas. Kendry, Lt.-Col. Miller, Ald. Phelan, J. G. McKenzie, Dr. Greer, F. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., and Jos. Hatten. The meeting closed about 10.30 o'clock with hearty cheers for the King and candidate.

The Camera Club Elects Officers

The Peterborough Camera Club met Friday evening at the Tate-Taylor Co.'s rooms and did considerable business towards completing their organization. The meeting was well attended and all were enthusiastic in their opinion concerning the future and the coming winter's meetings and work.

Dr. J. A. Morgan occupied the chair and Mr. M. H. Taylor acted as secretary of the meeting.

The following officers were then duly elected;

Hon. Pres. — His Worship Mayor Rush.

Hon. Vice-Presidents, the professional photographers of the city.

President—Dr. J. A. Morgan.

First Vice-Pres.—Mr. R. S. Rose.

Second Vice-Pres.—Mr. E. L. Goodwill.

Third Vice-Pres.—Mrs. A. McCarthy.

Sec.-Treas. —Mr. N. A. Howard-Moore.

A committee was appointed to arrange a code of bylaws, consisting of Messrs. E. L. Goodwill, A. Rogers, and the secretary-treasurer.

Rev. Dr. D. M. Marsh extended a cordial invitation to the club to make the manse at Springville, the Mecca of their first outing on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day, when the doctor will demonstrate, if weather permits, the work of solar photography and also give an address on the same subject. It is needless to say the invitation was accepted, as well as an invitation to be present at the doctor's address in St. Paul's church schoolroom on the 8th inst.

Mr. Louis Mendel was the critic for the evening, and gave some interesting pointers in reference to the prints presented. It is the intention for the members to take a print each meeting, for criticism, and the best print will be retained as the property of the club in an album kept for that purpose.

That is what a small investment has done for me, and my great regret is that I did not get more of it.

But now our Company owns outright without encumberance one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be resolved any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed, working, and paid for, and we have money in our treasury. Development work is done exposing a quarts ledge 60 feet wide for a distance of 160 feet at 170 feet depth extending up and down indefinitely. Average assays are $25.00 per ton. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale. We are now ready to furnish ore for the mill.

The Pittsburg Filtering Plant Will be in Operation by Thursday

Word was received in the city yesterday from Mr. Alex. Potter, C.E., of New York City, who was in Buffalo on his way to Pittsburg. Mr. Alex Potter is a brother of Rev. J. G. Potter of this city, and his mission to Pittsburg, will be of particular interest to many citizens. He is the engineer who prepared the plans for the mammoth filtering plant for the water supply of Pittsburg, and he has superintended its construction. The plant is situated at Mifflinsport, a suburb of the Iron City, and contracting completion. The people, however have been and are suffering greatly from the very bad water being supplied and the engineer has been requested to hurry the work. Contract does not have to be finished for some time yet, but under the circumstances Mr. Potter is going to make an extra effort and he says he will give Pittsburg pure water on Thursday.

There are many in this city who have followed Mr. Potter's work closely and will be interested to learn the result.

Horse Racing is Dying Out Fast

It is probably premature to speak of the days of the horse being counted, as the price of automobiles and other harmless contrivances is still a great deal higher than that of horseflesh; but it seems likely that the days of horse racing are on the wane. There are many indications to that effect. What killed horse racing? Several causes contributed to the decline of that sport, which has been in favor for many centuries. Crookedness among the professional horsemen, trainers, jockeys, etc., had a great deal to do with the decline of horse racing. The abuses of the betting ring also brought discredit upon the sport and finally led to an attempt to suppress the gambling feature of racing.

But with the gambling feature eliminated, horse racing seemed to be of interest to so large a percentage of the race-track patrons, that the attendance at the races has dwindled to the point of making racing unprofitable to the track owners as well as to the horse owners. This year's "Futurity" was witnessed by only ten thousand people, while in former years, before the betting ring was abolished, it used to draw from thirty to forty thousand. But, as in the days of Caesar, the great masses insist upon having "panem et Circenses," and, if horse racing has lost its interest owing to the elimination of the gambling feature, they take to something else. Baseball has largely profited by the suppression of the betting rings on New York's race courses and fully 600,000 witnessed the four games with Chicago at the Polo grounds. Just recently the Giants played the Brooklyn team five games before a crowd of 60,000 "fans."

It has become quite common in recent years to use race tracks, ordinarily intended for horse racing for speed tests and races of automobiles. New another use has been found for such courses. The old Morris Park race course, the hearing scene of many a famous race, is the first to capitulate to aeromodernism. It has been leased by the Aeronautical Society, and will be used as the club site and testing grounds of the society. Where once the thoroughbreds struggled for victory, monoplanes and helicopters will spin and soar, and, occasionally, tumble in the future. Some of the old quarters have already been turned into machine and carpenter shops, where air craft of all sorts of designs may be put together. Out on the field are two structures from which single rails are laid across the turf. This apparatus is to give a flying start to ambitious experimenters. The club house has been converted into the home of the Aeronautical Society and its walls are covered with photographs of airships and dirigible balloons.

MORAL STRENGTH IN WAR

General Kuropatkin, in discussing the reasons for Japanese success in the Russo-Japanese war, lays much emphasis on the "moral strength" of Japan. He says that a Russian expert insisted at the opening of the war that one Russian would be equal to three Japanese, that as the war went on he admitted his mistake and said that they would have to send a Russian soldier to meet every Japanese; and that toward the end he held that it would need three Russians to overcome two Japanese. The superiority of the "little brown men of Nippon" lay in their moral superiority. They believed in their cause. They had either die than lose. They wanted to fight, while the Russian soldier was merely obeying orders.

It is easy to forget the moral factor which has so much to do with the success of armies. France had splendid troops under Louis XIV., but they were frequently beaten in the field. The armies of the Kingdom tightened an iron ring about her, and her glory perceptibly faded. Later, when the Revolution came, many of the best soldiers of France were driven out of the country, and untrained peasantry and proletariat filled the ranks. Yet this ragged army gave France the victories of Napoleon and carried the glories of the Republic and the Empire to the boundaries of Europe. What made the difference? The soldiers of Louis badly led, poorly paid and had little interest in the campaigns. The soldiers of Napoleon were on fire with eager enthusiasm.

Moral strength made much of the force of the American soldiers who fought under Washington. Moral strength armed the British who finally fought Napoleon when he threatened to conquer Europe. And as it goes, history could provide many examples. The flame in the breast of the soldier is as important as the spark that ignites his cartridge. If there is to be another great European war, we must look for the moral factor to incorporate in our calculations. A people fighting on the defensive usually have it, unless they are stagged of hope. A people flushed with victory and a sense of strength often have it, too. But when a government goes to war without the approval of its people, then it is absent, as Russia learned; and its absence is very likely to be fatal.

MAKE THE STORE ATTRACT

The personal element is perhaps one of the greatest attractions in any store for the purchaser who is on the hunt for some satisfactory line of goods. It pays a dealer to have a reputable and reliable line of goods on his shelves and about his counters. It pays to advertise this fact as widely as possible through trade papers, public journals and in show windows. It is a good idea to be satisfied with a reasonable profit on goods and keep prices to a limit that will allow no chance of his being referred to as a money grabber. There is, however, one drawback which, if present, is bound to offset many of these advantages and rob the store of much trade that would otherwise come its way, and that is failure to maintain a staff that will impress the purchasing public favorably. For it is well known that nothing appeals more to any customer than the courteous attention, unfailing patience and unostentatious desire to satisfy which is exhibited by the true salesman. It is, however, from the proprietor that the inspiration must come. It is not only necessary for him to exercise careful judgment in the choice of his salesmen; he must understand as well the art of keeping them in proper spirit for their work. Many fail signally in this, and their trade suffers in consequence. Courteous treatment of employees, consideration of their well-being and a generous interest in them and their affairs as human beings and not merely as accidental accessories to business operations, pays extremely good interest in the end. It is bound to be handed on and manifest itself in the treatment given to customers by the salesmen in their turn.

Of course, in general, the proprietor of a hardware establishment understands quite well enough now to treat his clerk as a gentleman during business hours. But what does he know, or care of him outside those

In drawing up his schedule of salaries does he give proper consideration to the costs of living which his employes have to meet; does he ever figure it out that he owes them a certain percentage of his profits, however small that percentage may be, as a recognition of the fact that to them he owes no small part of his business success? This recognition of worth could easily take many acceptable forms. There is the small bonus coming opportunely at the Christmas time or other holidays; there are nicely arranged surprise outings or banquets which he can make clever personal acquaintance with his salesmen and inspire them with the idea that they are an essential part of his system of trading. Inspire a man with the idea that he is your associate and, in his own particular sphere, your equal, and you have increased his efficiency in relation to your business many times.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The decision as announced by dispatches, of the Transvaal Government to spend £700,000 on resettling the country districts with the poor whites who have drifted into the towns, is a welcome sign of their desire to solve one of the most difficult problems ahead. The mining industry is prosperous, but its prosperity has been gained at the cost of rigid economies of labor on the Rand. It has now been settled once for all that white labor in the mines can only be used for supervising the work of the coolies and natives who are there employed, and there is a social as well as an industrial drawback to the employment of more whites on the Rand. If the unemployed are there in numbers, and their ranks have been augmented by those who, from one cause or another, have failed on the land, and thus gradually drifted into the towns, but while the Botha Government is to be congratulated both on its desire to settle the unemployed question, and on its wish to develop the rural as well as the urban districts of the Transvaal, it is impossible not to recognize that their courage is great in attacking the matter in the fashion. Those who are unemployed, from whatever reason it may be, are nearly always a drag on the community, the industrial weaklings. It is important that they should be aided, for they are less likely to be a permanent drag on the state when they have been helped to start a business, to open a farm, or what not than when they are left to sink into an unemployable condition. But farming is work which one cannot learn in a week, whether one possess initiative and brains or not. And while it is to be hoped that the Botha Government will be generally successful in their resettlement idea, the fear cannot be avoided that there will be a good many individual failures among those whom they assist.

An English legal periodical discusses recent epidemics of crime and and expresses the opinion that the increase of murder and violence would seem to constitute a grave and critical feature of modern life in great cosmopolitan communities in Great Britain, it says, outrages and atrocities are reported in the courts with alarming frequency, and from the continent of Europe similar complaints are heard. Paris has for years been fighting its "Apaches"—youthful hoodlums and hold-ups who display amazing audacity and savagery, and whose leaders often remain undiscovered. A sense of insecurity spreads among certain elements of the population, and there are demands for more police, better detectives, speedier criminal justice.

While these demands are perfectly natural, the deeper questions as to the causes of the crime epidemics and the tendency to violence should not be neglected. Do the contrasts of life in rich and gay cities make for temptation and crime? To what extent do the industrial maladjustments contribute to the evil? Idleness voluntary and involuntary, the decay of the apprentice system, the lack of moral training in the schools, the relaxing of home discipline, are generally named as other factors in the situation.

And then there is the whole chain of complications that immigration introduces. Officers who do fairly efficient work in accordance with which their experience has made them familiar may display glaring unfitness under conditions that are strange to them. In New York, we know, the police commissioner is urging the establishment of a special secret service force for operations in the Italian quarter and in other foreign colonies. In Chicago the White Hand is asking for the appointment of more Italian police officers and detectives. The suggestion that foreign criminals should be pursued by men who understand their language and know their habits and haunts is as reasonable as it is natural. In every great city there are strangers of all sorts and conditions, and among these strangers there are characters who left their own country for its good.

There are also in great cities the difficulties that arise from tolerated vice, from corrupt lodging houses and ravages of vagrants, from the facility with which suspects dodge the officers of the law, and from the failure to prevent the carrying and indiscriminate selling of deadly weapons.

But, complicated as the problem of city crime is, there is no cause for despair or pessimism. Epidemics of violence are not an inevitable feature of "concentrated civilization." Efficient and honest police work, with proper ordinances regarding weapons, wise regulation, night closing of saloons, etc., will make life in crowded cities much safer than it is.

The human mind reacts upon misfortune. Since the discovery of the constituents of radium nothing has so stirred the thoughts of men as the practical application of the principles of aerial flight. The long voyages of Count Zeppelin's rigid and dirigible balloon airship caused universal wonder but the triumph of his idea was not assured until tempest and fire had engulfed its first embodiment. Then the German nation rose and provided the aeronaut with the means to build a fleet of airships. The fatal plunge of the Wright aeroplane at Fort Myer may not have precisely this result, nevertheless it is the shock and challenge of nature not to desist, but to carry the struggle to the point of conquest.

In the emergence of the conquering idea, the first crude types of airships may disappear. We may be sure that the gigantic gasbag of Zeppelin's passenger ship will most survive—it is too much at the mercy of the elements and human destroyers. Will Lilienthal's gliding machine, as developed by Prof. Langley, Octave Chanute and the brothers Wright and lately driven at express train speed in successful flights overcoming the defects that brought its first inventor to his death? On the morning before the catastrophe at Washington, an interview with Mr. Edison appeared, in which he made this prophecy:—

"The weak point of the present aeroplane, around which the Wright inventors will never be able to get, is that the operation of the machine lies wholly in the wonderful brain of its operator. Every movement made by the Wrights in manoeuvring their machine must be done in perfect harmony with the working of the planes. One fractional misjudgment would mean destruction to the machine and operator, too."

Mr. Edison elaborated his objection further;—

"The aeroplane is a primitive adoption of the bird-wing theory, and as we do not possess the ability to secure the automatic action of the bird, it is impossible. In commercializing any new invention we must not follow nature, for instance, in the effort to discover some means of propelling physical bodies without employing elemental forces, as muscle, we did not turn to the human leg's theory. Far from it. We invented first the bicycle, then the automobile—both great improvements over nature's methods."

Mr. W. R. Kimball's helicopter will soon be launched, a machine which, with its tangential planes running from a central motor, its small propelling planes, and its adaptation to the use of the gyroscope, Mr. Edison believes will insure equilibrium in case of ordinary accidents. Meanwhile Mr. Wilbur Wright reports in France his brother's splendid achievements in the United States. The indomitable Mr. Orville Wright, we trust, will recover from his injuries, rebuild his machine, and endeavor to overcome the cause of its first undoing. Still other inventors are in the field. The interest and the scientific concentrated upon this problem. That is the significant thing. The triumphs and accidents of the present experimenters are also of significance though only as they have awaked and set in motion forces the inertia of which must inspire, and at no distant date, secure success. It is saddening that Lieut. Selfridge may not be the last martyr to the cause.

All are familiar with the extremely liberal pension allowances in favor of those who fought for the preservation of the Union in the Civil War. The fact is not so generally known that the governments of the several States which formed the Southern Confederacy have made some provision at least for those who served on the other side, Alabama alone spending over three-quarters of a million dollars for this purpose annually.

The News and Courier of Charleston in commenting on what Southern States are doing in this way calls attention to something which is a cause of constant irritation in the South. For every dollar the people of the old Confederacy voluntarily pay, in direct taxation, through their State Governments, for the benefit of disabled soldiers of the lost cause, they are compelled to pay six dollars through the National Government to the pension fund of which Northern soldiers alone have the benefit. Under these conditions, the News-Courier thinks it is hardly surprising that all the bitterness of the Civil War has not yet disappeared from the South.

The journal quoted overlooks another way of looking at the matter in question. In not a good deal of magnanimity shown in allowing public taxes of any kind, even when raised locally, to be devoted to the making of grants to men who took up arms for the purpose of destroying the nation in which these taxes are collected?

The visit of the United States fleet to Australian waters has caused a great outpouring of editorial opinion in the American press on the friendliness of Australian popular opinion being directed more to the United States than to Great Britain as the source of protection in case of an attack by a foreign foe. The hearty welcome given by the people of Australia to the American officers and men, is regarded by these writers as indicating a weakening of the loyalty of the former to the Empire, while indicating a disposition to draw closer to the nation that is demonstrating the greatness of its naval strength on the Pacific. Such an idea is naturally pleasing to our American friends, and we see no reason to be critical of it, although we may have no doubt of the entire lack of any foundation for it. In their isolation in the southern seas our Australian fellow-subjects welcome a visit from an ally of their own Empire, especially as the naval display made in their ports seemed to add further assurance of the ample force that would be available in case of any untoward they have come—without reason, as we think—to dread. But we fail to see why these things should be regarded as an indication of waning British sentiment among Australians.

That urban living, with its high nervous tension, its crowding of large masses of the population into small areas and its impure air, has to a certain extent at least made for physical degeneration is a theory long held by certain observers. In view of the fact that city dwelling is supposed to constitute for the less well-to-do an actual menace of physical impairment, the rush to the cities has been viewed with distinct apprehension.

In England, where a steady current from the rural districts is being poured into London, it was considered advisable to procure if possible some authentic data on the subject of deterioration. Recently the royal commission on the feeble-minded submitted a report covering the matter which is distinctly interesting and throws quite a different light on the subject. The commission reported that a higher percentage of physical unfitness was discovered in the four rural districts chosen than in four urban areas with which they were compared. Lincolnshire, a purely agricultural community, showed four times as many defectives as a district in Durham largely given over to mining. The commissioners reached the conclusion that there is nothing inherently unhealthful in urban living, while it makes for a mental alertness that is unknown in rural England. With certain insanitary slum districts improved, it saw no reason to believe that the cities are responsible for physical degeneration.

It is gratifying to be told that the fear that cities constitute a menace to our physical fitness is open to question. But this does not do away with the perils of overcrowding, and there is no reason to fear a falling off in efficiency or fitness from the multiplication of park and pleasure areas, better housing and sanitation, and the more careful isolation of manufacturing quarters.

The cry of "back to the land" has now been given practical expression to in England by the passage through Parliament of the new "Small Holdings and Allotment Act". So far this legislation seems to have received phenomenal success in England and Wales during the six months which ended in June last that it has been in force. Possibly, however, a longer experience may not justify the optimistic views now held as to the permanent results of this policy. In an interim report that has just been published giving an account of the working of the Act, it is stated that over nineteen thousand persons have applied for small holdings and that the total acreage applied for exceeds 300,000 acres. Certainly that gives a good idea of the promising start of the movement and seems to show that the reported "land hunger" really exists, notwithstanding the ridicule cast upon the assertion by the opponents of the measure. The Commissioners entrusted with the working of the Act state that, so far as the information in their possession shows the large proportion of the applicants is of a class suitable to engage in the cultivation of the allotment and that the aggregate capital they possess is much more than it was anticipated they would have available. Over two thousand acres have already been acquired under the new Act, and negotiations of an extensive character are now in progress for the acquisition by the Board of additional areas. Different County Councils are engaged in these negotiations, since it is by those bodies that the Act is to be operated. In some instances, we gather from the details in the report, some of these tracts are to be acquired by co-operative societies, which will allot the land among their members. In the majority of cases, it would appear from the report the Board has been able to acquire the lands it desired by means of voluntary sale by their owners, but we observe in one instance a request has been made to it for an order for the compulsory acquisition of the land under the provisions of the Act. In this case the County Council proposed to lease the area in question for a term of thirty-five years for the purpose of providing applicants with holdings. The landowner objecting, a public inquiry by the Board of Agriculture will be necessary. As the first inquiry of the kind it is likely to possess peculiar interest for students of the land question in the rural districts of the country.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-my-tism, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Synopsis of Canadian North-west

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that successful favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and pay for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and absolutely recommend

"ALL DEALERS"

Why We Are All Hlnden.

"If we did not cough in church, the human race would not exist." And the professor, twiddling a piece of chalk in his hand, regarded the sophomores with a quizzical smile.

"What I mean," he continued, "is that the cause of coughing is the cause of our survival. That cause is mimicry. Mimicry is a better life preserver than fleetness or strength. For by mimicry we manage not to attract attention, and in prehistoric times they who attracted attention were hunted down by the tribe and roasted for dinner or hunted down by the saber tooth tiger and taken raw.

"Since those dark days mimicry has been instinctive with us. Mimicry is what causes us to follow the fashions. It causes us, when in England, to say 'never' and 'ever.' If your friend yawns, you yawn—that's mimicry. If he laughs, you laugh—mimicry again. If he coughs, you cough—mimicry. And if he coughs in church, straightway you send all the rest of the congregation cough, the reason being the same one which saved our forefathers from extermination."—New York Press.

Famous Fingers.

Among English schoolmasters whose names have come down to posterity with the dubious reputation of great floggers Dr. Busby of Westminster school is the generally acknowledged chief.

Of him it is recorded that, one of his head boys having insulted a young French viscount who came to the school to demand satisfaction, he flogged the viscount first for the blood thirsty insolence and sent his friend who was the bearer of his challenge.

Dr. Valpy, too, who edited an edition of the classics, was a potent wielder of the rod. Archdeacon Grove, who was a pupil of his, tells a story in illustration of his prowess. One of the boys had been flogged by the redoubtable Busbite, and the lad's father came to complain.

"Sir," said Valpy to him, "I flogged your son because he richly deserved it. If he again deserves it, I shall flog him again, and," rising, "if you come here, sir, intermeddling with my duty I shall flog you."

The parent fled.

A Famous Architect's Trick.

When Sir Christopher Wren was building the town hall of Windsor, a burgess member of the corporation, as the story goes, insisted that the roof required further support and desired the architect to add more pillars. In vain did Sir Christopher assure him that the danger was imaginary. He knew better. The alarm spread, and the great architect was worried into adding the desired columns.

Years passed, and in later times, when architect and patrons were dead, cleaning operations in the roof revealed the fact that the supposed additional supports did not touch the roof by two inches, though this was not perceptible to the gazers below.

By this ingenious expedient did Wren pacify his critics, while vindicating his own architectural skill to future generations.

I'm Telling You.

Pat Murphy, who was in lodgings, was greatly annoyed by the landlady helping herself to his provisions. She began by taking a piece of his butter, and when Pat came home she said:

"Pat, I'm taking a little of your butter, but I'm not like other landladies—I'm telling you."

Next day it was an egg, and so on. Every day there was something taken and put off with the remark, "I'm not like other landladies—I'm telling you."

Of course there was never any reduction in Pat's bill. One Saturday the bill came to a larger amount than usual. Pat looked at it, bundled up a few things in his handkerchief, walked to the door and said:

"Landlady, I'm sloping. I'm not like other lodgers—I'm telling you."—London Answers.

Beautifully Arranged.

Brown—Well, you've got the quarter. Is your sister coming down?

"I've arranged it beautifully, old chap. I told her it was you first, and she said to tell you she was out, and then I said I was feeling sad that it was Charley Jones, and you ought to have seen her hustle to get into a clean shirt waist! She'll be right down!"

Still Possible.

Clara—When Tom proposed to me he admitted that he had more money than brains.

Maude—Well, I've no reason to doubt it, although I understand he hasn't a dollar to his name.

Missed a Chance.

"But, Tommy," said his mother, "you asked for two cakes and I gave them to you. Aren't you satisfied?"

"Oh, I ain't," growled Tommy. "You was so easy I'm kickin' myself now 'cause I didn't ask for four."—Philadelphia Press.

Driven to Drink.

Artie—My next picture at the exhibition will be entitled "Driven to Drink."

His Friend—Ah, some powerful portrayal of baffled passion, I suppose!

Artie—Oh, no; it's a house opposite for a water scene!

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully prosecuted.

I may, therefore, be permitted to epoch out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Beaufort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan south also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in dugging the Cavan drain, meant a much-desired way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to its mutual advantage as to themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Emmismore, a pressure convenience to the people of these townships at no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon River bridges, and securing their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two Counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance, to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to cede to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating room for manufactories, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Canoe Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a case in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influences, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliations, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world affiliations and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 15 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in all distance across as a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 26 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and to all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,320,000. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there have been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,703, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 39 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the inland lakes and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of taking ocean steamers, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. It found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and economy to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 220 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the completion and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation, is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of this country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. . Stratton.

The Midget Snakes.

"I see by your paper," says a correspondent, "that you want to find a man who can tell a snake story with the sound of originality to it. Here it is! Nearly forty years ago in the woods of Indiana I captured three snakes, each less than three and one-fourth inches in length, a combined length of less than ten inches, a little longer and a little longer in the middle than an old fashioned wool darning needle. Although these snakes were so small they could crawl around with their heads up and dart out their tongues like larger snakes, I put them reptiles in an eight ounce bottle, and they had plenty of room to crawl around on the bottom of it without crowding. These were not the kind of snakes generally seen in bottles, but genuine snakes. Among those who saw them was a minister of the gospel, and he had not been taking anything to make him see snakes either."—Hesperia Gazette.

The Pirates.

The Chicago News fails to name the hero of this story, but has it that the visitor to the home of a well known Hoosier State author found his three youngsters romping in the hallway.

"What are you playing, boys?" he inquired.

"We are playing pirates," chuckled the smallest.

"Pirates? Why, how can you play pirates in Indiana? There are no seas bordering on this state."

"Oh, we don't need any seas. We use Illinois pirates, like pa."

And five minutes later a chorus of yells from behind the barn told that the band that wields the pen can also wield the shingle.

Outside of His Practice.

"All that is the matter with you, sir," said the eminent physician after a thorough examination, "is lack of nutrition. You don't eat enough."

"I eat all I can hold, doctor," said the attenuated caller.

"Then you need to have your capacity enlarged, and that's a case for a surgeon. Five dollars, please. Good morning."—Chicago Tribune.

Overstudy.

Books are pleasant, but if by being overindulgent we impair our health and spoil our good humor, two of the best pleasures we have, let us give it over. I, for my part, am one of those who think that no fruit derived from them can consequence an equal a loss.—Montaigne.

Corrected.

A little girl in Rhode Island, the daughter of a clergyman, once sat at the table with a bishop who was visiting her father.

When they had finished she observed that he did not fold his napkin. Disposed, she said:

"We always fold our napkins here."

"Yes, my dear," said the bishop. "But that is because you use them again. In the case of a visitor you don't do that."

"Oh, yes, we do," said the little girl.—New York Life.

A MOTHER'S HELPER.

Girls Who Assist in the Small Household Duties.

Most of the little things that a girl can attend to are the tasks which her mother has in mind, but is too busy to carry out. She can see that the house plants are watered every day, and she can cut a blossom now and then for the table. She can plant a few pansy roots in one of her candy boxes, lined with oil paper, and set it on a small platter in the middle of the dining table for a centerpiece.

She can remove the spots that her mother is too busy to take out of the tablecloth between launderings by putting a few drops of hot or cold water, as the case may require, on them. She can keep a little pansley bed of her own, so that meats and vegetables can come to the table with a fresh garnish.

Keeping the rugs in the living room straight can be one of her tasks; also seeing that the window shades are all raised to the same height. When the furniture gets a slight coat she can rub it off with beeswax, a trick which keeps furniture fresh, but which her mother may not have time for.

She can see that the front door plate, the electric light switches and the door knobs all over the house are kept polished. The smooches on mirrors can be rubbed off with a piece of crumpled tissue paper.

She can make a pretty wastebasket for the living room or any room that needs one out of strong cardboard covered with wall paper or chintz, and she can see that the younger children use it. Pieces of her cotton dresses she can make into covers for the sofa pillows which will be tossed about in the housework and on the porch this summer.

Mothers and fathers like to see their daughters appear domestic in these days, when girls have so many outside interests, and any girl can charm her father by wearing a tiny white apron around the house. It needs be only a man's handkerchief with ribbon strings, but it will please her father and protect her dress. Wearing an apron is only one way of appearing freshly laundered and bright, which is the biggest part of being a real ornament to one's home.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Warm salad oil will relieve earache.

Always try to pass at least one hour a day in the open air.

Never let a child or infant sleep in the room with a sick person.

Never use on the face a wash rag which is not scalded each day.

Do not think that scrubbing will improve your complexion, for it will not.

Cocoa butter will smooth the rough elbows, but it must be persistently used.

Quickly apply raw egg to a cut. It will allay the pain and quickly heal the wound.

If possible have children sleep in darkened rooms, as a light in bed has

Clean Up Inside

Blood and System Cleansing is the Spring Makes Good Health all Summer.

In spite of all your careful habits, its safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pale or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely bilious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years," says W. B. Sangster, of Consul, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite suffered from indigestion and gas, had some pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt despondent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They suited me exactly. In one week I felt like new. I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clear all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand home medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a perfect system medicine; they destroy germs and poisons of every description and strength whereby the system rallies and the patient quickly enjoys the blessings of Perfect Health. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills—to-day—25c at all dealers.

Good Dining Room Girl wanted at once. Peterborough Hotel, Hunter street.

Attended Service

The members of St. Peter's T.A. S. received Holy Communion in a body at the eight o'clock mass Sunday morning they assembled at the St. Peter's school grounds and march to the church, occupying the central aisles.

A marvellous trial reading of character by the well-known scientific phrenologist, Prof. McKellar, L.V., 21 Beaconsfield avenue, Toronto, whose public blind-fold tests prove the reliability of phrenology. Send address and 50c cents silver. Enclose photo when possible. Will return with reading.

Woman's Auxiliary

A special meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. John's church, will be held in the Guild Room this afternoon at three o'clock, when an address will be given by Mrs. S. F. Davidson, member of the Diocesan Board, Toronto. She is on her way back from Ottawa, where she has been attending a meeting.

Cut Her Arm

While using an ordinary saw Friday afternoon for the purpose of making a small shelf, Mrs. Gerald Graham, Ashburnham, cut her arm and required a doctor's attention to stop the flow of blood. The accident was a very simple one and was probably the result of inexperience in the use of these saw. Dr. Neal was called and dressed the injury which was not as serious as at first believed.

Temperance Sunday

A meeting of the temperance workers of the city was held in the Y.M.C.A. Friday afternoon with an encouraging attendance. Rev. Wm. Kettlewell of the Dominion Alliance was present to arrange for the holding of a temperance Sunday sometime next month, the date of which will be decided by the ministerium at a meeting in the near future. The idea is to have a special sermon on temperance preached in all the churches on the same day.

New Rector Preached

All Saints' church was crowded last night to hear the new rector, Rev. H. R. Trumpour, who occupied the pulpit, both morning and evening and delivered two splendid sermons.

Exchanged Pulpits

Rev. Mr. Parson, pastor of the George street Methodist church, is on the sick list and was unable to take the services on Sunday. Rev. Mr. Potter volunteered to supply the pulpit and secured Mr. Hassard, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., who occupied the pulpit in the morning and Rev. Mr. Potter in the evening. Mr Hassard taking the service in St. Andrew's at night.

Changed Hands

Mr. John Duff, for years proprietor of a general store at Indian River, has disposed of his business and will come to Peterborough to reside. Mr Duff was also owner of the grain elevator for several years. The latter business has been bought by Mr. F. A. Kidd of Dummer, and his brother, Mr. Walter Kidd, has purchased the general store business, which he took over on October 1st.

Waking a Deaf Person.

"To waken a deaf person who wishes to be called at a certain hour is about the hardest proposition a hotel clerk runs up against," said a member of that genial fraternity. "To ring the telephone is useless because the man couldn't hear if you rang until doomsday. Knocking for the same reason, is equally futile. Now and then a guest who has lost his hearing suggests that he leave his door open all night so we can walk right in and shake him, but even though he does appear to be a dead game sport there are so many chances of somebody else less gallaious than ourselves walking in ahead of us that we cannot consent to that. So far the only satisfactory way found for waking a deaf lodger is to tie a string to his wrist, pass the string through the keyhole and then tug away at it at the appointed time. That method, however, is rather primitive. It seems to me that the man who can patent a harmless artistic device for waking the deaf is sure of fame and fortune, not to mention the gratitude of hotel clerks." —New York Sun.

The Mollahs of India.

A mullah, or, as it is more properly written, mollah, is a title given in India and throughout the east generally to a religious leader of any description. Thus the sultan of Turkey is a mollah, because he is the supreme head of the moslem world. And there are hundreds of others. To most of the more conspicuous among them we prefix the adjective "mad." This, however, must not be taken to mean that they are insane, the word being used rather in its oriental significance of "inspired." The person of the mollah is sacred. Not even the mighty Habibullah himself would care to lay a sacrilegious finger on one of these saintly personages. If he were to venture such an unheard of thing, vengeance would surely overtake him. For it is the cardinal principle of the Ulima—as the mollahs are collectively termed—that an injury purposely caused to one of their number can only be atoned for by the death of the individual inflicting it.

Greatest Danger to Swimmers.

"It isn't cramp," said a life guard, "that carries off so many good swimmers. After all, what is a leg or arm cramp? Couldn't a good swimmer easily turn on his back and float till the attack departed? No, cramp won't account for the strange seizures that in a twinkling turn a very fish of a swimmer into a helpless, speechless, drowning paralytic. What accounts for this business is water inhaling. A swimmer inhales spray through the nostrils, it passes through the pharynx, behind the epiglottis or windpipe guard and so down into the windpipe. The result is nearly certain death. Swallowing water does you no harm, but breathing it may kill you. How to avoid accidentally breathing it, though, that is a question nobody seems able to answer."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Ice and Mice.

For horses suffering from inflammation of the lungs an old prescription was a mixture of shot and powder in milk. This has even been applied to human beings. In "Idlehurst" mention is made of sparrow shot, five or six to the dose, to be taken twice a day, as a remedy for "brown kitten," which is believed by the English farm laborers to be caused by the "lights" (their term for lungs) rising up the windpipe. The shot is supposed to weight them down in their rightful place. Sussex, England, is the scene of "Idlehurst." It was a Sussex woman who was ordered by the doctor to put some ice in a bag and bind it on the temples of her sick boy. Inquiring after his patient the next day, the physician received the reply, "Oh, Tommy's better, but the mice are dead!"

Then He Got Him.

A young Lancashire lad joined the army and soon after his arrival at headquarters got into trouble. Accordingly he had to face his commanding officer next morning.

The usual preliminaries were gone through, when, contrary to orderly room etiquette, the recruit commenced to defend himself.

"Silence!" roared the adjutant.

"Then shut up," said the prisoner. "I'm not speaking to thee. I'm talking to the old chap in the chair."—London Scraps.

Too Much For Him.

"How true that old saying is about a child asking questions that a man cannot answer," remarked Popleigh.

"What's the trouble now?" queried his friend Singleton.

"This morning," replied Popleigh, "my little boy asked me why men were sent to congress, and I couldn't tell him."—Chicago News.

Did He?

"You never saw a man who understood women."

"Well, I knew a man once who claimed that he did."

"And did he?"

"Well, he never married one."—Houston Post.

Her Chin.

Dawson—The facial features plainly indicate character and disposition. In selecting your wife, were you governed by her chin? Spanlow—No, but I have been ever since we married.

Her Hare in Danger.

Susie had left her toys about the kitchen. Mother picking them up—Susie, if you leave those things about the kitchen again I'll box your ears and throw them in the ash pit.

Nose but the contemptible are oppressive of contempt.—Beaconsfield.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A ting, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

is very careful about her churn. She scalds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are almost exactly like the churning of butter. Is it not apparent then that if this stomach-churn is foul it makes foul all which is put into it?

The evil of a foul stomach is not alone the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierre's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour and foul stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun bath do for the churn—absolutely removes every tainting or corrupting element. In this way it cures blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings, sores, or open eating ulcers and all humors or diseases arising from bad blood.

If you have bitter, nasty, foul taste in your mouth, coated tongue, foul breath, are weak and easily tired, feel depressed and despondent, have frequent headaches, dizzy attacks, gnawing or distress in stomach, constipated or irregular bowels, sour or bitter risings after eating and poor appetite, these symptoms, or any considerable number of them, indicate that you are suffering from biliousness, torpid or lazy liver with the usual accompanying indigestion, or dyspepsia and their attendant derangements.

The best remedy known to medical science for the cure of the above symptoms and conditions, as attested by the writings of leading teachers and practitioners of all the several schools of medical practice, have been skillfully and harmoniously combined in Dr. Pierre's Golden Medical Discovery. That this is absolutely true will be readily proven to your satisfaction if you will but mail a postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a free copy of his booklet of extracts from the standard medical authorities, giving the names of all the ingredients entering into his world-famed medicines and showing what the most eminent medical men of the age say of them.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dredging," will be received until 15th October, 1908, at 4.30 P. M., for dredging Terminal Basin at Mouth of Mission River, Ontario, and also for dredging an additional 3 feet over the areas already dredged to a depth of 22 feet in the Kaministiquia and Mission Rivers as specified.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

Specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to J. G. Sing, Esq., Esq., Resident Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto; J. E. Methaund, Esq., Resident Engineer, Merchants Bank Building, St. James St., Montreal; W. F. Merrick, Esq., Resident Engineer, Fort William, Ont., and at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the works. Only dredges can be employed which are registered in Canada at the time of the filing of tenders. Contractors must be ready to begin work within twenty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honorable the Minister of Public Works, for thirty thousand dollars ($30,000.00), must be deposited as security. The cheque will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Rogers' Claim on Water Front is Before the City Council Again

Mayor will Endeavor to Get an Agreement with Cereal Co. and then call Council Together --Mr. D. W. Dumble Wants to Open a New Street

A meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council was held before the council met, and dealt with two or three matters which will be found below.

Mr. D. W. Dumble was present and interviewed the committee of the whole in reference to his proposal in connection with the road he wants to open up on the old Rogers' property. He said he was laying out the property in lots and had left thirty feet on the one side for street purposes. He said that he did not expect the city to spend any money on this street as it was really an extension of the lane. On the north side of the property he has left a thirty-foot street which he thought would be sufficient for the seven lots which it would accommodate. It was not a thoroughfare as it did not run right through. He did not ask the council for any expenditure, but he had to get the council's consent before he could register his plan.

Moved by Ald. Elliott, seconded by Ald. Morrow, that the mayor and chairman of the Board of Works and the engineer look over the land, and report to the council.—Carried.

Mr. Taylor was present to interviewed the council in reference to a sewer on Aberdeen avenue, where he was building a new house. There is no water there yet but he understood the commissioners would have it there this fall. The sewer would run from Benson avenue to Aylmer street. Ald. Phelan said that if it was at all possible to get the sewer up there this fall, the Board of Works would do so. A meeting be held in the near future.

The following letter was also received from Mr. R. E. Wood, which will explain itself;

Peterborough, Sept. 9, '08.

Henry Rush, Esq.,

Mayor of Peterborough.

Re Mrs. Rogers' Waterfront.

Dear Sir,—It is now two years since these proceedings were commenced and it is high time some settlement was made. If the proposition to pay Mrs. Rogers a lump sum of $1750 in full settlement, is to be carried out, I can see no reason for so long delay. If you do not get this in shape within a reasonable time, say ten days, I shall revive the proceedings against the other parties and issue a writ against the city as well.

Yours truly,

R. E. WOOD.

It was decidd that the mayor should interview Mr. Meldrum of the Peterborough Cereal Co., this morning, and then call a meeting of the Committe of the Whole Council, and get this matter settled up.

I OWE MY CURE TO ZAM-BUK

HAD PILES FOR 13 YEARS!

PAIN SO BAD AT TIMES HE FAINTED

One of the best points about Zam-Buk is that it cures chronic cases of piles as well as those of more recent standing. Captain A. W. Strachan, R.E., of St. Catharines, (Ont.), a man who has served his country in India, China, Japan and Egypt, says:

"Nobody has suffered greater agonies than I have through piles. For near 13 years this terrible scourge afflicted me and at times the pain was almost too much for me to bear—especially while enduring the heat and fatigue of foreign duty.

"I think I tried almost every remedy known in India, China, Japan and Egypt. While in India I was in the hospital for three weeks with bleeding piles, and thought I would be compelled to give up the Service.

"I have had to fall out when on the march as I could not endure the pain any longer. Once I was picked up on the field for dead—the pain from the piles was so great that I had fainted.

"An Army officer told me about Zam-Buk having cured a friend of his, so I decided to give it a trial. From the first anointing with this great herbal balm, I was relieved, but even after using one box I hardly dared to hope it would cure me permanently. I had got so much relief from it, however, that I decided to persevere, and by the time I had used several boxes, to my great joy I was completely cured.

"Zam-Buk is worth its weight in gold. It has cured me and given me now over six months of perfect ease—something which I have not had for thirteen long years! I trust this statement of mine will lead other sufferers to try Zam-Buk and prove its great healing virtues."

What Zam-Buk is, and What it Cures

Zam-Buk is composed of the essence and extracts of healing herbs. It contains no animal fat or mineral poison. It never goes rancid like other ointments, never clogs, never clogs the pores of the skin. It heals cold sores, eczema, chapped hands, ulcers, badly poisoned wounds, scalp sores, open sores due to blood poisoning, itch. It heals inflammations, bruises and all skin eruptions and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Mr. Stratton's Campaign

Great Enthusiasm at the Weekly Rally--Testimony of an Outsider

The spacious committee rooms of the Liberal candidate were crowded to their fullest capacity on Saturday night by an enthusiastic gathering of the supporters of Mr. Stratton, who demonstrated in no uncertain way their confidence in and regard for their candidate. Mr. Macfarlane occupied the chair, and Mr. Davidson opened the ball in a brief but vigorous address.

Mr. Boyd of Brantford, who being in the city on business, had been prevailed on to stay over to attend this meeting, made an eloquent and effective address in which he recorded the achievements of the Liberal party and dwelt particularly upon the fact that they were the first to give legislative recognition to the interests of labor. In closing he paid an eloquent tribute to Mr. Stratton, who he said was recognized in the great financial and industrial world of Toronto, and other centers of population as one of their ablest and most useful figures. They knew that money was careful where it placed its confidence, and if the services of Mr. Stratton were sought year after year in positions of trust and responsibility in great financial institutions by the investors of the province, surely he was the man to whom his native county of Peterborough could safely entrust its interests.

Mr. Stratton spoke of the gratifying evidence of support that had been so generously extended to his candidature, and dwelt briefly but effectively upon the practical achievement of the Liberal Government in promoting trade and expanding the market for labor and instanced the Trent Valley canal, to which up to 1896 the government had never given anything more substantial than promises, but which in charge of a party of sincerity and energetic performance was now rapidly under way, and he hoped in two or three years to see cargoes from Duluth passing our doors for delivery at Montreal. He had every assurance that he was going to be elected and asked all to be up and doing in the cause of progress and prosperity. He alluded to rumors that no end of personal abuse was impending, but was confident that the intelligence of the electors of Peterborough would not be misled or influenced by a campaign of slander.

Obituary

ALEX. RUTHERFORD.

Word was received in the city last night of the death of Alexander Rutherford in Ottawa, which took place on Monday afternoon. The deceased had passed the half century mark and had been a sufferer for some time as the result of a paralytic stroke. He was for many years a resident of Peterborough, and was a well known contractor and builder, and only left this city about six months ago. He was a past grand of Otonabee Lodge, I.O.O.F., and that lodge with Peterborough lodge, will attend the funeral on Wednesday morning in a body. The deceased was also a member of Court Peterborough C.O.F., Ald. Morgan, Mrs. John H. McWilliams of Ashburnham, and Mr. Wm. Rutherford of Otonabee, are left to mourn his loss. The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon upon the arrival of the 2.20 G.T.R. train from Oshawa, and interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. JOHN ALEXANDER.

The death occurred Sunday evening of Mrs. John Alexander at the late residence, 576 Dalhousie street. She was 61 years of age and was born in Victoria County, her maiden name being Phoebe M. Wilson. She has resided in this city for a number of years, and was widely known and highly respected. She was identified with the George street Methodist church. Her husband and one son, Mr. Walter Alexander of Minden, is left to mourn her loss. One sister, and four brothers also survive her. The sister is Mrs. McWilliams of Toronto, and the four brothers, Messrs. John, Joseph, Alex. and Hugh, of Victoria county.

The funeral will take place today at two p.m. from the family residence, Dalhousie street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

INFANT EXPIRES.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. James Chambers, 175 Aylmer street will sympathize with them in the loss they have sustained by the death of their infant daughter, Margaret Madeline, which occurred Sunday. The child was three months old.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

MISS STELLA MARKS.

Friends and acquaintances of Miss Stella Marks, until last August a resident of Peterborough, will sincerely regret her rather sudden death in Collingwood on Saturday morning. Miss Marks was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Marks, who left Peterborough early in August. She was just entering into womanhood, being 18 years of age, and the favorite of the family. She was born and brought up in Peterborough and her numerous girl friends will be sorry to learn of her death. Before the family left the city for Collingwood Miss Marks was employed in Boot, Muir & Company's store. She was a Methodist in religion and attended the George street Methodist church and Sunday school. Her death was due from typhoid fever, from which she suffered only two weeks. Besides her parents, Miss Marks is survived by one sister, Beatrice, and two brothers, Chester and Earle.

The body arrived in the city on Monday night and will be taken to the residence of Mr. Albert Duncan, 271 Dalhousie street. The funeral will be held from there this afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Awful Massacre of Negro Family by Mob of White Men

Hickman, Ky., Oct. 5.—David Walker, a negro, his five-year-old daughter, and a baby were killed outright, the mother who was holding the baby in her arms, was fatally shot, and three other children will probably die, as a result of a mob's visit to the Walker home Saturday night.

In addition, the oldest son is missing and is supposed to have been burned with the negro's cabin, which was fired by the mob.

Walker had cursed a white woman and threatened a white man with a pistol, it is said.

Ministerial Associaton Elect Their Officers

Will Hold Temperance Services in All Churches on Sunday, October 18--Will Assist Y.W.C.A.

The annual meeting of the Ministerial Association was held in the Y.M.C.A. parlors on Monday morning when the following divines were present;—Revs. Potter, Webb, Goss, Keith, Langfeldt, Pogue, Manning and Canon Davidson, and Burns of Lakefield. Rev. Mr. Jones of Lakefield; Rev. Mr. Johnston of Millbrook, and Rev. Mr. Kettlewarth of Toronto, were also present.

The proposal of the Y.W.C.A., to carry on a larger work in the city was brought before the association and met with approval. The ministers decided to co-operate with the Y.W.C.A. and the prayer meetings in all the churches will be discontinued on Wednesday evening, Oct. 21st, and a joint meeting will be held in St. Paul's church.

A communication was received from the City Temperance League in reference to having a Temperance Sunday.

It was decidd to set apart October 18th as a Temperance Sunday in Peterborough.

Further arrangements were left with the president and secretary and the officers of the Alliance.

The retiring president, Mr. Webb, made a fine review of the work of the past year, referring to the prominent features in which the Association was active.

The election resulted as follows, Pres.—Rev. H. O. Keith, B.D.

Vice-Pres.—Rev. H. M. Manning.

Sec.-Treas.—Rev. E. A. Pearson, B.A.

After the election of officers a most interesting address was given by Rev. Canon Davidson on the Pan-Anglican Congress at which he was a delegate. He gave a most interesting talk on the conference and touched upon some of the great problems that were discussed, that are of vital interest to all Christian people.

The address was highly appreciated by the members.

A committee of the president and secretary was drawn up to arrange a program for the present year.

Rev. Mr. Pogue was appointed to look after the interests of the Upper Canada Tract Society with Mr. Riddiford as secretary.

Appointments were also made for hospital visitation as follows,

This week, Rev. Mr. Riddiford.

Next week, Rev. Mr. Henderson.

Last week of the month, Rev. Mr. Potter.

Lees Brothers Win Both the Senior and Junior P. C. I. Road Races

The annual road races, senior and junior of the Collegiate Institute were held last evening, and "Had" and "Dannie" Lees managed to carry off first-class honors in each race. It started on McDonnell street, in front of the school, and proceeded along to the boundary, where the runners turned and ran north to Smith street. Slowly they wended their way down Smith street, where they were met at Water street by hundreds of their friends, who gave them all the encouragement possible. From the corner of Smith and Water they ran down Water to McDonnell, and out McDonnell to the starting point. The Lees boys certainly made a creditable showing, the big one especially, who broke last year's time by over a minute. Garnet Drury was second, coming in about twelve seconds after Lees. Next came Garnet Rankin, who was picked by all the fans to win, but as the old saying is, "There's a dark horse in every race," so did it prove true last evening. The junior race was also run in fast time. Following Dannie Lees came Harold Hill, who was so close behind him as Drury was behind his brother. The third man in the junior race to wrench the tape was Hugh Wallace, who is also another corner. On Wednesday afternoon the jumps will be held at Riverside Park, and on Friday afternoon at Nicholls Oval, the regular field day will be held when all the public are invited.

Young People Elect Officers for Year

The Y.P.S.C.E. of St. Andrew's church held their regular meeting last night in the school room. The subject was, "Our vows and their fulfillment." A number of the members took part. Miss King and Mr. Potter rendered a duett, "Keep your heart singing all the time." After the business of the meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year with the convenors for each committee;

Hon. Pres.—Rev. J. G. Potter.
President—Russell Patterson.
Vice-Pres.—Wm. Armstrong.
Secretary—Miss Ada Richardson.
Cor.-Sec.—Miss Ella Mathieson.
Treasurer—Miss Ethel Rae.
Mission Sec.—Miss Maggie Reid.
Organist—Miss Lizzie Shearer.
Asst.—Miss Mary Potter.

COMMITTEES.

Temperance—Mr. Ballard.
Prayer meeting—Mrs. J. Maude.
Lookout—Thos. Wannshope.
Social—Miss Susie Maude.
Missionary—Chas. Thornton.
Literary—Miss Elva Rae.
Flower—Miss Nellie King.
Music—Miss L. Shearer.

The members of the committees will be appointed next week.

A Woman's Back

Has many aches and pains caused by weakness and failing, or other displacement, of the pelvic organs. Other symptoms of female weakness are frequent headache, dizziness, imaginary specks or dark spots floating before the eyes, sinking sensation in stomach, dragging or bearing down in lower abdominal or pelvic region, disagreeable drains from pelvic organs, faint spells with general weakness.

If any considerable number of the above symptoms are present there is no remedy that will give quicker relief or a more permanent cure than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has a record of over forty years of cures. It is the most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine that known to medical science. It is made of the glyceric extracts of native medicinal roots found in our forests and contains not a drop of alcohol or harmful, or habit-forming drugs. Its ingredients are all printed on the bottle-wrapper and attested under oath as correct.

Every ingredient entering into "Favorite Prescription" has the written endorsement of the most eminent medical writers of all the several schools of practice—more valuable than any amount of non-professional testimonials—though the latter are not lacking, having been contributed voluntarily by grateful patients in numbers to exceed the endorsements given to any other medicine extant for the cure of woman's ills.

You cannot afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for this well proven remedy or known composition, even though the dealer may make a little more profit thereby. Your interest in regaining health is paramount to any selfish interest of his and it is an insult to your intelligence for him to try to palm off upon you a substitute. You know what you want and it is his business to supply the article called for.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original "Little Liver Pills" first put up by old Dr. Pierce over forty years ago, much imitated but never equaled. Little sugar-coated granules—easy to take as candy.

Isolation Hospital was Before the Council Again

An old friend was introduced to the council at the regular session last night and no doubt every citizen in Peterborough will be glad to welcome the old fellow back. He has not been heard of for several months although for the past few years he has figured very prominently in the city's municipal affairs. His Worship, Mayor Rush near the close of the meeting introduced the Isolation Hospital question which is a familiar matter to all. Several minutes were devoted to a discussion of this faithful old friend and finally the Property Committee was instructed to report at the next meeting on the cost of a suitable building or buildings so that the council can submit the matter to the people.

CITY FAIR GROUNDS.

It was expected that President H. H. Leary of the Peterborough Agricultural Society would have been present with a proposition for the city to purchase the Exhibition Park, for some reason he did not appear.

The mayor stated that some one had suggested that 20 acres of the Hilliard farm be used for exhibition purposes.

Ald. Elliott suggested that the old armory building be purchased and moved to the exhibition grounds for the main building. He stated that Mr. Procter the owner, was now asking $1000 for it.

SMITH STREET BRIDGE.

Considerable discussion was aroused when the Smith street bridge was mentioned. This is another old friend that the councils for several years have been wrestling with. It has been the general opinion today as it has been for the past three years, that the Smith street bridge should be replaced with a new one. At the present time it is not considered safe for heavy traffic, and may have to be closed up in the near future. Ald. Phelan stated that he will have plans ready in a short time with an estimate of the cost so that a bylaw can be submitted to the people to provide funds for a new bridge. The engineer will also examine the bridge to see if it is safe for traffic now.

You Need Strength

Vitality is Lacking and You Must Have a Bracing Tonic at Once.

You're sick and need medicine.

Not an emulsion to sicken the stomach, not a "dope" cure, nor bitters,—but a nourishing tonic will increase weight, strength and spirits.

Try Ferrozone and watch the result.

Because it gives instant effect and steadily builds up new flesh. It is used by thousands in ill-health.

No other medicine contains more nutriment, supplies better building material, makes you feel well and strong as quickly as it did Mrs. Charles Stemp, of Cloyne, Ont.

HER STATEMENT.

"I was sick.

"I was broken down, had no strength, couldn't eat. I was sleepless.

"My nerves were irritable. I was thin-blooded and continually unhappy.

"I tried Ferrozone.

"It gave me new energy, force, vim. It brought me comfort, strength—it made me well."

It's by making the appetite good, by instilling iron and ozone in the blood, by fortifying the system with reserve strength, that Ferrozone accomplishes so much.

You'll have new life in a week, in a month you'll be like a new being. Try Ferrozone, it always justifies itself. 50c. per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

REGULAR SESSION CITY COUNCIL--POULTY MEN WANT A GRANT

To Assist with Poultry Show in January--Honorarium for Ex-Chief Rutherford--Communications Received

The regular monthly meeting of the council chamber last night when the regular routine business was transacted with a number of new matters which were taken up.

There present were; Mayor Rush, Aldermen Phelan, Neill, Johnston, Buller, Turner, Elliott, Bradburn, Morrow, McIntyre.

The minute were taken as read and war confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Communications were received and read from the following parties;—

City treasurer, reporting the collection of several ratepayers (names were given), to pay for the privilege of connecting with the outfall sewer on Lock street.

T. J. Moore, city clerk of Guelph, in reference to the laws respecting the inspection of meats and milk supplied to the citizens. Guelph city council has decided that the laws to be effective, require to be amended, and the city council of Peterborough was requested to petition the provincial legislature to that effect.

Secretary of the Board of Trade, drawing the attention of the council to the resolutions passed at the last meeting of the board in reference to the desirability of completing the equippment of the fire hall so that the city will be placed in class A. by the underwriters.

F. Bartlett, applying for appointment by the council to take the necessary levels of the district to be drained by the proposed new outfall sewer.

Thos. Gunn complained of the condition of the street at the corner of London and Gilchrist streets, and of the water after a heavy rain.

D. W. Dumble, police magistrate, notifying the city council that he had convicted Walter Moore, son of David Moore, a lad under 12 years of age, for stealing a bicycle, and that the boy had been sent to the Victoria Industrial School for an indefinite period, not exceeding five years, and that the corporation would be called upon to pay $1.25 per week for his maintenance.

Auburn Woolen Mills, declaring that in return for their fixed assessment of $40,000 for 10 years they will employ 120 hands for 10 months of the year, and will not oppose the construction of any local improvements such as sewers, walks, etc., undertaken by the city during that time.

E. B. D. Hall, city solicitor, stating that the council of Peterborough had no authority to assist the township of Cavan, to open up a highway, wholly in the said township.

John Fife, foreman of the last grand jury, enclosing report of that body to his Honor Mr. Justice Magee.

H. C. Small, secretary of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, enclosing copy of Dr. Hall McMurchy's application for a regulation fixing the height of street car steps.

That the city solicitor be requested to notify all those who have not paid for their connection with the outfall sewer and request them to do so at once.

That the usual grant of $550 be made to the Agricultural society on the usual conditions.

That the city treasurer's office be kept open on pay nights until six o'clock.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

Reports were read from the following Committee;— Property, Fire, Water & Light, and the Board of Works.

The Finance committee reported as follows,

Gentlemen,— Your Finance Committe beg leave to report as follows;

POULTRY SHOW.

A deputation from the Poultry Association was present to interview the council Mr. Kidd was the spokesman and he stated that the association intended to hold a poultry show in January, and as they had considerable expense in connection with it and he asked the council to make a grant of say $50. The show will be held in the market hall and they have to pay rent for the hall, which they did not have to meet in other years.

Mr. Scrigley spoke of the object of the association, which was to educate the boys of the town in the care and breeding of poultry.

Mr. Kelly stated that so far this membership of the association was now 66 and nearly all were ratepayers, and he thought that they should receive the grant.

Ald Turner said he would move that the matter be referred to the Finance Committee, and said he had been told recently that a deputation would wait upon the council shortly, and ask a grant in aid of a proposed dog show to be held this winter in the market building.

Ald. Neill seconded the motion, and it was carried.

Moved by Ald. Neill and Ald. Brad-

THAT SALARY GRAB

It is to hoped that with the many matters discussed and written about now and before the day of election, that the salary grab will not be lost sight of. In fact, it should be prominently brought to the attention of the electors that they may be prepared to give expression to their disapproval on the 26th of this month.

It was a scheme concocted by members of the Dominion Parliament on both sides of the House to increase their salaries for attending each session of Parliament. The members seemed to be mutually harmonious in the matter, irrespective of the financial burden of $295,000 which (by their action they placed annually and for all time to come on the Dominion.

There are 209 members of the Dominion Parliament and 86 Senators, making 295, each of whom had his salary increased by $1,000. What each was getting before ($1,500), was ample remuneration to members; in fact, it is doubtful if three-fourths of the members, and perhaps more than that number, ever were in a position to earn $1,500 yearly.

It was a discreditable transaction for members of Parliament to help themselves to public money of their own free will when their remuneration for their parliamentary services was already ample.

Should this transaction be passed over without a stunning rebuke, the members of the provincial legislatures will be doing themselves.

FIGHTING TUBERCULOSIS

The anti-tuberculosis congress in Washington will accomplish something if it succeeds in spreading still farther the cult of the open window and the closed mouth. Education can go far toward banishing "the white plague;" and every such gathering helps to educate. We sometimes imagine that practically every person must know now the points of danger and the easy methods of precaution and cure; but it is amazing how many people do not have what the evangelists would call a "saving knowledge" of the truth and how many have no knowledge at all.

One source of peril is the foolish custom of hiding from tuberculous patients the truth about themselves. People who more than suspected by their friends to be affected, and whom physicians must know are possible sources of contagion, are themselves in blissful ignorance of the fact, and consequently do not take the precautions which they otherwise would. This is mistaken kindness. For the patient's own sake, he or she should be told; for it is often possible for them to fight off the dread visitor if the know that he is really at hand. For the sake of their relatives—some of them probably children—it is imperative that they be told; for the careless patient is the most dangerous center of contagion that could well exist.

Bylaws against spitting seem to be chiefly honored in their breach. They appear to be a step beyond general public opinion; and we might as well recognize the humiliating fact. What is wanted here, too, is a campaign of education. If every man realized the danger of the practice, far fewer would be guilt of it. Few people, indeed, can be quite certain that they are not scattering peril by this process; and yet no one imagines that half the population would go about distributing smallpox or typhoid germs, if they were conscious of the fact. We are not inhuman; we are only unconvinced of the danger. As has been so often said, dirt and ignorance are the cause of most disease.

LESS IMMIGRATION

The immigration figures from the first of January to the end of August show a falling off from last year of considerably more than half in the immigrations that came to us by way of ocean ports. The inflow from the United States remained as nearly as possible the same. If this means that the agricultural immigration from the British Isles has decreased, it is a serious loss to which the immigration department may well give attention; but if the decrease has been in other classes of immigrants—men who would only augment the problem of the unemployed in our cities—then we may congratulate ourselves on the showing. The immigration from the United States was, no doubt, practically all agricultural, and of the best possible sort.

Farmers who go to the West to settle on our vacant lands become not only the basis of a permanent population but an addition to the home market which will keep our factory wheels turning and our merchants busy. The larger the crop in the West, the more money will there be to spend on the products of the rest of the country; so that the East is vitally interested in getting grain-producers to settle on the prairies. The addition to the rest of the population should, however, be left to natural forces. There should be no "pumping in" of mechanics or clerks or men who must earn their living in the cities. Immigration figures covering these classes may well be matters of indifference to us, so long as they are not artificially swollen by the efforts of mistaken charity or a misguided passion for dazzling totals. No such man should be assisted to come to Canada. What we attract naturally, we can probably handle, but we are not a gigantic work-house nor a reformatory for the training of the slum products of other lands.

EDITORIAL NOTES

General Kuropatkin, in discussing the reasons for Japanese success in the Russo-Japanese war, lays much emphasis on the "moral strength" of Japan. He says that a Russian expert insisted at the opening of the war that one Russian would be equal to three Japanese; that as the war went on he admitted his mistake and said that they would have to send a Russian soldier to meet every Japanese; and that toward the end he held that it would need three Russians to overcome one Japanese. The superiority of the "little brown men of Nippon" lay in their moral superiority. They believed in their cause. They had rather die than lose. They wanted to fight, while the Russian soldier was merely obeying orders.

It is easy to forget the moral factor which has so much to do with the success of armies. France had splendid troops under Louis XIV., but they were frequently beaten in the field. The enemies of the Kingdom tightened an iron ring about her, and her glory perceptibly faded. Later, when the Revolution came, many of the best soldiers of France were thrown out of the country, and untrained peasantry and proletariat filled the ranks. Yet this ragged army gave France the victories of Napoleon and carried the glories of the Republic and the Empire to the boundaries of Europe. What made the difference? The soldiers of Louis badly led, poorly paid and had little interest in their campaigns. The soldiers of Napoleon were on fire with eager enthusiasm.

Moral strength made much of the force of the American soldiers who fought under Washington. Moral strength armed the British who finally fought Napoleon when he threatened to conquer Europe. And so it goes. History could provide many examples. The flame in the breast of the soldier is as important as the spark that ignites his cartridge. If there is to be another great European war, we must look for the moral factor to incorporate in our calculations. A people fighting on the defensive usually have it, unless they are stupefied of hope. A people flushed with victory and a sense of strength often have it, too. But when a government goes to war without the approval of its people, then it is almost, as Russia learned; and its absence is very likely to be fatal.

The personal element is perhaps one of the greatest attractions in any store for the purchaser who is on the hunt for some satisfactory line of goods. It pays a dealer to have a reputable and reliable line of goods on his shelves and about his counters. It pays to advertise this fact as widely as possible through trade papers, public journals and in show windows. It is a good idea to be satisfied with a reasonable profit on goods and keep prices to a limit that will allow no chance of his being referred to as a money grabber. There is, however, one drawback which, if present, is bound to offset many of these advantages and rob the store of much trade that would otherwise come its way, and that is failure to maintain a staff that will impress the purchasing public favorably. For it is well known that nothing appeals more to any customer than the courteous attention, unfailing patience and unostentatious desire to satisfy which is exhibited by the true salesman. It is, however, from the proprietor that the inspiration must come. It is not only necessary for him to exercise careful judgment in the choice of his salesmen; he must understand as well the art of keeping them in proper spirit for their work. Many fail signally in this, and their trade suffers in consequence. Courteous treatment of employees, consideration of their well-being and a generous interest in them and their affairs as human beings and not merely accidental accessories to business operations, pays extremely good interest in the end. It is bound to be doubled on and manifest itself in the treatment given to customers by the salesmen in their turn.

Of course, in general, the proprietor of a hardware establishment understands quite well enough how to treat his clerk as a gentleman during business hours. But what does he know or care of him outside these? In drawing up his schedule of salaries does he give proper consideration to the costs of living which his employes have to meet; does he ever figure it out that he owes them a certain percentage of his profits, however small that percentage may be, as a recognition of the fact that to them he owes no small part of his business success? This recognition of worth could easily take many acceptable forms. There is the small bonus coming opportunely at the Christmas time or other holidays; there are nicely arranged surprise outings or banquets when he can make closer personal acquaintance with his salesmen and inspire them with the idea that they are an essential part of his system of trading. Inspire a man with the idea that he is your associate and, in his own particular sphere, your equal, and you have increased his efficiency in relation to your business many times.

The decision as announced by dispatches, of the Transvaal Government to spend £700,000 on resettling the country districts with the poor whites who have drifted into the towns, is a welcome sign of their desire to solve one of the most difficult problems ahead. The mining industry is prosperous, but its prosperity has been gained at the cost of rigid economies of labor on the Rand. It has now been settled once for all that white labor in the mines can only be used for supervising the work of the coolies and natives who are there employed, and there is a social as well as an industrial drawback to the employment of more whites on the Rand. Yet the unemployed are there in numbers, and their ranks have been augmented by those who, from one cause or another, have failed on the land, and thus gradually drifted into the towns. But while the Botha Government is to be congratulated both on its desire to settle the unemployed question, and on its wish to develop the rural as well as the urban districts of the Transvaal, it is impossible not to recognize that their courage is great in attacking the matter in this fashion. Those who are unemployed, from whatever reason it may be, are nearly always the residuum of the community, the industrial weaklings. It is important that they should be aided, for they are less likely to be a permanent drag on the state when they have been helped to start a business, to open a farm, or what not than when they are left to sink into an unemployable condition. But farming is work which one cannot learn in a week, whether one possesses inherited brains or not. And while it is to be hoped that the Botha Government will be generally successful in their resettlement idea, the fear cannot be avoided that there will be a good many individual failures among those whom they assist.

An English legal periodical discusses present epidemics of crime and and expresses the opinion that the increase of murder and violence would seem to constitute a grave and critical feature of modern life in great cosmopolitan communities. In Great Britain, it says, outrages and atrocities are reported in the centers with alarming frequency, and from the continent of Europe similar complaints are heard. Paris has for years been fighting its "Apaches"—youthful hoodlums and hold-up men display amazing audacity and savagery, and whose leaders often remain undiscovered. A sense of insecurity spreads among certain elements of the population, and there are demands for more police, better detectives, speedier criminal justice. While these demands are perfectly natural, the deeper questions as to the causes of the crime epidemics and the tendency to violence should not be neglected. Do the contrasts of life in rich and gay cities make for temptation and crime? To what extent do the industrial maladjustments contribute to the evil? Diseases voluntary and involuntary, the decay of the suppression system, the lack of moral training in the schools, the relaxing of home discipline, are generally blamed as other factors in the situation.

And then there is the whole chain of complications that immigration introduces. Officers who do fairly efficient work in circumstances with which their experience has made them familiar may display glaring unfitness under conditions that are strange to them. In New York, we know, the police commissioner is urging the establishment of a special, secret service force for operations in the Italian quarter and in other foreign colonies. In Chicago the White Hand is asking for the appointment of more Italian police officers and detectives. The suggestion that foreign criminals should be pursued by men who understand their language and know their habits and instincts is as reasonable as it is natural. In every great city there are strangers of all sorts and conditions, and among these strangers are there characters who put their own necessary fee to good.

There are also in great cities the difficulties that arise from tolerated vice, from certain lodging houses and refuges for vagrants, from the facility with which suspects dodge the officers of the law, and from the failure to prevent the carrying and indiscriminate selling of deadly weapons.

But, complicated as the problem of city crime is, blame in the cause for despair or resignation. Epidemics of violence have not an inevitable feature of "concentrated civilization." Efficient and honest police work, with proper ordinances regarding weapons, vice regulation, night closing of saloons, etc., will make life in crowded cities much safer than it is.

The human mind reacts upon misfortune. Since the discovery of the scientific uses of radium nothing has so stirred the thoughts of men as the practical application of the principles of aerial flight. The long voyages of Count Zeppelin's rigid and dirigible balloon airship caused universal wonder but the triumph of his idea was not assured until tempest and fire had engulfed its first embodiment. Then the German nation rose and provided the aeronaut with the means to build a fleet of airships. The fatal plunge of the Wright aeroplane at Fort Myer may not have precisely this result, nevertheless it is the shock and challenge of nature not to desist, but to carry the struggle to the point of conquest.

In the emergence of the conquering idea, the first crude types of airships may disappear. We may be sure that the gigantic gasbag of Zeppelin's passenger ship will most survive—it is too much at the mercy of the elements and human destroyers. Will Lilienthal's gliding machine, as developed by Prof. Langley, Octave Chanute and the brothers Wright, and lately driven at express train speed in successful flights as overcoming the defects that brought its first inventor to his death? On the morning before the catastrophe at Washington, an interview with Mr. Edison appeared, in which he made this prophecy,—

"The work most of the present aeroplane around which the Wright inventors will never be able to get, is that the operation of the machine lies wholly in the wonderful brain of its operator. Every movement made by the Wrights in manoeuvring their machine must be done in perfect harmony with the working of the planes. One fractional misjudgment would mean destruction to the machine and operator, too."

Mr. Edison elaborated his objection further;—

"The aeroplane is a primitive adoption of the bird-wing theory, and as we do not possess the ability to secure the automatic action of the bird, it is impossible. In commercialising any new invention we must not follow nature. For instance, in the effort to discover some means of propelling physical bodies without employing elemental force, as muscle, we did not turn to the human leg's theory. Far from it. We invented first the bicycle, then the automobile—both great improvements over nature's methods."

Mr. W. R. Kimball's helicopter will soon be launched, a machine which, with its tangential planes running from a central motor, its small propelling planes, and its adaptation to the use of the gyroscope, Mr. Edison believes will insure equilibrium in case of ordinary accidents. Meanwhile Mr. Wilbur Wright reports in France his brother's splendid achievements in the United States. The indomitable Mr. Orville Wright, we trust, will recover from his injuries, rebuild his machine, and endeavor to overcome the cause of its first undoing. Still other inventors are in the field. The interest and the scientific concentrated upon the problem. That is the significant thing. The triumphs and accidents of the present experimenters are also of significance though only as they have evoked and set in motion forces the inertia of which must insure, and at no distant date, secure success. It is saddening that Lieut. Selfridge may not be the last martyr to the cause.

All are familiar with the extremely liberal pension allowances in favor of those who fought for the preservation of the Union in the Civil War. The fact is not so generally known that the governments of the several States which formed the Southern Confederacy have made some provision at least for those who served on the other side. Alabama alone spending over three-quarters of a million dollars for this purpose annually.

The News and Courier of Charleston in commenting on what Southern States are doing in this way calls attention to something which is a cause of constant irritation in the South. For every dollar the people of the old Confederacy voluntarily pay, in direct taxation, through their State Governments, for the benefit of disabled soldiers of the lost cause, they are compelled to pay six dollars through the National Government to the pension fund of which Northern soldiers alone have the benefit. Under these conditions, the News-Courier thinks it is hardly surprising that all the bitterness of the Civil War has not yet disappeared from the South.

The journal quoted overlooks another way of looking at the matter in question. "Is not a good deal of magnanimity shown in allowing public taxes of any kind, even when raised locally, to be devoted to the making of grants to men who took up arms for the purpose of destroying the nation in which these taxes are collected?"

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ma's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is no act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

ONTARIO-RICE LAKE DIVISION
Section No. 7

Notice to Contractors

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Trent Canal," will be received until 12 o'clock on Tuesday, the 29th October, 1908, for the works connected with the construction of Section No. 7, Ontario-Rice Lake Division of the Canal.

Plans, specifications, and the form of the contract to be entered into can be seen on and after the 25th September, 1908, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer, Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at which places forms of tender may be obtained.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages Schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which Schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered, unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms, unless there are attached the actual signatures, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10,000 must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited, if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

TENDES FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dredging," will be received until 15th October, 1908, at 4.30 P. M., for dredging Terminal Basin at Mouth of Mission River, Ontario, and also for dredging an additional 3 feet over the areas already dredged to a depth of 22 feet in the Kamistiquia and Mission Rivers as specified.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

Specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to J. G. Sing, Esq., Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto; J. R. Mehaund, Esq., Resident Engineer, Merchants Bank Building, St. James St., Montreal; W. F. Merrick, Esq., Resident Engineer, Fort William, Ont., and at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the works. Only dredges can be employed which are registered in Canada at the time of the filing of tenders. Contractors must be ready to begin work within twenty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honorable the Minister of Public Works, for thirty thousand dollars ($30,000.00), must be deposited as security. The cheque will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully promoted.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Beaufort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan south also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Clonmeny and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which has cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches (and ferry, and later a permanent bridge), to Jean Baptiste's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough that government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Canoe Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives for my course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Canal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary legislation, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the aggregate of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the agency of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offluence and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 32 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance system, to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 80 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 12 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $4,500,000. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,702, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough waterway connection with the lands also and northern waters.

Thus, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. . Stratton.

The wholesome, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by all dealers.

—Mr. Walter Pakenham has returned to Toronto after having spent the week-end with his family in Ashburnham.

—Miss Sybil White has returned home after a pleasant three months' vacation with her sister, Mrs. F. H. Jackson, Hartney, Man

—Miss Kathleen Merrell returned to Lakefield this morning after having spent the week-end with her parents, Homewood avenue.

—Mr. C. Stabler will leave on Friday for Montreal, where he will take the Allan line steamer Grampian for Glasgow.

—Mr. Wm. Medley, C.P.R. city ticket agent, left yesterday for Detroit, where he will attend the annual convention of the Ticket Sellers' Association.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A ting, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

There was a Mistake

The Times was requested by the secretary of the Y.M.C.A., to make the following explanation in connection with the mix-up over the first Sunday afternoon tea by the Strangers' Fellowship Club. At the Y.M.C.A. the club has been organized this season yet and the Ladies' Aid Society not knowing this went ahead with their arrangements according to last year's schedule. Most of the ladies were notified of the mistake before they sent in their contributions.

BLOOD DISEASES

Guaranteed Cured or No Pay.

If you ever had any contracted or hereditary blood disease, you are never safe until the virus or poison has been removed from the system. You may have had some disease years ago, but now and then some symptom alarms you. Some poison still lurks in your system. Can you afford to run the risk of more serious symptoms appearing as the poison multiplies? Beware of mercury or mineral drugs used indiscriminately—they may ruin the system. Twenty years experience in the treatment of these diseases enables us to prescribe specific remedies that will positively cure all blood diseases of the worst character, leaving no bad effects on the system. Our New Method Treatment will purify and enrich the blood, heal up all ulcers, clear the skin, remove bone pains, fallen out hair will grow in, and swollen glands will return to a normal condition, and the patient will feel and look like a different person. All cases we accept for treatment are guaranteed a complete cure if instructions are followed.

Reader if in doubt as to your condition, you can consult us FREE OF CHARGE. Beware of incompetent doctors who have no reputation or reliability. Drs. K. & K. have been established over 20 years.

WE CURE Nervous Debility, Varicocele, Stricture, Blood and Skin Diseases, Kidney and Bladder Complaints. Consultation Free. If unable to call write for a Question List for Home Treatment.

CITY COUNCIL

burn, that in view of ex-Chief Thos. Rutherford's long service as chief of the volunteer fire brigade, since August, 1881, that he be given a gratuity of one year's salary, viz., $240

This was the unanimous wish of the council and it was carried unanimously.

Moved by Ald. Morrow and Ald. Phelan, that the Fire, Water and Light Committee, be requested to have two more incandescent lights on Weller street.

Ald. Johnston asked that the Fire, Water & Light Committee be given authority to place a light on Sherbrooke street.

Power was given the committee on motion of Ald. Phelan and Morrow.

His worship announced that the year was rapidly growing to a close, and there were two or three matters to be taken up yet, viz., the isolation hospital, the Smith street bridge, and the Carnegie library.

Ald. Bradburn reported what he had done in reference to the last named matter.

Ald. Phelan said that the Board of Works had undertaken to prepare plans for the Smith street bridge and he would like to submit a by-law as soon as possible to raise the necessary funds.

The bridge at the present time is very unsafe and the engineer will make a report on it at once.

Moved by Ald. Morrow and Ald. Neill, that the Property Committee be requested to bring in a report at the next meeting specifying the amount necessary for an isolation hospital.

A Successful Social

A very successful social was held in the T.A.S. rooms last night under the auspices of the Young Men's Athletic Club. The program which was an exceedingly interesting one, included dancing and cards with a dainty supper afterwards. A large number were present and an enjoyable evening was spent.

This society is only temporary, and at the next annual meeting the citizens will be called together and organization completed. The citizens will be pleased to learn that already six boat liberties have arrived in the city, and will be placed on board the steamers now at work on the Trent waters.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BOARD OF EDUCATION HELD REGULAR MONTHLY SESSION

Committees Reported—Communications were Dealt with--Attendance at Schools was Very Good Last Month

The regular session of the Board of Education was held last night when the various committees reported and a lot of routine business was put through.

Members present — Chairman R Fair, D. W. Dumble, L. M. Hayes, Dr. Morrison, John Crane, W. F. Nelson, B. F. Ackerman, W. S. Robinson, W. H. Hill, and Dr. Burnham.

Secretary Morrow read the minutes of the last meeting which were adopted.

The secretary then read the communications that had been received.

On motion of Mr. Crane and Mr. Hayes the usual grant of $25 was made to the annual field day of sports and the scholars will be given a half holiday.

On motion of Messrs. Hill and Robinson, the treasurer was authorized to issue a cheque in favor of the prize winners at the recent examinations.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. T. S. Bradburn, M.P.P., for the assistance in securing the additional grant from the Ontario Government to the Board of Education.

It was moved by Mr. Dumble and Dr. Morrison that the scholarship donated by Mrs. Geo. Gillespie, be placed at the disposal of Miss Lenora Sanderson, who is attending Queen's University.—Carried.

OPENING POSTPONED.

The Collegiate Institute cannot be formally opened on October 14th, as was intended. Things have turned up which compel the board to change the date. The Minister of Education will be communicated with to that effect. The opening will not likely take place until December.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The attendance at the various schools in Peterborough is as follows:—

	On roll.	Average
Central	400	357
South Central	392	350
Queen Alexandra	243	224
King Edward	284	241
Ashburnham	192	178
Park St.	180	169
Kindergarten	229	176
	1869	1696

A large number of accounts were presented for payment and were referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr D W. Dumble notified the board that he had had a couple of men working around the north ward school providing drainage for the surface drainage. He also said that some little improvements be made to the kindergarten room in the northward school.

Mr. Hill brought up the matter of the several chairs necessary for the observation classes which will visit the different rooms.

Mr. Crane stated that the Collegiate library had not been fixed up yet, and that it was also necessary to supply racks for clubs and dumb bells. A motor was also needed.

Horse Killed in Runaway, Heavy Loss

Wm. Monerief's Team Ran Away--Collided with Another Rig

A most unfortunate accident occurred on Monday afternoon, which resulted in the death of a valuable horse belonging to Mr. Wm. Monerief of Otonabee. The owner had been in the city and on his way home stopped at the weigh scales at Kennedy's abattoir. The horses suddenly bolted and ran down the lane and along the river road. They had not gone far when they collided with the rear end of Mr. John Matchett's wagon. One of the beards on the wagon pierced one of the animals in the breast, inflicting a wound 18 inches long and three inches wide. The lung was also pierced, and when Dr. Johnston arrived he found it was impossible to save the poor beast. It was valued at $200. Mr. Matchett received a severe shaking up, but no other serious damage was done.

Cobalt Shares on Market

"Alliance" Stock Offered Today--Splendid Mining Proposition

Cobalt, Oct. 7. (Special)—The first issue of stock of the Alliance Cobalt-Larder Lak Mining Company is offered today. The subscriptions are being received by Pauley & Co., the principal owners, and owing to the merits of the proposition and the firm's reputation, the issue will probably be soon oversubscribed. The Alliance claim in Cobalt almost adjoins the famous Hudson Bay mine and is in the same belt as the Buffalo, Trethewey & Conagas mines. As the Alliance Company also owns a valuable property in Larder Lake, showing free gold, the shareholders will have an interest in two mines and the first issue of shares now offered at the opening price of 25 cents each, offers a splendid opportunity for the large or small investor to get in a good proposition at the lowest possible price. Alliance stock when listed will probably jump quickly in value the same as previous shares handled by this firm.

Classes Have Been Arranged for Year's Work at the Y.W.C.A.

Splendid Opportunity for Young Women—Successful and Profitable Time Spent Last Night—Dr. Elmore Harris Coming

A very successful rally of the young ladies of Peterborough was held in the Y.W.C.A. last night. The program presented was the most interesting this season, and the work of this institution is making rapid progress. The chair was occupied by Mrs. Roger, the president, and the evening was opened with devotional exercises. The program was as follows,

Piano duett—Misses Gladman.
Vocal solo—Master C. Dyer.
Address on Educational Work by Mr. Cornish, of the Normal school.
Solo—Mr. Chantelle.
Address—Rev. G. W. Henderson.
Piano solo.—Miss Jean Hill.

A presentation of the work outlined for the year was made by the secretary Miss McCalla. The classes arranged for, besides the gymnasium and domestic science classes which are held nearly every afternoon, are;

Shakespeare—Conducted by Mr. Mowatt, B.A., inspector of Public schools.

Wood Carving—Conducted by Miss Ross.

Informal Social and Reading—Conducted by Miss Weir of the Collegiate Institute class.

Dr. Greer will continue his lectures on First Aid and Home Nursing.

There will also be classes in French, millinery, plain sewing and dressmaking.

Another feature is the invitation to all young ladies to go to the Y. W.C.A with their Christmas sewing, where they will be assisted and also given ideas.

Most of these classes are includes in the year's membership.

On Thursday evening, Miss Johnston of Rochester, the new domestic science directress, will give her final free demonstration with the fireless cooker. There will also be a picnic table set with everything required for a picnic.

Dr. Elmore Harris of the Toronto Bible Training School, will be here from the 21st to 24th of October, and will lecture daily on that branch of the work.

The evening was brought to a close with a social hour and refreshments.

Men's Guild Gave Concert at All Saints'

Big Crowd and a Fine Program--J.H.Burnham Chairman

The Men's Guild of All Saints' church, met with great success last night with their concert which was given in aid of the building fund. The basement of the church was crowded and everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Mr. J. H. Burnham acted as chairman and filled his duties very acceptably. The following program was rendered;

Chairman's address.
Vocal solo—Miss Pearl Lundy.
Instrumental—Miss McCaw.
Reading—Miss Thomas.
Vocal solo—Miss Dawson.
Recitation—Mr. Jones.
Vocal solo—Miss Helen Rust.
Reading—Miss Mag Edwards.
Recitation—Mr. Johns.
Address—Rev. Mr. Trumpour.
Vocal solo—Mr. Herb Rust.
Vocal solo—Miss Dawson.
Recitation—Mr. Johns.
God Save the King.

A Revival at The S. A. Barracks

Brigadier John Roberts, from the International Headquarters of the Salvation Army will pay a visit to the local corps on Oct. 7th to 12th. The brigadier is one of the Salvation Army's most successful evangelists, having been an officer in its ranks for more than 30 years. He has read the Bible through at least once every year during that period, and has seen thousands of parents and children converted to God. He has the names of hundreds of children with whom he has prayed and whom he has led to the Lord Jesus and has letters from numbers of them describing their conversion and experience.

The brigadier will give a lecture on Monday, October 12th, his subject being "A Month's Experience in a Prison Cell." Obair to be taken at 8 p.m. Dr. Campbell, in expressing his appreciation of the lecture which he is laboring in Staffordshire, England, said; "I should like the whole Church to hear it."

Charity Board Met with Church Representatives --Distribution of Charity

A goodly number of representatives of some of the Christian organizations of the city met in the council chamber last evening to confer with the Charity Board with reference to the proper distribution of charity.

The members of the board present were Mayor Nash, chairman; Messrs. S. Armstrong, Mr. Fowler, J. D. Collins, Wm. Kemp, Wm. Aldridge, Jos. Batten, William Yelland, Rev. Father McColl, George Cochrane and Finch Miller, relief officer.

The chairman explained the intention of those calling the meeting to be a desire to have some uniform method of dealing with special cases of relief when there was danger of pauperizing families and causing unnecessary burden to the city of undeserving and undesirable cases.

Mr. Miller referred at some length to the many cases coming from other municipalities who had received help from charitably disposed persons for a limited period, but long enough to make them citizens when they became a life-long financial burden to the city.

Staff-Captain Goodwin of the Salvation Army, expressed it as her conviction that many cases no doubt were not worthy of the help given. The Army would be willing to cooperate with the relief officer and any central agency so that the undeserving might be properly dealt with. While they would do all in their power with the generous assistance they received from the citizens to continue the good work they were doing the whole year round. She would hail with delight any proper channel through which necessary help might be given to the deserving poor.

Rev. Father McColl as a member of the board felt that while there might be many cases of overlapping yet he voiced the sentiments of many when he stated that he would rather know that he had helped two undeserving cases than neglect one who thoroughly deserved his help. As he understood it, it was not the desire of the Charity Board to interfere with the charity being dispensed by the church, and he thought that the amount of relief given by the city was not beyond its power, & the spirit which characterized the citizens. Many barely existed on help received, and she felt that Christian people wished to add the luxuries for any in need of them they were merely doing their duty. He would be glad, however to support any method that would prevent the abuse of charitable organizations.

The Rev. H. M. Manning of St. James Methodist church, could well understand the problematic characters of the situation and felt that some method might be adopted to conserve the interests of the city. While not ignoring the needy of the attention and assistance they should receive.

Ladies representing Charlotte street and Park street churches also took part in the discussion.

The mayor called for the individual opinions of the members of the board, and Ald. J. J. Turner, Jr., representing Rev Dr. Langfeldt, urged that while the abuse of charity ought to be carefully scrutined, there might be some plan adopted whereby those deserving help should be very carefully dealt with without interferences with the excellent work that was being done already by the Charity Board and the church societies.

Rev. J. G. Potter said that he clearly recognized the need of the proper distribution of charity, that there were many worthy cases during a winter that could not be reported by ministers or workers to any central agency and he was glad to learn from Mr. Miller that that was not intended. He felt too that many cases needed sympathetic treatment though they might come as strangers, but he considered it essential that with the undesirable special action should be taken by some executive body and he felt sure all societies and churches would cooperate to have this desirable result. He therefore moved;

"That in the opinion of this united meeting some joint action should be taken regarding persons or families, tramps and penniless, who are strangers, so that the city should not be unduly burdened with such as are not deserving. That the various organizations distributing charity should be notified, and asked to co-operate with the relief officer, and report to him such special cases, and that a small emergency Committee be chosen by the Charity Board to effectively deal with these."

Mr. Aldridge seconded the motion and after brief conference it was unanimously carried.

The mayor then thanked the ladies and gentlemen for their presence and co-operation, and on motion the meeting adjourned.

Mutiny is Common in The Turkish Army

Great uneasiness prevails in London in regard to conditions in Turkey, and all kinds of views are expressed regarding it. Mutiny is common enough in the Turkish army, though it is the best organized of Turkish institutions. The troops going to or returning from Yemen, where the Arabs are in chronic rebellion, almost invariably revolt against their commanders in the Red Sea, and have to be pacified by force or bribes. Their disaffection becomes known, because the transports touch at Egyptian ports. Similar troubles are no doubt as frequent in other parts of Turey, but are less often noticed by foreign observers. The main causes are invariably the detention of the peasant conscripts beyond their legal term of service and the withholding of their pay, which the commander or some palace official has probably embezzled. When the men are paid and disbanded no more is heard of the mutiny.

The Monastir officers complained of the espionage system, by which the Palace attempts to maintain absolute control of the army. The young Turks and their foreign sympathizers may flatter themselves that all sorts of wonderful things are going to happen, but the Sultan, evidently is only endeavoring to gain time and it seems that this was the only thing he could do in the circumstances. Action by the powers is still possible. A writer in the Daily Telegraph says;

"Germany, as usual, is making the most of her opportunities. Only those who have been in close touch with the Ottoman Empire during the past twenty-five years can form an reliable opinion of the prestige lost by Britain and gained by Germany during this period throughout the whole of the nearer East. At the time of the Sultan's last serious illness, the Kaiser sent him his own physician specially to Yildiz from Berlin. This delicate compliment was followed by an autograph-letter, which conveyed a polite request for important commercial concessions in Asia Minor. Abdul Hamid would not see the doctor, but was so gratified by the attention that the concessions were immediately granted. And so it is all the way down the line. General von der Goltz, a personal friend of the Kaiser, is reorganizing the Turkish army, and is in daily touch with the Sultan and his advisers. The most important railway construction and mining concessions have been obtained by German engineers. The new bridge across the Golden Horn is to be constructed by a German firm, of German material. Germany has stood first commercially and politically at Yildiz since Russia was crippled in the far East. The Austrian Empire comes next, and England comes a very poor third. The Kaiser's friend, Dr. Wegan, Curator of the Berlin National Museum, holds important rights and concessions for excavations in the Levant, and the majority of the Byzantine and Greco-Roman antiquities that have been unearthed during the past decade have, as a matter of course, found their way to Berlin. In this direction Great Britain is positively asleep.

"It is a crying shame that so sooner are early Christian parchments and antiquities brought to light, to say nothing of priceless pagan marbles, etc., than they are smuggled through to Berlin and Vienna. Any intelligent traveller who takes the trouble to visit Constantinople can see with his own eyes the way in which Britain is slowly allowing herself to be ousted in every direction."

A writer in the Times says; 'Formerly Moskowa in the Asiatic provinces of the Ottoman Empire had very few political notions, and beyond minding their crops, selling their goods, and rearing their families, paid little heed to matters of state or administration. Their views on such

Mr. Robinson Asks for Copy of Report and Also the Original Tenders and Contracts for the Plumbing

A little discussion was aroused at the Board of Education meeting last night when Mr. Robinson stated that he was not satisfied with the way the plumbing was handled in the Queen Alexandra school, and asked for information, the particulars of which will be found below.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, chairman of the Building Committee for the Queen Alexandra school, made a final report of his committee and asked that the committee be relieved of its duty.

Mr. Robinson asked that typewritten copies of the report with the original tenders and contracts connected with the Queen Alexandra school appended thereto, be furnished each member of the board. He desired the information himself, and wished to look over the matter. He was a member of the Building Committee of the Queen Alexandra school, and he had not been consulted, and knew nothing of what had been done.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The report of the Queen Alexandra Building Committee, was as follows; To the Board of Education,—

The Building Committee for the Queen Alexandra school beg leave to report that this building has been fully completed and furnished and your committee submits the final report of expenditure in connection with the purchase and labor on lands, the furnishing and leaving to be completed the payments to the architect and some small furnishings, which the full occupation of the various rooms has made necessary.

The money provided by the council for this purpose was $25000. The expenditure is about $25,448.80, including the cost of the additional lands purchased. A statement of expenditure is attached thereto. Your committee will be glad to be relieved of their duty as a Building Committee.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Can the Petes Defeat This Eastern League Outfit Saturday Afternoon?

The Petes will turn out on Saturday with one of the strongest teams that has ever played in Peterborough. They realize that to beat the outfit that is to represent the St. Andrew's team here this Saturday they will have to play the fastest game of the season in order to compete for the Ontario championship against the winners of the Toronto senior league. the Petes will have to beat the outfit that is coming down here this Saturday and it will certainly be the greatest aggregation of semi-professional base ball players that ever assembled on one team in Ontario.

And that star battery, Walter Cadman, who has been playing for Saginaw, Mich., the last two seasons and Fred Hicky, the Toronto Eastern Leaguer will certainly try and put a crimp in the batting averages of the local team.

When Hicky was down here last week, he was heard to remark after the game that when he went in to pitch the next game there would be a different tale to tell.

Well, Mr. Hicky will have his turn this Saturday and if he does turn the trick he will come out of the game with the idea that he had no lead pipe cinch if the Petes play up to their past form.

The addition of Bill O'Hara, who has been playing with the Baltimore team, and who has been drafted by the New York Nationals for next season, will be a tower of strength to the St. Andrew's team, and the base ball fans will get an idea of the class of ball that is put up in the big leagues.

Manager Atcheson evidently expects to have his troubles when he has to get so many star players to journey down to meet the "pass sports in Peterborough," as he called them in an item in the Toronto papers.

If the weather holds out good, the attendance will be one of the largest that has attended a ball game in Peterborough in years.

The regular price of admission will prevail. After the big game a city league rugby game will be played between two teams, the particulars of which will be announced later.

City League

A meeting of the City Rugby League will be held in the Examiner office this evening at 7.30 sharp. Business of importance to before the league, and all members are requested to be present.

The Astronomical Society to Meet in Collegiate

Rev. Dr. Marsh with a deputation was present at the Board of Education and addressed the members on the work of the Astronomical Society. He said he had been associated with the Toronto branch for several years and he said that it was desired to make this a national society. The object of the deputation was to ask the board to provide them with a room where they could meet without expense. He suggested that either a room in the Normal school or Collegiate Institute. The society was soon to start a series of lectures on this all important subject. The first one will be given in St. Paul's school room.

Mr. Collier also addressed the board and he said it was preferred to hold the lectures in the Collegiate and to make the society fully educational.

Chairman Fair said he was pleased to learn of the good work of the society and he considered the request a very modest one and he thought possibly the board could furnish the accommodation.

On motion of Dr. Morrison and Mr. Hays, the matter of giving a room to the Astronomical Society, was referred to the Supervision Department.

Heating of King Edward School

The heating apparatus at the King Edward school is not capable of heating the building. The boiler is too small and consequently too expensive. The matter was introduced to the Board of Education by Mr. B. F. Ackerman, who stated that he got his information from the janitor. The janitor states that he find it necessary to drive the furnace at top speed all the time to get the rooms heated and that this would soon burn the furnace out and the rooms would never be satisfactorily heated.

Mr. Robinson stated that the board was up against the proposition of putting in another boiler, which would cost from $900 upwards. He explained the result of forcing a steam heating system, and reminded the board that before the boiler was purchased he opposed it on the grounds that it was too small.

The expert from the manufacturers who interviewed the board, stated that the boiler purchased would not only heat eight rooms, but would also heat the twelve rooms. Now it turns out that it will not heat the eight rooms.

The secretary of the board was instructed to hunt up the contract and see if there was any written guarantee in existence.

It was moved by Mr. Hill and Dr. Burnham, that this matter be referred to the Property Committee to look into and report to the board at the next meeting.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

PENNY POSTAGE

Penny postage between Britain and the United States is one of the signs of the times. It will soon be as cheap for a business man in Chicago to write to another in Birmingham as to one in New York; and the result must be to oil the commercial machinery that binds the two business communities together. The difference between two cents and five cents may not look much to the man who thinks of a commercial house writing only a letter or two for the Atlantic mail, but the New York Times estimates that "there are many firms in which the savings will be thousands." The removal of such a tax upon business must give it considerable impetus; and the closer relations between these two commercial peoples will amply repay any temporary loss which may possibly come to the postal revenues.

Men who measure the chances of war often forget the dissuading effect of business relations. When there is a great commercial stake on the board which will infallibly be lost if two nations come to blows, every man who has a dollar in that stake will exert his influence to prevent such a catastrophe. The men of affairs cannot, of course, always govern. National passions are aroused; a great national affront has been suffered, a tidal wave sweeps up before which interests and even common sense give way. But still when the greater part of the commercial and money-making interests in both countries stand to lose heavily, and without hope of recovery, in case war comes, there is an exceedingly strong pressure put upon politicians to avoid dangerous and inflammatory talk. The growing union between Wall Street and Park Lane has had much to do with "the hands across the sea" policy which has created the British-American understanding and made it the greatest single factor in the world's peace.

We can always remember with pride that in this move Canada showed the way. We were the first to demonstrate that a trans-Atlantic penny postage would pay. With us—as with the United States—Britain had the advantage of not having to distribute its penny letters over so large an area. Her population is compact; while our post office must carry a letter for its penny stamp from Aberdeen to the Yukon. But we did not fear to try the experiment; and it proved a success. Since then we practically forced the British post office into a more patriotic policy towards the exchange of newspapers between the two countries; and again we hear the larger shared the burden. But results are already showing that it was a good move, for our people are reading more British and less foreign periodical literature. The "Home" post office is hard to move; and the credit for having dislodged it from its old rut is certainly ours. Our neighbors now come in to reap some of the benefits, and we are very glad to see them do it. Penny postage has existed between us and them for many a day.

A DISASTER AVERTED

It is a matter of the most profound satisfaction, as well as of supreme importance to the commercial welfare of the Dominion, that the great strike over the western end of the Canadian Pacific, occasioned by variance of views between the authorities of the company, and the leaders of organized labor in its employ, has been brought to an amicable and satisfactory conclusion. It is not surprising that the attainment of this conclusion was the occasion of a public demonstration of rejoicing at Winnipeg, the metropolis of the great West, inasmuch as it threatened to prevent the moving of the enormous grain yield of the western prairies, and to temporarily paralyze and permanently injure trade and business throughout that great agricultural empire. The happy issue of this threatening incident shows the wisdom of the policy which has provided for a means of official conciliatory intervention, that creates a way for the settlement of disputes between interests whose welfare is in the ultimated result identical, but which differ in regard to the equitity of details of management. In such a conflict of opinion each party is naturally tenacious of its own particular contention and thoroughly convinced of its righteousness. Neither is willing to admit any defect in the merit of its position. The intervention of a disinterested third party, acting officially in behalf of the public, and appealing to the sense of public duty and obligation of the disputants paves the way to mutual concession, until a ground of common agreement is reached satisfactory to the power and self-respect of each, and in all likelihood to the practical advantage of both. In Massachusetts, in New Zealand and in Australia, where the plan of public boards of arbitration and conciliation has been in force its advantage and benefit have been signally proven. And that will undoubtedly prove to be the experience in this Canada of ours.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is to be hoped that with the many matters discussed and written about now and before the day of election, that the salary grab will not be lost sight of. In fact, it should be prominently brought to the attention of the electors that they may be prepared to give expression to their disapproval on the 26th of this month.

It was a scheme concocted by members of the Dominion Parliament on both sides of the House to increase their salaries for attending each session of Parliament. The members seemed to be mutually harmonious in the matter, irrespective of the financial burden of $.95,000 which by their action they placed annually and for all time to come on the Dominion.

There are 209 members of the Dominion Parliament and 80 Senators, making 295, each of whom had his salary increased by $1,000. What each was getting before ($1,500) was ample remuneration to them; in fact, it is doubtful if three-fourths of the members, and perhaps more than that number, ever were in a position to earn $1,500 yearly.

It was a discreditable transaction for members of Parliament to help themselves to public money of their own free will when their remuneration for their parliamentary services was already ample.

Should this transaction be passed over without a stunning rebuke, the members of the provincial legislatures will be doing threefame.

The anti-tuberculosis congress in Washington will accomplish something if it succeeds in spreading still farther the cult of the open window and the closed mouth. Education can go far toward banishing "the white plague;" and every such gathering helps to educate. We sometimes imagine that practically every person must know now the points of danger and the easy methods of precaution and cure; but it is amazing how many people do not have what the evangelists would call a "saving knowledge" of the truth and how many have no knowledge at all.

One source of peril is the foolish custom of hiding from tuberculous patients the truth about themselves. People who more than suspected by their friends to be affected, and whom physicians must know are possible sources of contagion, are themselves in blissful ignorance of the fact, and consequently do not take the precautions which they otherwise would. This is mistaken kindness. For the patient's own sake, he or she should be told; for it is often possible for them to fight off the dread visitor if the know that he is really at hand. For the sake of their relatives—some of them probably children—it is imperative that they be told; for the careless patient is the most dangerous center of contagion that could well exist.

Bylaws against spitting seem to be chiefly honored in their breach. They appear to be a step beyond general public opinion; and we might as well recognize the humilating fact. What is wanted here, too, is a campaign of education. If every man realized the danger of the practice, far fewer would be guilt of it. Few people, indeed, can be quite certain that they are not scattering peril by this process; and yet no one imagines that half the population would go about distributing smallpox or typhoid germs, if they were conscious of the fact. We are not inhuman; we are only unconvinced of the danger. As has been so often said, dirt and ignorance are the cause of most disease.

The immigration figures from the first of January to the end of August show a falling off from last year of considerably more than half in the immigration that come to us by way of ocean ports. The inflow from the United States remained as nearly as possible the same. If this means that the agricultural immigration from the British Isles has decreased, it is a serious loss to which the immigration department may well give attention; but if the decrease has been in other classes of immigrants—men who would only augment the problem of the unemployed in our cities—then we may congratulate ourselves on the showing. The immigration from the United States was, no doubt, practically all agricultural, and of the best possible sort.

Farmers who go to the West to settle on our vacant lands become not only the basis of a permanent population but an addition to the home market which will keep our factory wheels turning and our merchants busy. The larger the crop in the West, the more money will there be to spend on the products of the rest of the country, so that the East is vitally interested in getting grain-producers to settle on the prairies. The addition to the rest of the population should, however, be left to natural forces. There should be no "pumping in" of mechanics or clerks or men who must earn their living in the cities. Immigration figures covering these classes may well be matters of indifference to us, so long as they are not artificially swollen by the efforts or mistaken charity or a misguided passion for dazzling totals. No such man should be assisted to come to Canada. What we attract naturally, we can probably handle, but we are not a gigantic work-house nor a reformatory for the training of the slum products of other lands.

General Kuropatkin, in discussing the reasons for Japanese success in the Russo-Japanese war, lays much emphasis on the "moral strength" of Japan. He says that a Russian expert insisted at the opening of the war that one Russian would be equal to three Japanese; that as the war went on he admitted his mistake and said that they would have to send a Russian soldier to meet every Japanese; and that toward the end he held that it would need three Russians to overcome one Japanese. The superiority of the "little brown men of Nippon" lay in their moral superiority. They believed in their cause. They had rather die than lose. They wanted to fight, while the Russian soldier was merely obeying orders.

It is easy to forget the moral factor which has so much to do with the success of armies. France had splendid troops under Louis XIV., but they were frequently beaten in the field. The enemies of the Kingdom tightened in iron ring about her, and her glory perceptibly faded. Later, when the Revolution came, many of the best soldiers of France were driven out of the country, and untrained peasantry and proletarians filled the ranks. Yet this ragged army gave France the victories of Napoleon and carried the glories of the Republic and the Empire to the boundaries of Europe. What made the difference? The soldiers of Louis badly led, poorly paid and had little interest in their campaigns. The soldiers of Napoleon were on fire with eager enthusiasm.

Moral strength made much of the force of the American soldiers who fought under Washington. Moral strength armed the British who finally fought Napoleon when he threatened to conquer Europe. And so it goes. History could provide many examples. The flame in the breast of the soldier is as important as the spark that ignites his cartridge. If there is to be another great European war, we must look for the moral factor to incorporate in our calculations. A people fighting on the defensive usually have it, unless they are emptied of hope. A people flushed with victory and a sense of strength often have it, too. But when a government goes to war without the approval of its people, then it is absent, as Russia learned, and its absence is very likely to be fatal.

The personal element is perhaps one of the greatest attractions in any store for the purchaser who is on the hunt for some satisfactory line of goods. It pays a dealer to have a reputable and reliable line of goods on his shelves and about his counters. It pays to advertise this fact as widely as possible through trade papers, public journals and in show windows. It is a good idea to be satisfied with a reasonable profit on goods and keep prices to a limit that will allow no chance of his being referred to as a money grabber. There is, however, one drawback which, if present, is bound to offset many of these advantages and rob the store of much trade that would otherwise come its way, and that is failure to maintain a staff that will impress the purchasing public favorably. For it is well known that nothing appeals more to any customer than the courteous attention, unfailing patience and unostentatious desire to satisfy which is exhibited by the true salesman. It is, however, from the proprietor that the inspiration must come. It is not only necessary for him to exercise careful judgment in the choice of his salesmen, he must understand as well the art of keeping them in proper spirit for their work. Many fail signally in this, and their trade suffers in consequence. Courteous treatment of employees, consideration of their well-being and a generous interest in them and their affairs as human beings and not merely accidental accessories to business operations, pays extremely good interest in the end. It is bound to be handed on and manifest itself in the treatment given to customers by the salesmen in their turn.

Of course, as a general, the proprietor of a hardware establishment understands quite well enough now to treat his clerk as a gentleman during business hours. But what does he know or care of him outside these? In drawing up his schedule of salaries does he give proper consideration to the costs of living which his employes have to meet; does he ever figure it out that he owes them a certain percentage of his profits, however small that percentage may be, as a recognition of the fact that to them he owes no small part of his business success? This recognition of worth could easily take many acceptable forms. There is the small bonus coming opportunely at the Christmas time or other holidays, there are nicely arranged surprise outings or banquets when he can make closer personal acquaintance with his salesmen and inspire them with the idea that they are an essential part of his system of trading. Inspire a man with the idea that he is your associate and, in his own particular sphere, your equal, and you have increased his efficiency in relation to your business many times.

The decision as announced by dispatches, of the Transvaal Government to spend £700,000 on resettling the country districts with the poor whites who have drifted into the towns, is a welcome sign of their desire to solve one of the most difficult problems ahead. The mining industry is prosperous, but its prosperity has been gained at the cost of rigid economics of labor on the Rand. It has now been settled once for all that whitel abor in the mines can only be used for supervising the work of the coolies and natives who are there employed, and there is as social as well as an industrial drawback to the employment of more whites on the Rand. Yet the unemployed are there in numbers, and their ranks have been augmented by those who, from one cause or another, have failed on this land, and thus gradually drifted into the towns. But while the Botha Government is to be congratulated both on its desire to settle the unemployed question, and on its wish to slew lop the rural as well as the urban districts of the Transvaal, it is impossible not to recognize that their courage is great in attacking the matter in this fashion. Those who are unemployed, from whatever reason it may be, are nearly always the residuum of the community, the industrial weaklings. It is important that they should be aided, for they are decidedly to be a permanent drag on the state when they have been helped to start a business, to open a farm, or what not than when they are left to sink into an unemployable condition. But farming is work which one cannot learn in a week, whether one possesses aptitudes and brainas or not. While it is to be hoped that the Botha Government will be generally successful in their resettlement idea, the fear cannot be avoided that there will be a good many individual failures among those whom they assist.

All are familiar with the extremely liberal pension allowances in favor of those who fought for the preservation of the Union in the Civil War. The fact is not so generally known that the governments of the several States which formed the Southern Confederacy have made some provision at least for those who served on the other side. Alabama alone spending over three-quarters of a million dollars for that purpose annually.

The News and Courier of Charleston in commenting on what Southern States are doing in this way calls attention to something which is a cause of constant irritation in the South, for every dollar the people of the old Confederacy voluntarily pay, in direct taxation, through their State Governments, for the benefit of disabled soldiers of the lost cause, they are compelled to pay six dollars through the National Government to the pension fund of which Northern soldiers alone have the benefit. Under these conditions, the News-Courier thinks it is hardly surprising that all the bitterness of the Civil War has not yet disappeared from the South.

The journal quoted overlooks another way of looking at the matter in question. Is not a good deal of magnanimity shown in allowing public taxes of any kind, even when raised locally, to be diverted to the making of grants to men who took up arms for the purpose of destroying the nation in which these taxes are collected?

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rheumatism, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a marvelous specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of bright's or any other kidney or bladder trouble, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggists recommend and sell

How to Tell

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well.

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew.

Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore, —that's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, sallow blotches, spirit droop.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's pills.

"When I was so stooped and back weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills" writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every littleduty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharp twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles and joints, lack of appetite and loss of sleep. Reach the cause. Cure the kidneys. Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands 25c at all dealers.

Leg was Broken

A farmer giving his name as George Sexsmith, of North Monaghan, had his right leg broken below the knee in a runaway yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock on Aylmer street. He was driving his team across the C.P.R. tracks when they became frightened at a train and started to run up Aylmer street. A quantity of lumber that had been piled on the wagon was strewn along the road and at the corner of Dalhousie and Aylmer streets, Mr. Sexsmith was thrown from his seat. He was cut about the face as well as suffering a compound fracture below the right knee.

Oddfellows, Notice!

The Members of Otonabee Lodge No. 13, I. O. O. F., are requested to meet in the Lodge Room Wednesday afternoon next, Oct. 7th, at 3 o'clock to attend the funeral of our late brother, Alex. Rutherford, P.G. Funeral from the G. T. R. station on the arrival of the 3.30 train from Oshawa. The members of Peterborough Lodge and all visiting Oddfellows are Cordially invited to attend.

Obituary

Mr. E. C. Braund and Mr. J. T. Braund, local general merchants, left yesterday morning for Oshawa, accompanied by their wives, after receiving the sad intelligence of the death of their mother which occurred on Monday. The latter, Mrs. Jos. Braund, was stricken with paralysis a year ago, almost to the hour, and has been gradually sinking during the intervening months.

The surviving children are Messrs. R. C. and J. T. Braund, of Peterborough; J. W. Braund, of North Toronto; J. B. Braund, of Edmore, N.D.; Frank Braund, of Oshawa; Mrs. John Pound, Mrs. Thos. Stacey and Mrs. Thos. Gale, of Oshawa.

The funeral will be held today to the Union Cemetery, Oshawa.

Messrs. William, Nelson, Robert and Walter Bentley of this city, are nephews of the deceased.

Personal

—Miss Manning, Crescent street, has returned from a two weeks' visit in Belleville.

—Dr. J. V. Gallivan left yesterday for New York, and will be absent about two weeks.

—W. W. Vanever of Hamilton, was a guest of friends in the city yesterday.

—Mr. Walter Dawson has left for Toronto, where he enters on his third year work in the Dental College.

—Mrs. Ormond, Mrs. J. Ormond and Mrs. Macdonald are the guests of Mrs. Stratton in Peterborough.—Toronto Star.

—Mr. J. E. Rawson, verry clerk of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, and wife, are guests of the former's brother-in-law, Rev. H. M. Manning, Crescent street.

A marvellous trial reading of character by the well-known scientific phrenologist, Prof. McKellar, L.V., 21 Beaconsfield avenue, Toronto, whose public blind-fold tests prove the reliability of phrenology. Send address and ten cents silver. Enclose photo when possible. Will return with reading.

—Mr. Ken Morris, who for several months has been employed in Mr. Jas. Lewis' Tonsorial Parlors, left for the Canadian Northwest yesterday morning where he will join his brother

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

Wedding Bells

NICHOLS—EDWARDS.

A wedding of much interest to people in Peterborough, was solemnized at 6.30 Tuesday morning, at the residence of Rev. Robt. Pogue, 437 Downie street, when Miss Olivia Berrington Edwards, daughter of Mr. Wesley Edwards, proprietor of the Crystal, was united in marriage to Mr. Dixon Nichols, youngest son of Mr. A. R. Nichols, 293 Dalhousie street. It was of an exceedingly quiet nature, only the immediate relatives witnessing the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Nichols left on the eight o'clock C.P.R. train on a honeymoon trip to Brantford. Their many friends extend to them their heartiest congratulations.

MAHER—McMAHON.

A pretty church wedding was celebrated at St. Peter's cathedral yesterday morning at eight o'clock, the principals being Miss Mary McMahon, daughter of Mr. John McMahon, 217 Euclid avenue, to Mr. Wm. Maher, who some time ago came out from Ireland. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. O'Brien. The bride was attired in silk Rhentonia, trimmed with gold insertion. She wore a picture hat and carried a white prayer book, the gift of her father. She was attended by Miss Charlotte McMahon, her sister, who was dressed in cream taffeta and who carried a bouquet of white carnations. She also wore a picture hat.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, where also a beautiful array of gifts was spread. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain.

Mr. and Mrs. Maher left on the morning G.T.R. train for their honeymoon trip to Rochester and New York, and returning will reside in Ashburnham.

GORDON—EDGAR.

A quiet wedding was celebrated Tuesday morning at St. Peter's cathedral when Miss Flossie Edgar was united in marriage to Mr. Hosmer Gordon, the Rev. Father Kelly performing the ceremony. They were attended by Mr. Ed. Laplante and Miss Florence Gordon, sister of the groom. After the usual post-nuptial luncheon and reception, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon left on the 4.48 C.P.R. train for the west, visiting at Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. They have the best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy married life.

Mexican Diet

Not Conducive to American Energy

"After about thirteen years in Mexico, where I was on a Mexican diet into which coffee and greasy food enter largely, I found that everything I ate distressed me" writes a man from our neighboring republic.

"Nervous break-down with pain in the heart caused me to give up mental work. After trying various stomach remedies without benefit, I found relief, at last, by eating Grape-Nuts and cream.

"I could digest Grape-Nuts, and the heart and nervous symptoms soon improved to such an extent that I could do some brain work and a fair day's manual labor.

"When away from home I get out of sorts from eating wrong food, but at home a few days on Grape-Nuts puts me right again.

"I once worked 10 consecutive hours on a dike without much fatigue, by having a small box of Grape-Nuts in my pocket and eating a little dry, whenever I felt faint. I can now teach all day without fatigue, after a breakfast of Grape-Nuts and cream, stewed fruit, toast and Postum.

"That old dull feeling, when I tried to live on my former diet, has disappeared and the delightful sensation of being fully nourished is present now. And the smile on our 18 months old boy at a sight of a Grape-Nuts package is worth seeing."

"There's a Reason."

Mr. Stratton in Smith

Enthusiastic Meeting at Temperance Hall Monday Night

The largest gathering assembled in Temperance Hall, township of Smith, was held on Monday evening, quite a number of ladies gracing the occasion by their presence.

Mr. T. H. Graham was voted to the chair, and Mr. F. D. Kerr delivered a spirited address in favor of the Liberal Government and Hon. Mr. Stratton. They all knew Mr. Stratton, and those who knew him knew him so well and knew him in such a way that it became a duty and a pleasure to vote for him. How many of them would recognize Mr. Burnham if they passed him on the streets in Peterborough? And how many of them would Mr. Burnham know if he met them? (Laughter.) He supposed some of them had read Mr. Burnham's address to the electors, if any one had done so, and was able to state what it meant, he was entitled to a prize. They all knew what Mr. Stratton had done during the years of his public life for Peterborough. What had Mr. Burnham done for Peterborough during his career? Mr. Burnham offered no policy to the electors, but instead a tirade of personal abuse. They had altogether too much abuse of public men in their political affairs for the good of the public. He urged them to give a rousing majority for Mr. Stratton, as the most available man and the most likely to render efficient and profitable service as their member of parliament.

Mr. W. H. Meldrum said that though he had been a Conservative in Dominion politics he had been compelled by the splendid achievements of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, by which the country had so greatly benefitted, to support him under the present circumstances, in order that the work being carried on for the progress and prosperity of the country might be continued. He referred to the past services of Mr. Stratton to the interests of Peterborough, and his splendid equipment of experience for useful representation of the country in the House of Commons. The fact that his services were sought every year, in positions of trust and responsibility by the great financial institutions of the province, showed that investors appreciated his work, his ability and his trustworthiness, and he believed this election would show that the same confidence in Mr. Stratton was felt by the electors of Peterborough.

Hon. Mr. Stratton received a warm greeting reviewed the political situation at length and concluded by asking the electors irrespective of their politician leanings, to consider the situation as things are. Did they wish to return to the old order of things? Was it not better to allow the government that had undertaken, and so far successfully prosecuted the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific enterprise to carry it to completion? Was it not better to allow the government that had given evidence of its earnestness in the construction of the Trent Valley canal, and had carried it already so far to the desired result, who had faith in its importance to the public interest to carry this enterprise also to completion? Had Peterborough been as well served, as considerately treated and as generously dealt with by any other government in the history of Canada? Have we not in our city everywhere monuments of usefulness and importance to our interests that bear eloquent testimony to the sincere concern of the government in our welfare, and their desire to aid in our progress? Is it not better that the Hudson's Bay railway should be completed by its projectors, who recognize its importance to the settlers of the west, than by those who deny its utility, and who might possibly abandon its construction? Have not our canals been enlarged, our general transportation facilities extended and improved, and every possible administrative measure taken that could be devised to promote our trade and commerce, for both labor and capital? Recognizing all this, as all fair-minded men must recognize it, do not your sense of justice, your concern for the welfare of your country and your regard for your personal interest, unite in convincing you that you are justified in this election, regardless of any political tendency in voting in favor of the government which has accomplished so much, and of myself in this contest, I am content to leave you to be the judges of my qualifications to render you effective and useful service in parliament, and I confidently appeal to my past record as a sufficient assurance of the character and competency of my future labor in your behalf. (Loud cheers.)

A vote of thanks was tendered to chairman; three rousing cheers for Hon. Mr. Stratton were given with a will, and three cheers for the King closed a most successful meeting.

"White Furs" the Word from Paris

Paris, Oct. 5.—It is difficult at this time of year to know exactly what to do in the way of clothes. Some people still cling to their summer gowns, others are already shrouding themselves in furs. Apropos of furs, white furs of every sort and kind will be greatly worn this coming winter, partly because they make the most becoming frame to any face, and partly perhaps, too, because women are at length beginning to realize that white flocks need only be worn when the atmosphere registers summer. But they are an expensive luxury, as when furs and jewels and old lace are in question, there is only one remark to be made concerning their purchase—only the best is permissible. White fox and ermine will need the list in fashion's favor; but she will not prove sold to sable, and here are those besides who never tire of the silvery gray of chinchilla or squirrel. Some of the newest and most effective stoles are those carried out in a long point at the back, the folds brought over the shoulders in fichu fashion and caught in at the waist with a jewel clasp, from whence they fall in long-tailed ends to the feet.

A HINT ABOUT SCRAPS.

A good idea, too, for those who have scraps of good fur not long enough to make a stole, is to have them fashioned into one of the smart new little four-in-one, fitting closely round the neck and fastened with a bow of the same fur or a big knot of velvet or ribbon.

The new skirt is so narrow at the hem that it measures only from three to three and a half yards in width, but there are various ways of presenting it. In one there is a square train of an extraordinary fur, rather like a fish's tail, in another a simulated tunic arranged with points down the narrow front width of the skirt branching out into kilpings of material embellished at one side with buttons and on the other with buttonholes. In order to give a little "spring" to the dress (especially when it is required for walking purposes, such inset pleats have their advantage. Various problems necessarily arise in connection with the background of a toilette of this description. It must fit the figure to perfection—that is an absolute necessity.

Naturally, therefore, the petticoat must be tabooed, and then the question of sufficient warmth clamors for solution, for slavishly devoted though women also supposed to be the mandates of the mode, they are not suicidally so in these days of sound common sense. This autumn the lining of the gown is actually being relied upon to provide a certain amount of warmth and to take the place of the petticoats. It is modelled to caress the figure exactly, and is carried down to the knees, where, by means of suspenders fastened to the stockings, it is held in its place. Then, too, the new stays are of a sufficient length to prove a real protection to the body. They are literally closely fitted and admirably boned corsets, sometimes made of mail, sometimes of coutille, terminating just below the knees, where they are specially fitted with gussets in order to fit the limbs with complete comfort. To ingenious contrivances such as these fashion is forced this autumn. In another way also she protects her devotees, inasmuch as the flimsy net chemisette and underdresses that are being worn are mounted upon flesh-tinted woven linings in order to put to rout such autumn ills as rheumatism and rheumatism.

Bouteche everything and you will be in fashion's good books. There are actually evening shoes made of velvet and satin, with the most delicate tracerie upon them in the narrowest of braids. There are also hats thus embellished and very pretty they are, as well as exceedingly novel. Even the most utilitarian of delaine blouses for early autumn will have their insertion of net matched with white silk.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

subjects were simple— the government or Dowla was a thing and a Moslem's whole duty was to keep his Christian fellow-subjects in order, treat them kindly if they were submissive, or smite them if they rebelled, while service in the army for so many days or years at the Khalif chose to direct was to a Moslem a matter of course.

"The calm and deliberate acceptance of this creed by the majority of the Turkish and Arabic-speaking Moslems of Asiatic Turkey was until recently the only solid foundation of the Constantinople regime. Hitherto the Central authority has always had at its disposal two forms of diversion of which it could avail itself in front of the Moslems of Asia growing restless—either the Armenians or other Christian peoples might be represented as dangerous to the state or a naval demonstration of the powers could be provoked. In the first instance the Asiatic Moslems could be deluded into believing that the Christians threatened them and their property; in the second, that the nations of Christendom were being held at bay by the diplomacy of the Central Government; in either case the detested tax-gathering, conscript-crimping Dowla appeared as the only defence of the Moslem against Christian supremacy, and to the Moslem, corruption, tyranny, extortion and material poverty would be far preferable to dishonorable subjection.

"However, judging from recent events, it would appear as if the Asiatic Moslems were beginning to wonder whether the wretched condition of the Empire could not be mitigated by their own efforts. In Constantinople, Syria, Smyrna, Aleppo, Harlis, Changri, and Erzerum and other important cities the Moslems have on one pretext of other tried conclusions with the Government; in each case they gained their point without trouble because the Moslem soldiers would not shoot Moslem demonstrators. Those whose business it was to know this were well aware of the fact. The cry of Islam in danger no longer evokes enthusiasm nor do suggestions of Christian disloyalty obtain such ready credence as heretofore; nearly the whole of the younger military officers and many of their seniors are weary of insane wards in the Yemen, purposeless expeditions into Persia and murderous affrays in Macedonia, where there is neither honor nor remuneration to be obtained. The merchants, landowners and citizens are beginning to realize the price that is being paid to foreign concession hunters for paying down the various circuitous lines of railway leading from nowhere to nowhere. Civil officials grow more and more irritated against the government on account of the rapid increase of the acreage of the crown lands and the insolence and turbulence of the Oretans, Tartars, Circassians, Chechens, and other aliens who inhabit the estate of the civil list, pay no taxes, and drive away the peaceful population. The law-abiding Moslem peasantry are beginning to perceive that they are the only people who have neither bishop, consul nor missionary to defend them. Lastly, the policy of the Central Authority in banishing young Turks, disgraced officials and others from Constantinople to the various provincial capitals has unwittingly provided the party of discontent with a complete system of propaganda throughout the empire. The true cause of the revolution will be found in the gradual change of Moslem opinion in Asia reacting on the Ottoman troops in Europe, a good proportion of whom are drawn from the Anatolian peninsula."

C. P. R. To Increase Capital By Fifty Million Dollars--The Annual Meeting of Company

Canada Quickly Returning to Sound Business Conditions

An Early End to Depression Looked For

Montreal, Oct. 7. — The annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific Railway was rendered especially interesting by the sentiments expressed by the leading interests that Canada was quickly returning to sound business conditions and an early end might be looked for to the depression that set in last November. Such a statement, coming from Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who had been looking into conditions very carefully, was very favorably received by the shareholders.

Further tangible proof of the confidence the directors had that conditions would rapidly improve is contained in the request made of the shareholders to authorise an increase in the share capital from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000.

A special report prepared by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy in connection with the proposed issue of new stock showed that during the last six years the company had spent $37,-000,000 in securing new equipment, and in that time the company had received one locomotive for every three days, one new passenger coach for every two days, and fourteen new freight cars for every single day, yet, with all this equipment the company would hardly be able to handle the business that would be offering during the next six weeks.

As to the uses to which the new share capital, amounting to $50,000,-000, would be put, Sir Thomas stated it was not easy to designate except that the directors felt that during the next few years the company would have to add to its equipment just as rapidly as it had during the past few years. With regard to the policy the directors intended to follow with regard to construction work, Sir Thomas stated that it was intended to complete many new lines now under construction rather than to undertake any new lines.

Referring to the depression that had prevailed in Canada for the past ten months, Sir Thomas stated that the directors had felt right along that it was purely temporary, and that the company should not make any reductions in the general policy of operation or maintenance. Conditions at the present time indicated that the directors had been right in taking this view.

SIR THOS. SHAUGHNESSY,

Mr. Stratton Holds an Enthusiastic Meeting at Bridgenorth

On Tuesday evening at Bridgenorth a largely attended meeting was held in the interests of Hon. J. R. Stratton. A very noticeable feature was the attendance of many ladies.

Mr. Thomas Young was on motion appointed to the chair and in a few pleasant remarks introduced the first speaker of the evening. When they voted for Mr. Stratton, he said, they were supporting no new man, and their past experience would assure them that they would make in sending him to the House of Commons in this election.

MR. W. H. MELDRUM.

Mr. Meldrum had always been glad to do his share in support of the gentleman who was now seeking their suffrages, and on this occasion he felt it a duty also to do what he could in support of the government in whose behalf Mr. Stratton appealed to them, because to his mind, every interest of the public welfare demanded that at this stage of natural progress the services of Sir Wilfrid Laurier should be retained at the helm of the ship of state. When business reasons compelled their late member, Mr. Hall, to refuse again to contest the riding, his action had been so little anticipated that his renewed candidacy was regarded as a matter of course, and his determined withdrawal left those whom he represented without a candidate and without any preparation for a campaign. It was in this condition that Mr. Stratton had been induced to take a stand as he had always done, for his friends in time of difficulty. For his own part it had always been a pleasure to him to help to give Mr. Stratton such support as he was able, a pleasure which had also served to the assured by the majority of Peterborough citizens, who had again

Mr. Stratton to representative positions, and who had never found their confidence misplaced. (Cheers).

MR. D. O'CONNELL.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell expressed his appreciation of so large and interested a meeting, and especially at the presence of the ladies, and their manifest sympathy with the candidature of his friend. Mr. Stratton. He said that two men were before them for their support, and these men and the issues which they represented must be fully and freely discussed. The two parties which contend for the privilege of administering the affairs of the country have come back to their masters, the people, receive their instructions, and to ask for support for the policy which they advocate. Any man who comes forward and asks to be sent to represent the people in the highest court of the nation, the Parliament, to assist in the administration of affairs and the making of laws, must necessarily subject himself to an analysis of his claims, and to whatever criticism his public record exposes him.

No greater work had been done by any statesman for his country than that by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Master Builder of the liberal party, for Canada—a work which must be continued under his guidance, if Canada is to maintain its place as the brightest star in the constellation of the Empire, and to work out its great destiny as the prosperous home of a united, contented and happy people. To this end he urged them to give Hon. Mr. Stratton their hearty support and felt sure that he would be returned by a handsome and emphatic majority.

HON. J. R. STRATTON.

Mr. Stratton was then called on by the chairman, and was received with hearty applause. He said that and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

New York Giants Won, Sudden Death Game Today

The eyes of the baseball world were trained on the game in New York yesterday, between Joe Kelley's Bean Eaters and Mugsy McGraw's Giants.

On the outcome hinged a chance the Pittsburg Pirates had to win the pennant. But it was only a chance. If New York had lost yesterday, and then won in the play-off of the tie game with Chicago today, Honus Wagner and his team mates would be one of the three teams which would be tied for first place. Chicago, New York, and Pittsburg would then each have won 98 and lost 56 games, and would have a percentage of .636 each. Stranger things have happened.

But as the New York team won yesterday, and today's game with Chicago will amount to a sudden-death game for the championship. The advantage will be with New York, playing as they do on their home grounds, and with a home crowd cheering them on to victory. Chicago will also have the handicap of having had to travel all night in order to get to the Metropolis. On the other hand, they have the benefit of having had a rest since Sunday, when they played the last league game, while New York has been fighting hard battles every day this week.

The Chicago team left the Windy City last night on the 20th Century Limited, and are due to arrive in New York early this morning.

Another Murder in High Society--Capt. Clayton Shot by Sister-in-Law

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—The killing at his country home near here last night of Captain J. Clayton Erb, captain in the Pennsylvania National Guard, and confidential man of Israel W. Durham, former leader of the local Republican organization, caused a sensation in this city. Captain Erb was shot dead by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Katherine Beisl, during a quarrel over domestic affairs. It was extremely well known in all walks of life in this city and had many friends throughout the State.

Owing to the lateness of the hour when the tragedy occurred and the remoteness of "Red Gables" the Erb country home, details of the shooting were slow in coming in.

HAD TROUBLE FREQUENTLY.

Captain Erb and his wife had had considerable domestic trouble of late, their differences becoming so serious that they finally reached the Delaware County Courts. Each accused the other of unbecoming conduct, and it was expected that divorce proceedings would ultimately be instituted by one or the other. Notwithstanding their troubles they continued to live at "Red Gables," and quarrels were frequent.

While Mrs. Beisl has admitted the killing she has thus far failed to supply certain details of the tragedy.

EMPTIED THE REVOLVER.

According to Mrs. Beisl she heard an exchange of angry words on the second floor and on going on the stairs found Erb beating his wife. Whether Mrs. Beisl had the revolver with her at the time or ran into her bedroom and got it, was not disclosed. According to her story, as related to the officials in the case, Erb turned from his wife and started to attack her, and fearing for her life, she pointed the revolver at him and fired. She emptied every bullet in the chambers into Erb's body, and he staggered and fell in his tracks.

The Collegiate Institute Jumping Contests were Pulled Off Yesterday

There was a big crowd at the jumping contests in connection with the Collegiate Institute field sports. The teachers and pupils all went over to the Riverside Park, after four o'clock to watch the boys exert themselves in the jumps. Owing to the lateness of the hour, however, all the events could not be pulled off, and these will take place this afternoon after four o'clock.

The result of the jumps which took place are as follows.

A Magistrate Investigates Zam-Buk

Says it is a Wonderful Healer and Does More Than is Claimed for it.

No household remedy in existence has won such glowing tributes from people in high places as has Zam-Buk. Mr. Roger F. Parry, Justice of the Peace for British Columbia, tested this famous balm, and this is what he says of it;

"The Pavilion,
Goldfields, B.C.

"To the Zam-Buk Co.

"Gentlemen,—After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for.

"I would certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in their house. It truly does even more than you claim for it. For my own part I would not now be without it in the house. Yours very truly, (Signed) "Roger F. Parry.

"Justice of the Peace for B.C."

Zam-Buk differs from ordinary salves and embrocations, for while these mostly contain animal oils and fats, Zam-Buk is purely herbal. It soothes and heals cuts, sores, ulcers, eruptions, boils, eczema, chafing sores, etc. In the household it is the handiest possible remedy for burns, scalds, children's injuries. It instantly cleanses any wound to which it is applied; prevents festering, inflammation or blood poisoning. It cures piles, varicose ulcers, and fistula. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents a box, or from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 6 boxes for $2.50.

At the Roller Rink

The attraction at the roller rink last night was a mile race. The first half was on foot and the second half on skates. The contest furnished all kinds of sport and the best part of it was that Percy Farrington, who was last in the foot half of the race got his skates on first and won out. Ben Newton was second. There was a good crowd and a fine evening was spent.

The flashlight photo taken on Tuesday night turned out fine, and the post cards will be on sale at The Times office on Friday morning.

The annual thank-offering meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of St. Paul's church will be held in the school room of the church on Friday, Oct. 9th, at 3.30 p.m. Mrs. Burns, president of the Peterborough Presbyterial, will address the meeting.

Baby Girl Drowned in Nine Inches of Water

Probably one of the saddest fatalities that have occurred in Lindsay for some time happened this morning in the drowning of Little Ruth Baker, the fifteen-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baker of the south ward.

Just before noon today Mrs. Baker had completed the washing of clothes and went to the yard to hang them on the line. She left the little child alone in the kitchen. When she returned a few minutes later, she found her little child had fallen head first into the pail. She pulled the little one up hurriedly, but it was unconscious, having been smothered by the water. Medical aid was immediately summoned by the frantic mother, but when the physician arrived he pronounced life extinct.

It appears that while the mother was out in the yard, the child reached into the pail, which had nine inches of water in it, for a brush that was floating. In so doing, it is believed, that the child toppled over, and being unable to get up again, was drowned before being noticed.

Mr. Wm. Baker, father of the child, is a lineman on the G.T.R., and is at present working in Port Perry. He was telegraphed immediately and will be home on this evening's train.

The circumstances surrounding this fatality are extremely sad, but it is more so when remembered that this little girl is the last of a family of two. About seven months ago a young son of Mr. and Mrs. Baker's was killed by a G.T.R. train near Mr. O'Halloran's farm, south of the town.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved parents in their hour of deep affliction.—Lindsay Free Press.

NINE AND FIVE-EIGHTS CTS. A DAY FOR FOOD FOR PRISONERS

At the County's Goal—Govenor Nesbitt Has Completed Report for the Year—228 Prisoners Committed During the Year

It costs just 9 5-8 cents per day to feed the prisoners in the county jail during the past year. It is indeed doubtful if any other boarding house in the city can put up three meals a day for that price. If there are it is safe betting that they have very few volunteer boarders.

Jailor Nesbitt has completed his report for the year, and has placed it in the hands of the sheriff, to be forwarded to the department in Toronto. The figures, which are interesting will be found below;

	Males.	Females.	Total.
Prisoners, Oct 1st, 1907	9		9
Committments to Sept. 30, 1908	215	13	228

Will Tender on New Section of Canal

From Hastings to Trenton--Contractor McDonald in the City

Mr. Rudolph McDonald of Toronto, of the firm of Rudolph McDonald & Co., Limited, was in the city yesterday, and called on a number of his old friends. Mr. McDonald's firm intend putting in a tender for the construction of the Hastings section of the Trent canal, the contracts for which will be let on October 20th. He is constructing the Rosedale section and expects to have it done next year, and if successful will start on the new work at once. It is just twenty-five years ago that Mr. McDonald started to work on the Trent Valley canal. The firm's name then was Manning and McDonald, and they constructed the Fenelon Falls locks and dam. That was a very expensive piece of work as the stone had to be quarried and conveyed to the locks. It was before the day concrete was permitted to be used for that class of work.

An Old Resident Has Returned

After an Absence of Forty Years--Gone to Lakefield

Mr. Michael Tobin, a native of Peterborough, but who has been away for the past forty years, has returned to his native county for the first time since his departure. Mr. Tobin was a resident of Douro, until he went west. He is an old man now although still healthy and active. On his way home he stopped at Port Hueon and while at the station was robbed of $50 and a walkin game. As a result he was broke when he struck Peterborough. He carried considerable baggage with him, and left it at the station here until he got to Lakefield, where he went on foot to see his sister.

Cretans to Defy Turkey and Intensify War Scare

Canea, Island of Crete, Oct. 7.—The events in south-eastern Europe, the independence of Bulgaria and the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, are having their effects here. The Cretans are preparing a coup d'etat in favor of a union with Greece. Attention to this end may be expected at any moment.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Official advices received in Paris indicate a great degree of popular excitement in Servia. Further mobilization orders have been issued, and the reserve called to the colors are said to be 75,000. It is feared that the Belgrade Government, in order to save itself, will be driven to embark on a desperate adventure against Austria-Hungary.

It has not yet been decided which power will take the formal initiative in inviting the powers to act to consider the revision of the Berlin peace treaty or whether the invitation will be sent out jointly by France, Great Britain and Russia.

Servia has a population of two and a half millions, and the two provinces claimed by Austria have over one and a half million people.

RUSSIA AND THE DARDANELLES

London, Oct. 6.—"The act is absolutely lawless from every possible point of view, and an audacious violation of the treaty of Berlin," says the Times of the Bulgarian declaration of independence.

After lecturing Bulgaria soundly, the times says that she may yet regret that her rulers have forfeited the respect and good will of the British people. The Times cautions the "Young Turks" to take no

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than quacks. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

Why Stay Rheumatic?

Nothing Short of Folly When Cure Is Guaranteed with Ferrozone.

Rheumatism can't be cured so long as your system is weak and run-down. You must first build up and get strength to fight off the disease.

Ferrozone cures because it builds up, because it renews the blood, and dissolves the Uric Acid and the poisons that cause rheumatism.

It is proved right here that Ferrozone does cure.

Col. H. M. Rusa, of Edwards, St. Lawrence Co., one of the fine old heroes of the Civil War, was completely restored by Ferrozone. Read his statement:

"I couldn't get around without a cane, and then only with difficulty.

"Rheumatism took complete control of my limbs.

"The suffering was more intense than hardships on the battlefield.

"When my doctor had done his best I got Ferrozone.

"Then came a quick change.

"Ferrozone gave me comfort at once, eased the pain and took the stiffness out of my muscles.

"I am well today. Ferrozone cured me completely. I can jump and run like I did forty years ago."

Be sensible about your case. If your present medicine is useless give it up.

Don't experiment again. Ferrozone is known on all sides to be a cure that does cure. Why not get a supply today. The sooner you begin Ferrozone the quicker you'll get well. Price 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

FOR A CLEAN CAMPAIGN

We believe it will be conceded by any reasonable person that an elevation of the tone of political disputes would be an advantage not to the country, but to the contending parties themselves, and would add to the dignity and the influence of political life. It is degrading to national self-respect to regard every man who seeks political preferment as a mere sordid self-seeker animated not by patriotism but by personal interest, and it not only diminishes a proper and desirable regard for authority, but it cripples the usefulness of patriotic effort. The ambition of the citizen, of whatever party, to represent his fellow men in parliament, and to have a share in the making of laws and moulding the destinies of his country, is an honorable and a patriotic aspiration, and while in the nature of things in every instance it cannot be satisfied, yet it is to be regarded with consideration and treated with respect. We believe that the number of men who are engaged in public life, who are actuated by unpure or unproper motives, is infinitesimally small, and that the average public man, no matter what his party, or the political principles of his preference, aims honestly for the advancement of the welfare of his country. The politician who stoops to introduce the element of scandal, if imputation and innendo, into his contention against an opponent, shows in this the weakness of his own cause, or the want of confidence in it, and as a rule finds the use of such ignoble weapons a source of loss of public esteem, and of injury to any cause in whose behalf they are put forward. There is among our people an inherent and distinguishing characters of old-fashioned British fair play; a disposition to estimate men by their virtues, rather than by their frailties; to follow the suggestions of charity rather than of malice; to be, as the poet says—

"To our faults a little blind,
And to our virtues ever kind."

Moreover, there is a shrewd and discriminating common sense, which recognizes that "suspicion haunts the guilty mind," and which is apt to take with a large accompaniment of salt, injurious accusations whose personal or political animus is manifest. Let us hope that in the progress of the present campaign in Peterborough, there will be no unworthy element introduced, and that the battle will be characterized by no fratricidal fizzle to create animosities at variance with the welfare and reputation of our people. It is a pleasant experience for the political candidate to succeed in attaining the accomplishment of his ambition, and though less palatable, may be the sometimes of the latter, the man who wages an honorable fight and proves that he can lose like a gentleman, with dignity and without unworthy rancor, will always command public respect, and as a rule at some future day, will find his time of popular recognition and successful aspiration. And even a failure is a prouder and a more admirable thing than any success achieved by resort to unworthy means.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Penny postage between Britain and the United States is one of the signs of the times. It will now be as cheap for a business man in Chicago to write to another in Birmingham as to one in New York, and the result must be to oil the commercial machinery that binds the two business communities together. The difference between two cents and five cents may not look much to the man who thinks of a commercial house writing only a letter or two for the Atlantic mail; but the New York Times estimates that "there are many firms in which the savings will be thousands." The removal of such a tax upon business must give it considerable impetus; and the closer relations between these two commercial peoples will amply repay any temporary loss which may possibly come to the postal revenues.

Men who measure the chances of war often forget the dissuading effect of business relations. When there is a great commercial stake on the board which will so fallibly be lost if two nations come to blows, every man who has a dollar in that stake will exert his influence to prevent such a catastrophe. The men of affairs cannot, of course, always govern. National passions are aroused; a great national affront has been suffered; a tidal wave sweeps up before which interests and even common sense give way. But still when the greater part of the commercial and money-making interests in both countries stand to lose heavily, and without hope of recovery, in case war comes, there is an exceedingly strong pressure put upon politicians to avoid dangerous and inflammatory talk. The growing union between Wall Street and Park Lane has had much to do with "the hands across the sea" policy which has created the British-American understanding and made it the greatest single factor in the world's peace.

We can always remember with pride that in this move Canada showed the way. We were the first to demonstrate that a trans-Atlantic penny postage would pay. With us—as with the United States—Britain had the advantage of not having to distribute its penny letters over so large an area. Her population is compact; while our post office must carry a letter for its penny stamp from Aberdeen to the Yoakon. But we did not fear to try the experiment; and it proved a success. Since then we practically forced the British post office into a more patriotic policy towards the exchange of newspapers between the two countries; and again we hear the larger share of the burden. But results are already showing that it was a good move, for our people are reading more British and less foreign periodical literature. The "Home" post office is hard to move; and the credit for having dislodged it from its old rut is certainly ours. Our neighbors now come in to reap some of the benefits, and we are very glad to see them do it. Penny postage has existed between us and them for many a day.

It is a matter of the most profound satisfaction, as well as of supreme importance to the commercial welfare of the Dominion, that the great strike over the western end of the Canadian Pacific, occasioned by variance of views between the authorities of the company, and the leaders of organized labor in its employ, has been brought to an amicable and satisfactory conclusion. It is not surprising that the attainment of this conclusion was the occasion of a public demonstration of rejoicing at Winnipeg, the metropolis of the great West, inasmuch as it threatened to prevent the moving of the enormous grain yield of the western prairies, and to temporarily paralize and permanently injure trade and business throughout that great agricultural empire. The happy issue of this threatening incident shows the wisdom of the policy which has provided for a means of official conciliatory intervention, that creates a way for the settlement of disputes between interests whose welfare is in the ultimated result identical, but which differ in regard to the equality of details of management. In such a conflict of opinion each party is naturally tenacious of its own particular contention and thoroughly convinced of its righteousness. Neither is willing to admit any defect in the merit of its position. The intervention of a disinterested third party, acting officially in behalf of the public, and appealing to the canon of public duty and obligation of the disputants paves the way to mutual concession, until a ground of common agreement is reached satisfactory to the power and self-respect of each, and in all likelihood to the practical advantage of both. In Massachusetts, in New Zealand and in Australia, where the plan of public boards of arbitration and conciliation has been in force its advantage and benefit have been signally proven. And that will undoubtedly prove to be the experience in this Canada of ours.

It is to be hoped that with the many matters discussed and written about now and before the day of election, that the salary grab will not be lost sight of. In fact, it should be prominently brought to the attention of the electors that they may be prepared to give expression to their disapproval on the 26th of this month.

It was a scheme concocted by members of the Dominion Parliament on both sides of the House to increase their salaries for attending each session of Parliament. The members seemed to be mutually harmonious in the matter, irrespective of the financial burden of $295,000 which by their action they placed annually and for all time to come on the Dominion.

There are 209 members of the Dominion Parliament and 86 Senators, making 295, each of whom had his salary increased by $1,000. What each was getting before ($1,500) was ample remuneration to members; in fact, it is doubtful if three-fourths of the members, and perhaps more than that number, ever were in a position to earn $1,500 yearly.

It was a discreditable transaction for members of Parliament to help themselves to public money of their own free will when their remuneration for their parliamentary services was already ample.

Should this transaction be passed over without a stunning rebuke, the members of the provincial legislatures will be doing the same.

The anti-tuberculosis congress in Washington will accomplish something if it succeeds in spreading still farther the cult of the open window and the closed mouth. Education can go far toward banishing "the white plague;" and every such gathering helps to educate. We sometimes imagine that practically every person must know now the points of danger and the easy methods of precaution and cure; but it is amazing how many people do not have what the evangelists would call a "saving knowledge" of the truth and how many have no knowledge at all.

One source of peril is the foolish custom of hiding from tuberculous patients the truth about themselves. People who more than suspected by their friends to be affected, and whom physicians must know are possible sources of contagion, are themselves in blissful ignorance of the fact, and consequently do not take the precautions which they otherwise would. This is mistaken kindness for the patient's own sake, be he or she should be told; for it is often possible for them to fight off the dread visitor if the know that he is really at hand. For the sake of their relatives—some of them probably children—it is imperative that they be told, for the careless patient is the most dangerous center of contagion that could well exist.

Bylaws against spitting seem to be chiefly boasted in their breach. They appear to be a step beyond general public opinion; and we might as well recognize the humiliating fact. What is wanted here, too, is a campaign of education. If every man realized the danger of the practice, far fewer would be guilt of it. Few people, indeed, can be quite certain that they are not scattering peril by this process; and yet no one imagines that half the population would go about distributing smallpox or typhoid germs, if they were conscious of the fact. We are not injunans; we are only unconvinced of the danger. As has been so often said, dirt and ignorance are the cause of most disease.

The immigration figures from the first of January to the end of August show a falling off from last year of considerably more than half in the immigration that came to us by way of ocean ports. The inflow from the United States remained as nearly as possible the same. If this means that the agricultural immigration from the British Isles has decreased, it is a serious loss to which the immigration department may well give attention; but if the decrease has been in other classes of immigrants—men who would only augment the problem of the unemployed in our cities—then we may congratulate ourselves on the showing. The immigration from the United States was, no doubt, practically all agricultural, and of the best possible sort.

Farmers who go to the West to settle on our vacant lands become not only the basis of a permanent population but an addition to the home market which will keep our factory wheels turning and our merchants busy. The larger the crop in the West, the more money will there be to spend on the products of the rest of the country; so that the East is vitally interested in getting grain-producers to settle on the prairies. The addition to the rest of the population should, however, be left to natural forces. There should be no "pumping in" of mechanics or clerks or men who must earn their living in the cities. Immigration fig ures covering these classes may well be matters of indifference to us, so long as they are not artificially swollen by the efforts or mistaken charity or a misguided passion for dazzling totals. No hasty man should be assisted to come to Canada. What we accept naturally, we can probably handle, but we are not a gigantic work-house nor a reformatory for the training of the slum products of other lands.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

Monkeys Like Scrapping.

"Monkeys are in a class by themselves," said the circus man. "If one of them has red hair he is sure to be a cheeky scrapper. The best fighter is always the leader. They hang together and bow and scrape before the boss just like a good many people. Monkeys with red faces and flat heads will whip the life out of those smaller than they are, but will run like the wind when it comes to an even break. A monkey riot is a funny spectacle. Even in the same cage you will find groups herded together as if there was some class distinction and the lines were drawn tightly. If two of the big ones come together in a row the others generally stand off and let them have it out, but if any of the little ones get to scrapping then the father and mother are apt to mix in, and the next step is a general row. We separate them by turning on the hose and punish them by locking up the den so that they cannot get any peanuts from the crowd and hold back their meals. This plan puts them on their good behavior for awhile at least. The monkey likes to eat and likes to be noticed."

Slightly Mixed.

They had just set up housekeeping and were working on the plan of economy. The bathtub needed a coat of varnish. He promised to attend to it if she would order the varnish.

"You'll find the varnish in the closet with the groceries, dear," she said a day or so later, "and the can opener in the knife drawer."

He opened the can and, according to his contract, applied the coat of varnish and then left it to dry.

The soup for dinner that day had to be abandoned, for somehow it possessed a peculiar paint shop odor that was nauseating. After dinner he took her to inspect his work on the bathtub. Now that it had dried it had a certain unnatural appearance. The top and sides were streaked, and here and there little lumps clung to it.

"The man said that was the best varnish," she explained, taking up the can of varnish for an examination, "but—why, dear, you have varnished the bathtub with the ox tail soup!"

"Then it was the varnish we ate, dear," he added, horror stricken. —Lippincott's.

A Model Hotel "Boots."

It was in a Dublin hotel, and as I closed the bedroom door, says a writer in the Manchester Guardian, I noticed that the end of one of my boot laces was inside the room, the boot to which it was attached having been placed as usual outside. When I awoke next morning the boot lace end was still there, and I opened the door expecting to find that the boots had not been cleaned, but I was wrong. A very careful hotel servant, a very model among "boots," had found the lace tightly gripped by the door and rather than disturb me had carefully removed it from the lace holes and carried away the boot. Presently I heard a quiet noise outside the door. The model boots had brought my boots back again and was industriously relacing that one which he had unlaced.

Cheese in the Middle Ages.

Cheese must have been a rather dear or scarce article of food in 1502, for it is recorded in the "Black Books" of the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn that at Easter term, 1502, it was "agreed by the governors and benchers this term that if any one of the society shall hereafter cut cheese immoderately at the time of dinner or supper or shall give cheese to any servant or to any other or shall carry it away from the table at any time he shall pay 4 pence for each offense. The butlers of the society shall present such defaulters weekly under pain of expulsion from office."—Law Times.

Her Test.

"When a young man proposes you should always be careful and test his love," cautioned the conservative chaperon.

"But I go one better, auntie," twittered the pretty girl. "Do you see this tiny bottle?"

"Yes. Does it contain perfume?"

"No; it contains acid. I test the engagement ring."

Not Very Funny.

"I did my best to be entertaining," said the young man in a voice of sorrow.

"Did you succeed?"

"I'm afraid not. I recited Hamlet's soliloquy. She looked at me reproachfully for several seconds and then exclaimed, "I don't think that's very funny!"—London Telegraph.

His Conscience.

"He's forever prating about what his conscience tells him. What does his conscience tell him, anyway?"

"Apparently it usually tells him what awful sinners his neighbors are."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Where She Gets Her Ideas.

She—I wonder if you are just the kind of man I want. He—What kind of man do you want? She—I can hardly describe him to you. He—Don't try. What's the name of the book?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

To Hold Him.

Nan—That's a beautiful solitaire Dick gave you. I wonder if you know what a fickle young man he is? Fan—Indeed I do! That's why I made him give me such an expensive one.—Chicago Tribune.

A Bad Break.

"Our credit man made a bad break yesterday."

"What was it?"

"He told a dumb man that his word was as good as his bond."—Detroit Free Press.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

"Parading Out de People."

Pinkey, two boys strung their big catch on the same string. Passing a graveyard they entered the gate to divide the catch, dropping two fish just as they went inside the cemetery.

Passing, an aged negro heard the two boys: "I'll take this one, you that one; I this one, you that one; I this one, you that one," etc.

The negro listened in dismay and ran away as rapidly as his old legs could carry him. He met his negro minister, who called:

"Deacon, why you run in such terror?"

"Declare, parson, I been down yonder by de graveyard and over de fence heard de devil and de Lord parceling out de people atween 'em."

The parson laughed at the old man's fright and made him go back with him to the graveyard to convince him of his error.

The boys were still dividing—"You take that, I take this," etc. Finally one boy asked, "What you going to do with them two at the gate?"

This was more than parson or deacon could stand, and both ran pellmell, neither wishing to take any further chances, no matter what was going on just over the fence.—Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

Penguin Battles.

The penguin, a notable diver among sea birds, wins his mate by right of conquest. The male birds fight for the possession of the females. These curious birds have regular duel grounds, where relics of innumerable combats in the shape of feathers lie scattered about. In the center is the fighting arena, clear of all debris. The penguins' feathers and blubber form an efficient shield against their opponents' beaks, so the weapon used is the short flipper, the only wings the birds possess. The fight begins with the two combatants walking round each other waiting for an opportunity to grip. Once this is done the flippers come into play. The fighters shower blow after blow upon each other. There is no record as to how these fights end, but it is a safe supposition to say that they are seldom fatal. The force of the blow from a penguin's flipper is such that three or four of them will draw blood from the human hand.

How Models Make Pictures.

The artist gazed in rapture on "The Kiss," his latest picture.

"Do you grasp," he said, "the passionate grace of the girl's attitude, the warmth and the power wherewith her tense white arms draw the young man closer, ever closer? Well, I got that idea from my model, a shopgirl.

"But for my model's suggestion I'd have put the girl in a stiff, cold pose, and the picture would never have been the masterpiece it is. But my model pointed out to me the abandon wherewith a girl, whether of high or low station, gives herself up to a kiss' charm. She illustrated the thing, aided by a male model, a young medical student. Yes, she made my picture.

"The fact is, models make, with their valuable hints and suggestions, lots of pictures. There's many a masterpiece whose merit is due to the splendid pose that the model originated for the principal figure."—New Orleans

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Women's Curiosity.

"Women's curiosity," said Mr. Fletcher, "is a quality of mind beyond human understanding."

"Yes," said Mrs. Fletcher. "What made you think of that?"

"The foul actions of a woman that I saw downtown today. She followed a man ten blocks just to get to read a placard that was fastened to his back. She spotted him at Thirty-fourth street. That was really the end of her trip—I made that out from something she said to another woman who was too fat to join in the chase—but when she caught sight of that flaming red poster tied to the man's back her curiosity got the better of her and she set out after him. He led her quite a chase across town and downtown and back again, but she never weakened. She tagged faithfully along in his wake, and finally she got close enough to read that notice."

Mrs. Fletcher reflected a moment.

"What did it say?" she asked.

"It advised her to get her teeth pulled somewhere on Sixth avenue."

Mrs. Fletcher thought again.

"Where were you all the time she was trying to find that out?"

"Me?" said Fletcher. "Oh, I was following the woman. I wanted to see if she finally caught up with the man."—New York Times.

The Porcelain Secret.

The porcelain industry of Germany is comparatively young, says the Berlin Morgen Post, and its development was rapid. Although it is generally believed that the Chinese kept their processes of manufacture secret, Julius's translations of their voluminous encyclopedia show that this is not true. All who could have read the work might have known also the porcelain secret. But evidently no German fathomed the mechanical mystery until the apothecary's apprentice Boettger, 200 years ago, made the first German porcelain at Dresden. Some years before he had attracted attention by proclaiming the discovery of a method of changing base metal into gold. King Frederick I. gave him orders for the precious metal, which the sixteen-year-old inventor could not execute, and in fear he fled to Dresden and became a subject of King Augustus the Strong. While endeavoring to make gold he discovered the porcelain secret and inscribed his door thus: "Into a potter was changed by Almighty God a man who thought he could make gold."

A Puzzle in Figures.

Take any number of three different figures, as 421, under it place the same figures in reverse order, subtract the lesser number and you will find that the middle figure of the result is invariably 9. Why it is so is something that only the most learned mathematical schoolmaster explain. Here is our case worked out:

Taking any number, say	421
Reversing figures	124
Subtracting, we have	297
Further still, we can now assume this number 297 in the same way and add the two numbers and the result will always come 1089. Thus:
Taking	297
Reversing	792
Adding, we have	1089

Why should the answer always come out the same? Here's something for you to work over.

A Friend in Need.

A speaker in the recent Shropshire (England) election relates the following incident: One night he spoke in the poultry market at Whitchurch. The next morning a young man stopped him in the street and said:

"I was hoping you'd offer you last night."

The speaker expressed surprise at the necessity.

The young man continued his story: "I saw a young man come into the meeting with his coat pockets bulging out in a way that made me suspicious. Two of us followed him in. He stood at the back of the room, and we stood one on each side of him. Gently but firmly we pressed against him. There was a faint crackling sound of breaking eggs, and the man was most of action."

Arms, Legs and the Man.

How many of us have noticed that we walk with our arms as well as with our legs? Sitting on a grassy slope overlooking a seaside promenade I was struck by the mechanical swing of the arms of the stream of passersby—the right arm always keeping position with the left leg and the left arm with the right leg. By attempting to reverse the order of the swing I found that I had a tendency to progress like a crab, while the effort to keep them timed by the side was like the shutting off the steam from the engine. Arms and the man must be amended to arms, legs and the man!—London Chronicle.

Venice Too Wet For Him.

A woman who recently returned from a trip to Europe says wet weather hasn't bothered this country at all in comparison with what she saw abroad. She says that they ran into a town named Venice where the water covered every street, and you couldn't get anywhere except in boats. She added: "You bet we only stayed one day in that slosh."—Kansas City Star.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys surely point to weak Kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. It's deeper than Kidneys alone, in fact. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and trustful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully prosecuted.

I may, therefore, be permitted to appoint out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Benafort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of south Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, at Span Gaskin's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the loans for Number five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Otonabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough General Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world affluence and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 88 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 15 years of Conservative rule and in the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,038. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,703, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 39 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the lock[illegible] shoe and northern waters.

Thus, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of taking ment, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 220 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. Stratton.

Appetite Gone--Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter surely tried her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Waterloo, P.Q., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headaches. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfect. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring, vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old, and guaranteed to instil renewed activity and strength in every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

—Mrs. George N. Henderson, will receive at the parsonage, 302 Reid street, on Thursday, October 8th, and afterwards on the first and third Thursdays of the month.

—Mr. R. R. Jamieson, retired general superintendent of the C.P.R., will become vice-president and general manager of the Merchants & Calgary Fire Insurance Company.

—Mr. Philip Conway of the Buckley Factory, was at the meeting of the cheese board yesterday morning for the first time since he broke his arm, about five weeks ago.

—Mr. Jack Seymour, floor manager of the roller rink, has resigned his position and left for his home in Peterborough last evening. Jack will be greatly missed as he had many friends in town especially at the roller rink where he was very popular.—Lindsay Warder.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. With in 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

Wedding Bells

POPE—PICARD

A wedding of interest took place at St. Peter's cathedral yesterday morning at eight o'clock, when Miss Louisa Albina Picard, second eldest daughter of Mr. Joseph Picard, 105 Lock street, was married to Mr. Geo. Pope of Lindsay, and formerly of Peterborough. Rev. Father McColl was the officiating clergyman. Mr. Frank Pope of Peterborough, brother of the groom, was best man, and Miss Eugene Picard, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid. The bride received many handsome presents from her numerous friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Pope left on the 11.45 G.T.R. train for a honeymoon trip to Toronto and other points. They will take up their residence in Lindsay.

ROCH—SUTCLIFFE.

A marriage of unusual interest took place at St. John's church yesterday afternoon. The principals, Rev. Sydney J. Roch, M.A., rector of Melita, Man., and Amy Elizabeth Sutcliffe, eldest daughter of Rev. Charles Sutcliffe, vicar of Holy Trinity, Castlehall, Staleybridge, after an engagement of one year and an absence from each other of five years, came from points separated by 4,500 miles of distance—the bride coming from one of the oldest centers of modern civilization and Christianity, three thousand miles and the groom coming from one of the newest centers of civilization and Christianity, fifteen hundred miles to Peterborough to be married in one of the oldest English churches in the Dominion. The joining of hearts and hands across a thousand leagues of sea and half a thousand leagues of land suggests the union of the East and the West and the growing imperial community in religion and social life.

The ceremony was celebrated at half past one o'clock in St. John's by Rev. Charles Sutcliffe, father of the bride, assisted by Rev. Canon Davidson, rector. The bridesmaid was Miss Amy Kells, daughter of Mr. T. G. Kells of Millbrook. Mr. Horace L. Sutcliffe, steward to Miss Agnes Murray, New York City and brother of the bride, was best man, and the bride was given to be married by another brother, Mr. Reginald A. Sutcliffe, city. The wedding party consisted of the bride's mother, Mrs. Charles Sutcliffe; her sister-in-law, Mrs. Reginald Sutcliffe, and Mrs. J. C. Davidson.

While the bridal cortege was entering and taking their places, Mr. R. J. Davey, organist, performed Greig's "Bridal Music," and the Lohengrin bridal chorus, and as she Lohengrin bridal chorus, and as the party was leaving the church after the ceremony, Mendelssohn's wedding march and the hymn "Lead us, Heavenly Father," was sung during the service.

After the signing of the register the happy pair and the bridal party drove to the residence of Mr. Reginald A. Sutcliffe, 543 Gilmour street, where the wedding breakfast was served. The bride was favored with a numerous array of presents, from the congregation and members of the congregation of Holy Trinity and from personal friends in her native city. Numerous other presents from her husband's parishioners and personal friends in Melita, await her arrival there. After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs Roch took the afternoon Canadian Pacific express for Toronto, whence, after a few days' stay they will go to their new home in the West.

Obituary

MISS LIZZIE L. HORLAND.

A death that will cause much regret took place yesterday morning at five o'clock, when Miss Lizzie L. Horland passed away at the home of her mother, 25 Victoria avenue. Deceased was a daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Horland, and the late Lewis Horland and had been suffering for some time, having to return home from Toronto a few weeks ago. She is survived by two sisters, Miss Emma, of Peterborough, and Miss Martha, of Brantford, and three brothers, Jam s C., of Peterborough; Alfred, of Kamstock, Sask., and Lewis, of Calgary, Alta. The late Miss Horland was highly respected by a large number of friends and her death will be greatly regretted.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at three o'clock, from 25 Victoria avenue, to Little Lake cemetery. The funeral service will be conducted by Rev. R. A. Fogus.

MELVILLE M. MITCHELL.

The death occurred early yesterday morning at his late residence, 787 Water street, of Melville Milton Mitchell, after an illness extending over several months. He was in his twenty-first year. Last winter he contracted pleurisy which developed into tubercular trouble, resulting in his death. He was the youngest son of the late G. A. Mitchell. He was widely known and highly esteemed by all who knew him. The news of his death was received throughout the city with the profoundest regret.

Besides his mother, a brother and two sisters are left to mourn his loss. The brother is Mr. Sidney Mitchell, and the sisters are Mrs. Jinks and Miss R. T. Hounsell all residing in this city.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at three o'clock from the family residence, to the Little Lake cemetery.

Enthusiastic Meeting

at meetings of this kind it might be considered campaign flattery to allude to the importance of the farm and the farmer among the great factors of our national progress and achievement. He had no design to flatter, but rather to emphasize a fact that cannot be too thoroughly recognized, and especially amongst those who shape the laws and administer the affairs of the country that agriculture is the real backbone of this country and that there is no other interest or industry so important to its prosperity. Nowhere is this fact more keenly appreciated than among the bankers and manager if financial and industrial enterprises, and there was no topic affecting the interests they administered than "What will the harvest be?" And when we regard what government can do, and what the present government has accomplished by helpful and encouraging legislation and administration, to make the path of progress and the road to prosperity more easy and more satisfactory and more profitably for the farmer, we may be sure that the administration which pursues such a policy, will command the approval and support of every intelligent man engaged in any branch of agriculture. As the result of that wise policy the farmer of Peterborough today is able from the products he raises and through the markets that have been provided for him to meet all his needs and to have a surplus at his command.

In conclusion, Mr. Stratton said that the electors had an important duty to perform on October 26, when the people take into their own hands the sovereignty which belongs to them. It was for them to decide who should represent them. He hoped and believed that his past record, the attention that he had given to his public duties, and the measure of success which had attended his efforts on behalf of the people of Peterborough, would lead to a repetition of the confidence with which they had heretofore honored him. He had grown up among them, his life had been an open book to all, and he was satisfied to leave himself to their judgment. He had also and he had given hard knocks in politics but he had defied his opponents on leaving office, and he defied them now, to point to a single improper transaction or a singly wrongfully expended dollar in the administration of the department over which he had presided. He hoped they would on October 26 again extend to him their confidence as of old, and he could assure them they would never regret it.

Three rousing cheers were given for Hon. Mr. Stratton, three cheers for the ladies and three more for the King closed a most successful meeting.

Attended Funeral of Late Alex Rutherford

About fifty members of Orombec and Peterborough lodges, I.O.O.F., attended the funeral of the late Alex. Rutherford last evening. They met at the lodge room at five o'clock and proceeded in a body to the G.T.R. station, and upon the arrival of the 5.30 train, accompanied the remains to the Little Lake cemetery, where interment took place.

A Lazy Liver

May be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. It would be a stupid as well as savage thing to beat a weary or starved man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging, torpid liver it is a great mistake to lash it with strong drastic drugs. A torpid liver is but an indication of an ill-nourished, enfeebled body whose organs are weary with over work. Start with the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in working order and see how quickly your liver will become active. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of "liver trouble" by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood making glands, cleanses the system from poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs.

If you have bitter or bad taste in the morning, poor or variable appetite, coated tongue, foul breath, constipated or irregular bowels, feel weak, easily tired, despondent, frequent headaches, pain or distress in "small of back," gnawing or distressful feeling in stomach, perhaps nausea, "all gone" or "rising" in throat after eating, and kindred symptoms of weak stomach and torpid liver, no medicine will relieve you more promptly or cure you more thoroughly than Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Perhaps only a part of the above symptoms will be present at one time and yet point to torpid liver or biliousness and weak stomach. Avoid all hot bread and biscuits, griddle cakes and other indigestible food and take the "Golden Medical Discovery" regularly and stick to its use until you are vigorous and strong.

The "Discovery" is non-secret, non-alcoholic, is a glyceric extract of native medicinal roots with a full list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. Its ingredients are endorsed and extolled by the most eminent medical writers of the age and are recommended to cure the diseases for which it is advised.

Don't accept a substitute of unknown composition for this non-secret MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION.

New Telephone Books are Out

Yesterday the new telephone directories of the Bell Telephone were delivered to the subscribers. The new book indicates an increase of 65 telephones since the last issue of the directory six months ago. The Bell Telephone of Peterborough can now boast of having 1,014 subscribers, making a number that has to be written in four figures. The increase since the last directory has been very encouraging. A number of the sixty-five extra phones are located in the rural districts.

The officials of the Bell Telephone here desire to remind all subscribers to throw away the old books and use nothing but the new, as several numbers have been changed. Often mistakes occur through this neglect. The directories are supplied free of cost.

risks of war and accuses Austria of entering into a conspiracy with Bulgaria against Turkey.

"If Austria-Hungary persists in tearing up that part of the treaty of Berlin, which she dislikes," says the paper "Russia also will persist in tearing up the parts objectionable to her, in particular those provisions which relate to the Dardanelles."

This is the typical position taken by the English newspapers, which are greatly angered by what they call a conspiracy, because England and the King, by a recent warm telegram, have been sponsor for the Young Turk movement, and it is now felt that the government has been duped by Austria and Germany.

WON'T ADMIT INDEPENDENCE.

Neither the Times nor its colleagues propose a policy for the British Government, because they are awaiting the cue from the foreign office, which is consulting with France and Russia. As yet no course of action has been decided upon, beyond refusing to recognize Bulgaria's action.

Some People Compromise

When they think it is "too hard" to quit coffee at once and shift to straight Postum, they compromise the case by using Postum with a little coffee in it. Of course, that is not "Strictly business" and a person will not as quickly recover from coffee ails as if pure were used, but the compromise is better than to stick to the old coffee habit and continue to suffer. Gradually less coffee can be put into the brew and soon only Pure Postum is used. Then can be expected that the old aches and ails will disappear.

THIRTY YEARS

A Slave to Coffee.

Many persons do not realize that coffee drinking may become a powerful, enslaving habit.

They are not aware that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which ought never to be taken into the system except for certain diseases and then only when prescribed by the doctor.

The coffee habit grows on most users, and is more harmful to some than others. But a drug that acts upon the heart and nerves in the way caffeine does, is not without greater or less harm to all who drink coffee.

"For thirty years," writes a Washington housewife, "I have been a steady coffee drinker. I wanted it at every meal.

"But I would have sick headaches most of the day, and threw up my food. I really suffered awfully from coffee, yet thought I never could stop it.

"Then I heard how good Postum was for such cases, and began to use it. At first I did not care for Postum. I felt sleepy and had head ache. I soon found that this was because of the hold coffee had on me, for in about three days after I quit coffee and began to use Postum the headache left me, had no more nervousness and palpitation. In about a week I felt like a new woman.

"I have used Postum three years and when it is made according to directions (boiled 15 minutes)—it is as pleasant as coffee and don't hurt anyone. I ought to know for I was as fond of as anyone is likely to get from coffee drinking. Now I am well."

"There's a Reason."

STEAMER OTONABEE CARRIED 11,000 PASSENGERS THIS YEAR

On Twenty-Nine Special Excursion Trips—Many Moonlight Trips Not Included--A Very Satisfactory Season

After a very successful season the steamer Otonabee, has been laid up in the Ashburnham dry docks for the winter where she will also undergo repairs and put in shape again for next season. The Otonabee is the largest and finest boat that navigates the waters of the Trent Canal or Kawartha lakes. She is in fact the pride of the residents of the whole district and everyone would be glad to see the Otonabee Navigation Company make a lot of money as a reward for their courage and enterprise in furnishing such a boat for pleasure seekers. The Otonabee has been in commission for two seasons, and if the third season increases to the same extent as did the second year the boat will indeed have a rosie.

The navigation year is, on account of weather conditions, necessarily short. Beginning about the first of June until about the middle of September, is the best that can be figured on, but during those three months many thousands of people from Peterborough, and immediate vicinity as well as many from a distance avail themselves of the pleasure of a trip on the beautiful waters of the Trent Canal, and the lakes and rivers tributary thereto, and there is every reason to believe that the future seasons will surpass each other as they have in the past, so far as passenger traffic is concerned, and as the Trent canal is extended and the water stretches are completed the waterway as a pleasure resort is growing in popularity.

MANY EXCURSIONS.

The steamer Otonabee the past season was used entirely for excursion purposes, and the following is a list of those carried with a fairly accurate number of passengers carried;

May 23—The Salvation Army to Idylwyld, with 400.

June 9—Moonlight, Y.M.C.A., with 300.

June 10—Moonlight, Bricklayers and Stonemasons, with 350.

June 15—Charlotte street Methodist Sunday school, to Idylwild, with 300.

June 16—Knox church Sunday school to Idylwild, with 350.

June 22—A.F. & A.M., of Havelock, from Bobcaygeon to Fenelon Falls, with 350.

June 24—Woodmen of the World, to Idylwild, with 300.

June 25—Bethany Sunday school, to Mount Julian and Burleigh Falls, with 300.

July 1—George street church Bible class to Idylwild, with 500.

July 4—Bricklayers and Masons, to Idylwild, with 400.

July 6—Firemen and Band to Idylwild, with 450.

July 7—George street Methodist Sunday school, to Idylwild with 400.

July 8—St. John's Sunday school, to Stony Lake with 325.

July 10—Business Men's Association, to Idylwild with 250.

July 14—St. Luke's Sunday school, to Idylwild with 300.

July 28—Presbyterian church of Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon and Buckhorn, with 400.

July 29—Presbyterian church of Lakehurst, from Buckhorn to Sturgeon Point, with 300.

Aug. 4—Peterborough Band to Hastings, with 250.

Aug. 7—The Peter Hamilton Mfg. Co., to Idylwild with 450.

Aug. 10—Printers' Union to Idylwild, the excursion of the season, with at least 500.

Aug. 12—A.F. & A.M., of Lakehurst, to Idylwild with 400.

Aug. 14—Oddfellows of Havelock, to Fenelon Falls with 450.

Aug. 19—Holloway Methodist Sunday school to Belleville, to Idylwild with 400.

Aug. 20—Salvation Army Sunday school to Idylwild with 400.

Aug. 22—N.O.E. to Idylwild with 450.

Aug. 24—Peterborough Piccolo Band to Hastings with 450.

Aug. 26—Cold Springs Union Sunday school to Jubilee Point with 400.

Sept. 1—Gilmour Memorial church from Bridgenorth to Crowe's Landing with 450.

Sept. 7—Court Chemong, I.O.F., to Idylwild with 400.

In addition to these were the series of moonlight excursions run by the Peterborough Band down the river and which were very largely patronized.

This makes a total of 29 excursions, exclusive of the moonlight trips with at least 10925 passengers. The moonlight trips carried probably 2000 more.

Seventeen Fires with Only $68 Damage

Monthly Report of Fire Chief Howard--Good Results of Fire Brigade

Fire Chief Howard has completed his report on the number of fires in the city for the month of September. It appears that there were seventeen fires altogether and the total damage would not amount to more than $63.50 Does a well equipped fire department that is always ready pay? The early control of one fire will save the individual enough money to pay his taxes for many years.

More Interest in the North West

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—The high grade and volume of the crop this year has been the means of further increasing the number of inquiries received by boards of trade throughout Western Canada, from all over the United States and Eastern Canada, asking for information in connection with openings for manufacturing and commercial business.

Real estate has been more active and several large deals in farm and city property are reported through the Western Canadian Real Estate Association here, an organization that practically covers the realty interests from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Coast.

A few of the more important sales were: 5,00 acres, Southern Alberta, to an American syndicate for $54,000; the Lansdowne Hotel at Regina, for $100,000, sold by Mr. Alex. Bell, who purchased the property less than one year ago for $50,000. In Edmonton, 100 feet near Edmonton Club, sold for $35,000, and in Winnipeg an 80-foot frontage on Donald street has been sold for $15,600.

Canadian Club Met Last Night

Officers will be Elected on October 29—Address will be Given

The adjourned annual meeting of the Canadian Club was again adjourned. The proper time for the annual meeting is the last Thursday night in April, and the nominating committee had met and prepared its report. When the meeting was arrived the members were all tied up in politics and only two turned up, and no meeting has been held since.

Last night a dozen or more turned up and in the absence of the president, Mr. F. D. Kerr, the chair was taken by Mr. R. E. Wood, Secretary H. R. H. Kenner read the minutes of the previous meetings, and also the report of the first nominating committee. This report could not be accepted as several changes had to be made.

Rev. Canon Davidson moved and Mr. Dodds seconded a motion appointing Messrs. F. D. Kerr, T. F. Matthews, Dr. Halliday and Dr. Cameron, a nominating committee to select the officers and report to the next meeting—Carried.

Rev. Canon Davidson suggested that a program be arranged for next meeting night in addition to the election of officers. He suggested that local men be asked to give addresses.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner then moved that Rev. Canon Davidson and Mr. T. F. Matthews give an address on their travels abroad the past summer. Mr. Dodds seconded the motion, and it carried.

The meeting then adjourned until Thursday night, Oct. 29th. This will be after the election and it was thought that a full attendance would be present.

A vote of thanks was moved by Rev. Canon Davidson, and seconded by Mr. T. F. Matthews, to the retiring officers of the club who had made the first year a most successful one.

Daly Will Meet Burns at 135 Pounds

Archie Seymour, manager for Corney Burns, got a letter from Tom Daly of Brantford, yesterday, stating that Daly had posted his $25 forfeit, and was willing to meet Burns at 135 pounds, but he stated emphatically that he would not enter the ring if Burns was over the weight. Corney says he will get down to 135 all right, and that he will be in such shape that he will win the bout hands down, as go 15 rounds.

The Burns-Daly contest will be pulled off in Brock street rink on the evening of Nov. 6th, and will be a good drawing card. Both men are clever boxers and the game is one which is upheld by all lovers of manly sport, including a great many prominent theologians.

Another feature of the evening will be the wrestling match between Harry Burridge and Fitzpatrick for $100 a side, the best two falls in three.

TIRELESS COOKER POPULAR WITH THE PETERBORO LADIES

Successful Demonstration by Miss Johnston at Y. W. C. A.—Large Attendance—Picnic Table a Feature—Classes Announced

The last of the free demonstrations given by Miss Johnston at the Y.W.C.A. last night, was a decided success. The attendance was the largest this season, and everything passed over very satisfactorily. Miss Johnston demonstrated the possibilities of the fireless cooker, and had three on exhibition. Mrs. Roger, who made her own at a cost of about 30 cents, had it on exhibition along with one sent by Mrs. Burnett, and one by the Beat Stove Company. Miss Johnston boiled some rice, made a lamb stew, and baked an apple pie in the cookers. These were afterwards served to the ladies present, and those who had the pleasure of tasting them state they were fine, especially the apple pie.

There was also a picnic table covered with sandwiches, cakes, scones, etc., and these were sold, bringing in considerable funds.

The classes were then announced as follows;

Monday, from 7.30 to 9.30 p.m.

Tuesday, from 9.30 to 11.30 a.m.

Superior cooking on Tuesday afternoons. This class is for those desirous of learning to make fancy dishes.

Wednesday afternoon is for the juniors who will be taught all kinds of plain cooking.

Thursday—Dietetic cooking.

Saturday evening—Camp cooking. The young men as well as the young ladies are invited to take part in this class.

Child Died of Neglect, Buried in Back Yard in Dysart Township

County Constable N. S. Smith, of Donald Station, was in town today, and is the authority for the story of the death of an infant in Dysart township, Haliburton, by neglect and starvation early in the week.

The father of the infant is Edward Lindsay, who works at the Wood Product Co., at Donald, in Dysart. The constable heard of the baby's death from several sources, and he communicated with Dr. Giles, coroner, of Haliburton. The two went to Lindsay's home and made enquiries regarding the infant's death. The father stated that the child had died of inflammation, but he did not secure the attendance of any doctor. It had been buried in the woods behind the house shortly after its death.

The constable and the coroner raised the body and an autopsy was held.

Dr. Giles pronounced death to be due to starvation and neglect. The body of the child was taken to Gelert where proper interment took place.

The child was two months, sixteen days old, and its death caused considerable feeling in the neighborhood. The parents live on the shore of Coughlin's lake, just beside the Dosco old works.

No action has been taken by the police yet. Constable Smith having jurisdiction in Victoria county alone.—Lindsay Warder.

From Office Boy to a Multi Millionaire

Giovanna Morosini, multi-millionaire, and long a pillar of New York finance, died recently at his luxurious home on the Hudson River at the ripe age of seventy-six.

His name occupies a prominent place in the list of self-made men. Born at Venice he was sent to school at the famed city of the Adriatic at the age of four, his tutor being Cavaliani, one of Napoleon's soldiers. Little wonder that he was early fired with the martial spirit, and was in the Grimani battalion when the Austrailans besieged Malghera.

The siege over, he emigrated to Boston, and went thence to New York. For a time he served before the mast on vessels plying between New York and Havana.

Signor Morosini joined Garibaldi in his trip on the Commonwealth to London and Genoa in 1854. Upon his return in the same year he worked as an office boy for the Erie Railway Company. Within four years he became auditor to the company, and was earning $2,000 a year.

In 1860, Morosini met Jay Gould and they become the closest friends. It was to Jay Gould that he owed the foundation of his fortune. They entered into partnership and remained so until 1886, when both retired from active business. He was Mr. Gould's right-hand man in organizing most of that millionaire's railroad combinations.

He married Miss Julia Chanoe in 1851, and was father of two sons and two daughters.

These girls were singularly handsome and each in turn enjoyed a peculiar notoriety. The elder was Victoria, who in 1884 ran off with the coachman to Europe. She divorced him, and created a nine days' sensation in New York by appearing on the stage in several light operas. Afterwards she entered a convent.

The other daughter, Giulia, was guarded so jealously by the father that all suitors were frightened off the premises. She has the reputation of being the most gorgeously gowned woman in America, and for years has been quite the most conspicuous figure at the horse show and the gala performances at the Grand Opera. She incurred the indignant wrath of Mrs. Rose Pastor-Stokes by declaring two years ago that no woman could dress well on less than $40,000 a year, and she frankly admitted that her dresses for the six days of the horse show in 1905 cost over $30,000.

When Mrs. Stokes publicly reproached her with such flaunting extravagance, she reminded that popular philanthropist that her donations were made in New York, and gave employment to hundreds of poor girls. The newspapermen at the time asked Signor Morosini if the story were true. He smiled, and observed that if a hundred thousand dollars were all her frocks cost, she was well within her allowance.

This favorite daughter still maintains extensive stables, and is one of the best horsewomen in New York. She is generously personified. Sometimes the spirit moves her, and she may be seen on the East Side distributing hundreds of boxes of sweets to the little children of the foreign population.

Some years ago her father erected a magnificent mausoleum in Woodlawn cemetery, where his body will rest, but that he had not forgotten his old Italy was proved by his contribution of $5,000 six years ago to help rebuild the Campanile at Venice.

Saw Street Car for First Time

Winnipeg often entertains prominent financial heads, globe trotters, and others from the crowded centres of the United States and Europe, but not often is there coming to the city such a visitor as James Bagge, of Norway House in the Hudson's Bay district, who had the pleasure of seeing a street car for the first time last week.

He has been constantly stationed in the north for the past 32 years and in his position as mate of a schooner plying between Churchill and York Factory or the Hudson's Bay, Mr. Bagge was able to speak authoritatively on the possibilities of the new Hudson's Bay route.

He said: "Navigation is open on the average from June to November, and large steamers that will pass the Straits could reach Fort Churchill much later in the season, as they could easily break through the early ice that occurs after November first."

He spoke of the excellent harbor there and that the going in of the surveyors on the new Hudson's Bay railway was causing much comment in the north country.

Mr. Stratton Holds a Splendid Meeting at Young's Point

There was a large gathering of the electors of Smith, at Young's Point on Wednesday evening, to meet Mr. J. R. Stratton and his friends. The hall was filled, a large number of ladies being present.

Mr. Alex. Kearney was voted to the chair, and after addresses by Messrs Kerr and O'Connell, Mr. Stratton made an extended and vigour address, which he concluded by saying that these conditions of prosperity in which they shared did not just happen. They were brought about by the constructive ability of the premier and his advisers, guided by an earnest desire to advance the welfare and promote the fortunes of the Canadian people. It was the duty of a member to do something for those who returned him to parliament. He could go to Ottawa and content himself with drawing a sessional indemnity for warming a chair in the house, but that was not his (the speaker's) conception of the duty of their member in parliament. He wanted to see something going on that would be of benefit to the people of Peterborough, and that was the reason and the only reason why he wanted to represent their interest. There were lots of things to find fault with. It was easy to knock down. He specified local improvements the construction of which he would insist upon if elected which would improve conditions in and advance the welfare of the county, and asked them not to be led astray by side issues that would be presented by the other side, and to go to the polls as one man and vote for him. The development of this great country under guidance of the man at the head of the nation, the man of courage, whose faith was firm in the destiny of this country as the future home of many millions of prosperous and loyal subjects of the King, was most important to our future.

What would the people of Europe think of Canada, the people among whom Mr. Laurier's personal efforts have placed this country so high, and who by his means are pouring their millions into Canada for investment and use, if this false cry shall obtain a hearing with the people of Canada? It would be a staggering blow not only to our reputation as a nation of advanced intelligence, but more seriously to our financial credit abroad.

Mr. Stratton closed with an appeal to his friends to leave no stone unturned to vote up a handsome majority on October 26.

A vote of thanks was extended to the chairman, and Mr. Kearney in acknowledging it spoke of Mr. Stratton's long connection with and long services to the riding. Three cheers were given for the ladies, for J. R. Stratton, and for the King.

The People Are Well Pleased

Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, has been receiving all kinds of congratulations upon the decision of the Board of Works to build the George street sidewalk from J. J. Turner & Co's factory south to the C.P.R. station. The work is well underway now, and the many citizens who travel that way can begin to see a great improvement in the appearance of the street.

Explosion of Quaker Oats Co's. Elevator

Richford, Vt., Oct. 7.—With a concussion shook the entire village a large grain elevator, having a capacity of 500,000 bushels, exploded late today, causing the death of 11 workmen and two women, who were walking in the immediate vicinity.

The explosion blew off the entire roof of the big building, scattering timbers in all directions, and almost instantly flames burst out over the whole structure.

Twenty-one men were employed in the building. Eleven of these perished.

Mrs. John Jellfore, who was walking with a companion along the Canadian Pacific Railroad track, close to the elevator, was burned to death, and an unknown woman who was with her was burned so seriously that she died tonight.

The elevator was owned jointly by the Canadian Pacific and Boston and Maine railroads, and was operted by the Quaker Oats Co. of Chicago. It was 150 feet in height, 130 feet long and 90 feet wide.

The exact amount of grain which it contained could not be learned tonight, but it is known that the quantity was very large.

So quickly did the flames, which are supposed to have started by spontaneous combustion in the dry dust of the grain, extend throughout the building that the limited fire apparatus of the village was of no avail. Nothing could be done to prevent the entire destruction of the elevator and its valuable contents.

The heat set fire to a flour mill near the elevator and the shed, together with 75 freight cars, which were standing near it, were burned. Every building in the village was shaken as if by an earthquake when the explosion occurred and many people who were on the streets near the elevator were thrown to the ground with considerable violence.

Late tonight the fire was still burning, but no other property was threatened.

The wreckage from the explosion and fire blocked the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway completely for hours, so that it was necessary to make a detour by way of Sherbrooke, Que.

The total loss is estimated at $400,000.

The Astronomical Society Met Last Night

There was a good attendance at the first meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society in St. Paul's school room last night. Rev. Dr. Marsh, the president, gave a very interesting address on "A Night in the Skies," which was illustrated with lime-light views. The society has a very interesting program arranged for the coming season. Many well-known and prominent students of this fascinating subject will visit the city and give lectures on different subjects. The next meeting will in all probability be held in the room set apart for the society's use in the Collegiate Institute.

100 per Cent. profit, Monthly, for Years

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half-miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

No Ball Game on Saturday--St. Andrew's Unable To Make Connections

There will be no baseball game tomorrow afternoon. St. Andrew's of Toronto, played in Palmerston yesterday and will play again today, and they claim they can get no train connections to land them here in time for Saturday afternoon, Corney Burns received word over the 'phone last night. The news will be a great disappointment to all the local fans who were looking forward to seeing one of the greatest ball games ever played here.

The local team is in the best of shape, and were determined to win Saturday's game, and also to annex the championship of Ontario.

Since the ward of St. Andrew's decision not to come there has been a very pronounced feeling towards cutting out further attempts to bring about the final games, and it is not likely that the all-star aggregation from Hog Town will be seen again this season. As things stand now Peterborough can claim the championship as they defeated the St. Andrew's a couple of weeks ago.

Forty Thousand People Saw the Cubs Defeat the Giants

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 8—The practice of the visitors was interrupted by the ringing of the bell, and, although they were supposed to have 15 minutes for this work, Pitcher McGinnity of the local team went to the plate and started to bat a ball which was pitched by Overall, Manager Chance asked McGinnity to desist, but the New York player replied by shoving his elbow into Chance's chest. The police then interfered and averted any trouble from the players, who rushed up and surrounded the men at the plate. After a couple of minutes' argument the visiting players moved away to their own bench, and the New York team took their place on the diamond and began warming up.

In a few minutes McGraw's men relinquished the diamond and the visitors resumed practice. As Manager Chance was going to first base he shouted over to where McGraw was sitting on the bench: "That was a small piece of business.

The crowd is ready for anything, evidently. It is apparently in an inflammable condition.

Ground rules agreed on. A hit into the crowd good for two bases, and one base allowed for overthrow.

THE BALKAN SITUATION

It is not so much the dropping of a match that is dangerous as its falling amongst inflammable material. If the condition of Europe were truly pacific, the declaration of Bulgarian independence would fall upon interested, but not alarmed ears. But the tension is great in Europe; and every jar creates a semi-panic. Through the clouds that cap the Balkans, people are peering to make out the features of mightier war lords, who are thought by the timid to be ever manoeuvring to get a "strangle hold" on each other.

The most dangerous move is undoubtedly that the declaration at Tirnovo, but the demand of Austria that it be allowed to annex Bosnia and Herzegovina. This gives a first class power a definite object on upsetting the status quo. Behind Austria, it is presumed that Germany stands, probably very glad, indeed to give its ally some tangible reason for helping it to break through the ring of "isolation" which Britain and France are accused of endeavoring to raise around it. Austria has hitherto had little to gain out of the German alliance but security from German attack. Italy, on the other hand, has been guaranteed by it against any attempt by Austria to recover its old footing in the north of the peninsula. So Austria has really been hampered by the alliance while receiving precious little in return.

Now, however, it is to be permitted to annex two Turkish provinces. The fact that Prince Ferdinand came from a conference with the Austrian emperor at Buda-Pesth to make his declaration of independence would appear to indicate that Austria is encouraging this step with a view to creating the necessary confusion during which it can "get away" with the two coveted provinces. Usually Bulgaria is afraid of Austria and dependent on Russia. Now Russia will probably be found with Britain and France endeavoring to at least minimize the results Bulgaria's precipitate action which is tantamount to saying that Russia would have counselled patience when Austria advised boldness.

Russia would be ready enough to tear up the Berlin treaty if it thought that it could then get to the Bosphorus. Hitherto its road to Constantinople has been blocked chiefly by Britain; but, if Britain no longer fears Russian intrigue against India, it is quite within the possibilities that she might be willing to see her at the entrance to the Black Sea, provided trade guarantees were given. Germany, on the other hand, has been regarded as anxious to become the chief friend of Turkey herself; and, in that role, she would be bound to defend Turkish right to the control of its own waters. But possibly Germany's friendship was with the old regime in Turkey only, and not with the Young Turks to whose support the British government came so promptly. Yet, whatever anybody else may do the Young Turks are bound to defend the integrity of their own territory; and to even speak calmly of the appearance of the Russians on the Dardanelles would probably be to seal their fate with the Turkish people. The Turks would probably prefer an ill-governed country to no country at all.

The whole situation is exceedingly complicated; and, if a conference of the powers is held over it, we will see some intricate and interesting manoeuvring. The only power which seems to have a definite, straight-through policy is Austria; and Austria is in a position to bring more pressure on the Balkan region than any other power, except possibly Russia. The effect of this disturbance on the Turkish revolution cannot be measured. It depends upon how deep a hold it has amongst the people and how sincerely the army is attached to it. If it can survive this strain, its permanence need no longer be doubted. The feeling, however, that war must necessarily overthrow the revolution possibly loses sight of the fact that it is a military revolution, that it was made by the army and that to increase the power of the army is to strengthen the revolutionary forces. Probably some who think this are misled by the position in other countries.

EDITORIAL NOTES

We believe it will be conceded by any reasonable person that an elevation of the tone of political disputes would be an advantage not to the country, but to the contending parties themselves, and would add to the dignity and the influence of political life. It is degrading to national self-respect to regard every man who seeks political preferment as a mere sordid self-seeker animated not by patriotism but by personal interest, and it not only diminishes a proper and desirable regard for authority, but it cripples the usefulness of patriotic effort. The ambition of the citizen, of whatever party, to represent his fellow men in parliament, and to have a share in the making of laws and moulding the destinies of his country, is an honorable and a patriotic aspiration, and while in the nature of things in every instance it cannot be satisfied, yet it is to be regarded with consideration and treated with respect. We believe that the number of men who are engaged in public life, who are actuated by impure or improper motives, is infinitesimally small, and that the average public man, no matter what his party, or the political principles of his preference, aims honestly for the advancement of the welfare of his country. The politician who stoops to introduce the element of scandal, if imputation and innuendo, into his contention against an opponent, shows in this the weakness of his own cause, or the want of confidence in it, and as a rule finds the use of such ignoble weapons a source of loss of public esteem, and of injury to any cause in whose behalf they were put forward. There is among our people an inherent and distinguishing characteristic of old-fashioned British fair play; a disposition to estimate men by their virtues, rather than by their frailties; to follow the suggestions of charity rather than of malice; to be, as the poet says;—

"To our faults a little blind,
And to our virtues ever kind."

Moreover, there is a shrewd and discriminating common sense, which recognizes that "suspicion haunts the guilty mind," and which is apt to take with a large accompaniment of salt, injurious accusations whose personal or political animus is manifest. Let us hope that in the progress of the present campaign in Peterborough, there will be no unworthy element introduced, and that the battle will be characterized by no incident liable to create animosities at variance with the welfare and reputation of our people. It is a pleasant experience for the political candidate to succeed in achieving the accomplishment of his ambition, and though less palatable, may be the sensations of the loser, the man who wages an honorable fight and proves that he can lose like a gentleman, with dignity and without unworthy rancor, will always command public respect, and as a rule at some future day, will find his time of popular recognition and successful aspiration. And such a failure is a prouder and a more admirable thing than any success achieved by resort to unworthy means.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. With in 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

Gregory's Fortune.

By Barry Pratton.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

The candles in the thousands of Japanese lanterns which flooded the lawn with their soft light were burning low. Here and there one would sputter uncertainly and then go out, leaving a break in the long lines of various colored illumination.

The orchestra in its palm bordered pavilion played a final selection, after which the musicians put their instruments in the cases with businesslike finality. The crowd which an hour earlier had fairly swarmed the place was now thinning out to a few scattered groups. Already the gayly costumed young ladies at the various booths were beginning to put away their remaining wares, yawning openly as they wearily took account of stock and compared notes on the sales they had made.

The annual bazaar for the Home For Incurables always came to just such a stereotyped, successful ending.

Quite apart from the other loiterers, on a rustic bench beneath a towering maple, Peter Gregory watched the proceedings about him the while he smoked a contemplative cigarette. He had done his duty nobly. He had taken the many booths in order, permitting himself to be swindled at each and making prodigal purchases of useless things, which he promptly gave away.

One booth only he had not visited, and that was the one where, for the amazingly small sum of $1, you could have your horoscope cast, your past read and your future forecast by "Mlle. Nauro, Matchless Egyptian Seer, First Appearance In America," if one were to believe the lurid poster just outside of the flap of the Graham children's lawn tent.

Gregory glanced at the tent in question and puffed somewhat faster at the cigarette, as if he were endeavoring to steel his nerves for an ordeal. For certain reasons he had waited to have his fortune told until the fortune teller should be quite alone. Even as he looked two stout, middle aged women, accompanied by a prosperous looking man, came laughingly out of the tent and made their way toward the street. Behind them Mlle. Nauro stood in the tent's entrance looking across the grounds.

"YOU HAVE A RIVAL," SAID SHE.

Gregory tossed the cigarette aside, got to his feet and took a long breath. Then he stalked sedately to the fortune teller's booth and removed his hat in a deferential salute.

"Am I too late to consult the future?" he asked.

The young woman before him smiled rather wearily, but with a certain well simulated professional welcome. She was a tall young woman, with a superb figure. Her blue eyes twinkled merrily. Her face was dyed an oriental tint with grease paint, and her lips were very red from the same reason. From beneath the dark wig that covered her head a single lock of bland hair strayed out rebelliously.

"You are rather late," she said, "but perhaps we can manage your future, or at least a part of it, before all the lights go out. Will you please come into the tent? Will you have it by the palm or the cards?" she asked as she seated herself before a small table gay with bright paper and tinsel.

"The cards, if you please. I think them much more reliable," said he gravely as he sat down opposite her.

She produced a deck of cards and pushed them toward him.

"Cut them, if you will," said she.

Gregory split the deck, and the girl turned the cards face up.

"Ah," she murmured as the deuce of hearts was displayed, "you are in love —very much in love!"

"Admitted," said he quickly.

He looked at her with such concentration that her eyes fell, and in her flurry she dropped some of the cards. Gregory picked them up and returned them to the table.

For a moment she manipulated the deck; then she turned on to the table the jack of diamonds.

"You have a rival," said she, "a big, light man. He is very rich." And she laid the ten of diamonds beside the jack.

"Right again," said Gregory. "Miss Nauro, your insight or the cards, whichever it is, is positively uncanny. Now tell me more about the lady, please. Does she favor me or my rival?"

There was more manipulating of the deck, more cutting by Gregory, and the girl looked keenly at a card in her hand.

"Which does she seem to favor?" Gregory asked, leaning forward.

"You," the girl said simply.

With a sudden, swift movement Gregory caught one of the girl's hands in his own, but she drew it away, not without a certain hauteur.

"This is only according to the cards, please remember," she said in a low voice.

"Oh!" said Gregory contritely. "But give me, I thought—that is, I hoped"—

"And according to the cards," said the girl hurriedly in a very evident effort to cover her embarrassment, "the lady whom you love is dark."

She pushed the queen of clubs toward him.

For a long time Gregory looked at her steadily. Then a hint of a smile curved the corners of his mouth.

"Of course this is all according to the cards," he suggested.

There was a long pause.

"Not wholly," the girl confessed, her face turned from him.

"To what, then, are we indebted for the rest of it?" he asked.

"Oh, to—to intuition and—and to insight."

Gregory laughed outright. It was a ringing, contagious laugh. He caught up the queen of clubs and sealed her fate out on to the lawn.

"Exit the dark lady," he said. "There never was one. The girl I—the girl who is everything to me is not dark," he ended, looking meaningly at the one blond lock that crept from beneath the wig.

The girl arose in some confusion.

"I'm—I'm very much afraid I can't tell you any more about the future," said she. "I think we'd best consider this sitting ended."

"Oh, no, indeed," Gregory declared pleasantly. "There's a lot more to be settled yet. That rival, for instance—how about him? What shall we do with him?"

There was a long silence.

"We've got to do something about the rival," Gregory maintained.

The girl picked up the jack of diamonds and the ten spot with it.

"If it's not the dark lady," she said in a very low voice, "the rival doesn't count—neither he nor his riches."

She tore the two cards in pieces and tossed them from her. In an instant Gregory was on his feet.

"Violet!" he cried. "Violet, you mean"—

"It was the cards," she said feebly.

"It was not," he declared flatly, springing to her side.

A half hour later as Gregory was leaving the grounds he encountered Tom Briggs.

"Going to take the car home, Peter?" the latter inquired, with a mystifying chuckle.

"Certainly," said Gregory. "What is there so funny about that?"

"Nothing," said Briggs, with another covert gurgle, "nothing whatever, only, Peter, as an old and trusted friend, I'd advise you to wash that bit of carmine paint off your chin before you go."

Value of an Automaton Face.

"When I first came to New York," confessed a girl art student, "I thought all the women had regular putty faces. It seemed to me I never saw such blank walls of expressionless faces. I would get into a street car and look about me and could not detect any sign that any one else knew I existed. Women looked right through me as if I were a pane of window glass. I soon found out, however, that an expressionless face is a woman's protection. It is not that New York women cannot look bright and interested; it is because they dare not show any friendliness in public. When I first came, being from a smaller city where every one knows every one else, I would get on a car in a lively manner, look about me, smile and study the people, just as I would do at home. I soon saw men returning my friendly looks with disagreeable stares. They naturally thought I was trying to start a flirtation. Several times I was followed as a penalty for my too interested manner, and I began to adopt the New York way. Now I go in many parts of the city acting as near like an automaton as I can, seeing no one, never expressing any interest or emotion in my face, and have learned the secret of going about this big city unmolested."—New York Times.

Poverty and Luxury.

Poverty and luxury—these are the diseases of our industrial regime, to the cure of which the Socialists offer their ineffectual remedy—ineffectual since the population of the United States is made up of 80,000,000 individuals, some of whom will be forever on the verge of bankruptcy, however great their income, and some frugal and always carrying their account on the right side of the balance sheet, however small their annual allotment of wealth.

Poverty and luxury are twin diseases sapping the life of society, the one destroying ambition by withholding sufficient nourishment to the body, the other rendering men worthless to society by a superabundance of the good things of life. Poverty is a disease not indigenous to our American soil. It is a plague brought in by immigrant ships from wormout Europe, and the patients are cured here by the thousands. So long as there remains an uncultivated acre of land anywhere in the Union there is no real cause for poverty nor any excuse for luxury while a foot of land is undeveloped.—J. T. Lincoln in Atlantic.

Quiet.

Patience—Did you have a quiet time up in the country?

Patrice—Oh, yes. You see, our mother parrot had just died and the phonograph was out of order!

Preparation.

Guest—So your fellow keeper Page is going to be married, is he? Gamekeeper—Aye, sir, that-a-be. He war prayed for in church four the second time Sunday laast.—London Mail.

Raising the Ante.

Applying for a divorce, an old Georgia negro said to the judge: "Hit only cost me a string or fish ter git married, jedge, but, please God, I'd give a whale ter git rid er her."

Wanted the Earth.

Browne—Did you ever see a man who really wanted the earth? Towne—Oh, yes. Browne—Who was he? Towne—A first trip passenger on an ocean liner.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-on's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

Queer Wedding Effigy.

There is a curious custom still prevalent in the Bellary district of India in connection with the wedding ceremonies among certain Brahman families. Just prior to the close of the feasting a hideous effigy of a male figure, fantastically robed in rags, supposed to represent the bridegroom's father, is carried along the streets in procession under the shade of a sieve adorned with tassels of onions and margosa leaves. Every few yards during the procession the feet of the effigy have to be reverently washed and its forehead decorated with a caste mark by its living spouse, the bridegroom's mother. The bridegroom's other female relations have several mock attentions paid to them by the women of the bride's party.—St. James' Gazette.

Restaurant Affiliation.

The waiter in the light lunch cafe looked expectantly at the first of five men who had just entered.

"Bring me a coffee cake and a cup of coffee," ordered the first man.

"I'll take some milk biscuit and a glass of milk," said the second.

"Tea buns and a cup of tea, please," remarked the third.

"A piece of cocoanut pie and a cup of cocoa," said the fourth.

The waiter passed on to the fifth man.

"Don't say it, don't say it!" he pleaded. "I know what you want. You want a slice of chocolate cake and a cup of chocolate."

"No; I do not," protested the fifth man. "I want a plate of ice cream and a glass of ice water."—Judge's Library.

An Odd Legacy.

Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Jefferson family of actors, was remembered curiously in the will of Weston, who was himself an esteemed member of Garrick's company. Weston's will contained this item:

"I have played under the management of Mr. Jefferson at Richmond and received from him every politeness. I therefore leave him all my stock of prudence, it being the only good quality I think he stands in need of."

Not So Blind.

"Miranda, I want to ask you to marry me and to tell me"—

"Oh, George, this is so sudden!"

—"to tell me what data you and your mother have decided on for our wedding."—Brooklyn Life.

Publicity.

"'Twas in the newspaper, and all the world now knows it," is the motto of a leading advertising agency.

The very truth hath a color from the disposition of the believer.—Eliot.

Poor Board.

"I see," said Mrs. Starvem, "that a certain scientist claims we'll soon get a palatable food from wood"—

"Well," growled the cranky boarder, "it seems impossible to get it out of board."—Philadelphia Press.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

His Own People.

The negro blood wherever it is, declares Ray Stannard Baker in American Magazine, supplies an element of light heartedness which will not be wholly crushed. In illustration he tells this story of a very light mulatto of Tennessee:

A number of years ago it came to him suddenly one day that he was white enough to pass anywhere for white, and he acted instantly on the inspiration. He went to Memphis and bought a first class ticket on a Mississippi river boat to Cincinnati. No one suspected that he was colored. He sat at the table with white people and even occupied a stateroom with a white man. At first, he said, he could hardly restrain his exultation, but after a time, although he associated with the white men, he began to be lonesome.

"It grew colder and colder," he said.

In the evening he sat on the upper deck, and as he looked over the railing he could see down below the negro passengers and deck hands talking and laughing. After a time when it grew darker they began to sing the inimitable negro songs.

"That finished me," he said. "I got up and went downstairs and took my place among them. I've been a negro ever since."

The Elder Robert Fulton.

Robert Fulton was born at Little Britain, Lancaster county, Pa., Nov. 14, 1765. His biographers have called him "a self made man" and have made but brief reference to his parentage. It is noteworthy that his father, the senior Robert Fulton, in a failure to leave financial patrimony to his children has not been accorded the mention of other achievements, not slight in those primitive days. His ancestors crossed from Scotland to Ireland prior to the time of Cromwell. From Kilkenny, Ireland, the Fulton family came to America before the year 1735. The senior Robert Fulton was among the prominent men of Lancaster, his name having been on record upon all the town organizations which existed at that period. He was a founder of the Presbyterian church, the secretary of the Union Fire company and a charter member of the Juliana library of Lancaster, the third library established in the American colonies.—Century.

The Fourmilion.

"In the Sahara," said an explorer, "there is a little insect that throws sand, and its volleys slay. They call it the fourmilion. The fourmilion digs itself a funnel shaped hole of the circumference of a silver dollar. It lies hidden and watchful in the bottom of this hole, and when a spider or ant or beetle comes cautiously prospecting down the steep and slippery sides the inhospitable fourmilion launches upon its guest volley after volley of sand—a hail of stinging sand so abundant, so suffocating, so blinding that the visitor loses his head. He rolls unconscious for the ounce to the bottom of the hole, and the fourmilion calmly dismembers him before he has time to come to himself again and puts him in the larder for the next meal."

Seems but to Die.

The talipot palm (Corypha umbraculifera) of Ceylon, whose leaves are put to such numerous uses by the Cingalese, bears fruit but once during its life. This elegant tree measures about ten feet round the trunk and attains a height of about 180 feet. The flowers, the appearance of which presages death to the tree, are inclosed in a tall spathe which bursts with a loud report, disclosing a huge plume of beautiful blossom. The inflorescence is succeeded by equally conspicuous bunches of fruit. When these have ripened the tree withers rapidly and in the course of a fortnight may be seen prostrate and decaying on the spot it adorned.

He Might Have Married.

Mits-Greene Halleck never married, yet, as Mr. Howe reminds us in his American Bookman, he could not have been without attractions, for a certain superior lady is reported to have declared:

"If I were on my way to church to be married, yes, even if I were walking up the aisle, and Halleck were to offer himself, I'd leave the man I had promised to marry and take him."

To this perhaps should be joined his epigram, written for a young lady who had asked for his autograph:

There wanted but this drop to all
The witless poet's cup of fame.
Hurrah! There lives a lady still
Willing to take his name.

Playing to the Cook.

Mr. Subberton (yelling to kitchen)—Sawdust and milk crust! Adam and Eve on a raft and wreck 'em! On the cantaloupe! Draw one! Make it three all round.

Mr. Townley—Great—e-e-r, how—pardon me, old chap, but what's it all about?

Mr. Subberton—Eh! We've got a former restaurant cook—a peach—and we have to order that way to keep her on the job!—Puck.

Pleasant For the Bride.

At the close of a wedding breakfast a gentleman noted for his blunders rose to his feet, causing keen anxiety to all who knew him. "Ladies and gentlemen," he cried genially, "I drink to the health of the bridegroom. May he see many days like this!"

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn hoary growths back to flesh again. That is impossible; but I can now supply till the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist to the City of Darmstadt—I gained the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfectly dependable proprietary. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it will formly cures all curable cases of this horrible and much dreaded disease. Those aged-like symptoms of suffering, locked in Rheumatic blood seem to disappear and pass away under the action of this remedy as deadly as does snow when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous waste products pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is more good in that good—no actual opium to gather under with—no habit. We will, and in confidence recommend

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bensfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships to no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and acquiring that perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchanges of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the litigation between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which has cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gaudaur's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the G.T.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactories, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Ontario Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cereal Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary legislation, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals. The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of the constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offhance and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 26 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years a Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,220,000. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,671,705, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lake and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $56,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and necessity of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the lock is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb, trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. . Stratton.

Says This Medicine Has Mystic Powers

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust, Hearty, Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state, read what J. W. Jervell, well known in Merrickville, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health failed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.—They possess mystic power surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature in the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize delicate glands, scrarch out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Signalling Corps

The signalling corps of the 57th Regiment was inspected at the armories last night by Lieut. Stroud of Kingston, the signalling officer for No. 3 military district, and were also examined by Sergt.-Major McGowan. The corps which was out in good strength, made a fine impression and at the conclusion of the inspection Lieut. Stroud expressed himself as being very well pleased with way in which they conducted themselves. The result of the examination will not be known for some time. The 57th signalling corps is in command of Lieut. Higgins.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

The Business Outlook

The most interesting and encouraging incident in the financial and commercial record of the week was the announcement of an increase of $46,000 in the earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway over the corresponding week in 1902. Now that the decline in the weekly earnings of that great road has apparently been checked, it may be reasonably anticipated that succeeding weekly returns will continue to show an improvement over those of last year. It is a satisfactory incident also from the circumstance that it would indicate that farmers are willing to sell their grain and thereby contribute to the financial relief that the proceeds of their crops will bring about by their sale. While the benefit that this will bring about will be most directly felt in centres like Winnipeg, indirectly it will have favourable effect on business in the East by the liquidation of debts incurred in the past.

Although there is little change in the local business situation, the fact that the bank clearings for the past week show a small increase over those for the corresponding week in last year—the first time for twelve months that a decrease has not been shown—must be regarded as an encouraging feature. In considering this matter the fact should not be overlooked that the range of price for many commodities is lower than it was a year ago, thus enabling business to be done with less money and thereby decreasing the aggregate amount of the cheques passing through the Clearing House, although the bulk of the commodities dealt with may be equal to or even greater than what it was a year ago.

The Autumn trade throughout the country is likely to be satisfactory according to the reports reaching the wholesale centres from the outlying districts, and this applies to both Canada and the United States. There is, however, a disposition to take a conservative view of the immediate future and such a course is undoubtedly a wise and prudent one. The pending elections in the two countries exercise a quieting influence on general business, and there is a general disposition to await the results of the electoral contests before embarking on new enterprises. At the same time there is a consensus of opinion that things will improve in the New Year, and the existence of such a sentiment is itself a factor in bringing about an improvement.

While the condition of things in the United States has an effect on affairs on this side of the line, it is an influence that is decreasing with the development going on in Canada and the growth of that industrial independence which is being brought about by the progress being made in different lines of manufacture. The home market, which is now protected to a very great extent through the operation of the National Policy is becoming increasingly valuable to the Canadian manufacturer with the growth of population, and the latter is sensibly stimulated by the influx of population into the North-West. What portion of the Dominion is exercising an influence on the course of events throughout the country far beyond what might be assumed from a consideration of the proportion which its population bears to that of the rest of Canada. The flow of immigration into that section is, therefore, a matter of no little interest. Although from various circumstances there has been a marked check to the influx during this year, there are already indications that the volume of the immigration next year will be large, both from Europe and the United States.

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate woman's organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form at once witness to the fact in rounded comeliness. Nearly a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. Made wholly of those native, American, medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers, to prepare the system for the coming of baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine nicely adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments.

Dr. Pierce may be consulted by letter free of charge. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Obituary

WALTER J. HARRAN

The death occurred yesterday morning at 1.30 o'clock of Walter J. Harran, aged one year, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harran, 881 Burnham street. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. ELIZABETH GRANT.

Yesterday morning at Bridgenorth at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Percy T. Udy, Otis passed away at the age of 72 years, Mrs. Elizabeth Grant, widow of the late Jas. Grant. Mrs. Grant was born in Montreal on Dec. 7th, 1830, but has lived the majority of her life in Smith and Bridgenorth. She was a member of the Methodist Church. Her husband predeceased her 38 years ago and surviving her is one daughter, Mrs. Udy. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1.30 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery.

STEPHEN MANN.

With the death of Mr. Stephen Mann Wednesday night at the ripe old age of eighty-six years, there has passed beyond the great divide a pioneer of Peterborough county who has for several years been the only survivor in the family circle of the late James Mann to link the past and present. His death was unexpected although for the past ten years he had been practically an invalid due to a paralytic stroke.

His father, the late James Mann, was a native of Yorkshire, England, who came to Canada in the early fifty's and was one of the first settlers on the shore of Chemong Lake near Bridgenorth. There he wielded the woodman's axe and with the other pioneers of those primitive times aided in hewing out a successful future for the township of Smith.

Born on July 3rd, in 1817, Mr. Stephen Mann has seen a good deal of Peterborough County where he has spent his four-score years and six. He was married to Miss Sarah McKee of Smith in 1844, and for 43 years afterwards farmed in that township on the 10th concession. Eighteen years ago he moved to Peterborough to reside. Mr. Mann was a Baptist in religion and was one of the first members of the Selwyn church in which he was a deacon for many years.

His wife predeceased him thirty-two years ago. Surviving him are two sons, Samuel and William, of San Francisco, and eight daughters, Mrs. Wm. Jackson, Peterborough; Mrs. Wm. Rae, Otonabee; Mrs. J. A. Armstrong, Peterborough; Mrs. Edward Blewett, Lindsay; Mrs. Robt. Rae, Peterborough; Mrs. D. H. Kerr-neghen, Peterborough; Mrs. Henry Dunford, Millbrook, and Miss Margaret Mann, who lived with her father at his residence, 434 1-2 George street.

The funeral will be held today at one p.m. to Ray's cemetery, near Lakefield, where interment will take place, Rev. J. R. Webb and Rev. W.C. Riddiford will officiate.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the aid of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by all dealers.

At the Opera

The return engagement of the high class musical comedy, "Three Little Maids" was given last night at the Grand before a large audience. This musical extravaganza was looked forward to by many theater goers and the result was that many who had seen it the first time went against last evening to enjoy a good night's laugh.

Thirty people represented the troupe, and too much praise cannot be given to each one for the way in which they exhibited their theatrical style. The next attraction will be the old reliable "Guy Bros. Minstrels," which will be here on Saturday matinee and night, and no doubt a large crowd will be present to listen to a rare treat in the operatic line.

A man named McCarthy pleaded guilty at Hamilton to stealing a betting ticket from a Toronto man, and was allowed to go.

TOBACCO FOR SHEEP.

Said to Be an Excellent Remedy For Curing Various Ills.

The efficiency of tobacco in eradicating the internal parasite and thus contributing greatly to the general health of the animals that consume it is attracting wide attention among sheep raisers. Effectual in treating all internal organisms, it has proved especially desirable in eradicating the deadly bowel nodule which is a frequent source of trouble. This being destroyed, many of the ills unusually attributed to other causes disappear.

It matters little what variety of tobacco is used for the purpose, writes an Ohio breeder in National Stockman and Farmer. It has been reported, however, that a certain variety has proved fatal to the animals which consumed it. It is probable that this disastrous effect was from a matter of quantity and not quality. Those wanting tobacco may procure either the whole leaf, just as it comes from the grower, or the stems or ribs of the cured leaf after the intervening these has been removed for other purposes. The former is preferable, as it contains much less fiber than the stems alone, and it also possesses the desired medicinal qualities in a more concentrated form. The stems, however, if finely ground should be effectual.

It should be remembered that in all instances tobacco must be pulverized and given in connection with salt, as sheep would not otherwise take it. Begin with one-fourth tobacco, by measure, and if necessary add more salt until the animals are induced to eat the mixture. Keep accessible at all times, giving no other salt. Sheep will practically refuse to eat it at first, but in time they will learn to like it. The writer, who lives in a tobacco section, has known instances in which sheep and even cattle have learned to devour tobacco ravenously and, if permitted to have it, in such quantities as to prove fatal. If fed in connection with salt, as above suggested, no such injurious results need be feared.

DUTCH BELTED CATTLE.

Picturesque Animals That Are Said to Be Good Milk Producers.

Dutch belted cattle are not numerous either in Europe or America. A few specimens were brought from Holland to the United States in 1838, and for a long time there were more to be found in the famous dairying county of Orange, N. Y., than in all other parts of the country combined. They have become more scattered during recent years, and herds of these picturesque animals can now be seen in many states.

As milk producers these belted cows seem to give good satisfaction. The claim of a leading breeder is that these cattle are "deep milkers, practical, profitable, thrifty and picturesque in the extreme when seen as a herd at pasture." They are large dairy cattle. A number of bulls of the breed have exceeded a ton in weight, and the cows usually weigh between 1,000 and 1,200 pounds.

The animals of this breed are all jet black, with a broad band or belt of pure white encircling the body. This belt or blanket differs in width, but rarely reaches so far forward as the shoulder blade or back to the hips. On cows the fore part of the udder is usually included. No white is admissible elsewhere on the body and no black within the white zone. In general conformation the cattle are of the dairy type, although not to such a degree as some others.

Some Dairy Pointers.

Cow comfort usually brings the owner satisfaction.

Do not think that two drinks of milk a day are all the calf needs. He should have clean, fresh water all the time. The milk is a food and cannot wholly replace the demand for water.

Good care and keep are as essential as proper selection and breeding.

In all deep setting souring the cream becomes necessary to develop flavor, as the oxidation is only partial.

The more succulent foods make the more watery milk and oily cream, which churns more easily.

Strain the milk as soon as drawn from the cow, so as to keep the amount of dissolved filth at the minimum.

When cows drink heartily and largely the milk is less charged with albumen, and this causes a cream to rise that is a better and easier churner.

Fattening Calves For Veal.

As a result of some London experiments it was decided that about a month is as long as it is advisable to feed calves on whole milk on a dairy farm, or until they have reached about 160 pounds live weight, or 96 pounds of veal. This weight may be attained in a month, provided the calves are fattened as quickly as possible, but one cannot expect to do it unless the calves are fed three times a day. An effort should also be made to have the calves fat at the time veal commands a high price, otherwise the returns from veals either on whole milk or not be satisfactory.

OCEAN AN ENORMOUS POOL.

Winds and Currents Keep It Moving Round and Round.

The discoveries of modern science have revealed monsters of the deep as terrific as any that ancient fancy created and have shown that oceans are not mere wastes of water, but the homes of an astounding variety of living things. More than this, it has been discovered that the seas themselves have each a sort of law of existence which they obey. The hydrographic office at Washington has for years been trying to learn something of the characteristics of the Atlantic ocean as a great moving body of water by means of bottles containing papers, which have been dropped overboard from vessels in many places to drift at the mercy of the winds and waves.

Many of these bottles have been found and picked up again either in the open sea or on shores where they had stranded.

Knowing from its records where the bottles had been thrown overboard, the bureau has been able to trace in a general way the path they must have followed in order to reach the places where they were found.

Being partially filled with air and then securely corked, the bottles float on the surface of the water and go wherever the winds and the currents of the sea carry them. Each bottle contains a record of the place and date of its starting. Some of those found have floated for many months on the bosom of the Atlantic and traveled thousands of miles.

It has been ascertained that bottles dropped overboard between the shores of the United States and England or France generally travel toward the northeast, following the course of that great river in the ocean called the gulf stream. Bottles started off the coasts of Spain or Africa travel westward until they arrive among the West India islands. Along the European side of the ocean the bottles take a southerly course and along the American side a northerly course.

Thus as a result of winds and currents the whole Atlantic is shown to be slowly circulating around and around, like an enormous pool. This accounts for the stories that were current in Europe hundreds of years ago of strange objects of human manufacture having floated from the new to the old world, thus giving a clew to the existence of undiscovered lands across the sea.

A Rare Nobleman.

The American father of the heiress greeted the count who was a suitor for her hand with dignified frigidity.

"Sare," said the count, "your daughter has done me se honnaire of consenting to be my wife. I am called to complete ze negotiations."

"All right," wearily said the father. "How much of a cash settlement do you expect?"

"Nossing, sare."

"What! How much will I have to pay for your racecourse debts?"

"Nossing, sare; I do not gamble."

"How much will I have to put up to settle breach of promise cases brought by chorus-girls?"

"Nossing, sare; I do not flirt."

"How much will I have to pay to rebuild your castle?"

"Nossing, sare; it is in fine repair."

"But there must be some expense for me. Out with it."

"No, sare, nossing; I simply love your daughter and she loves me, and we wish to be married. Is not zat enough? Is it not enough to ask you to give me your daughter without your expecting to—"

"Come to my arms!" exclaimed the American father, and tried to fall upon the neck of the delightful count.

But he awoke on the floor, having tumbled from the bed as a finish to his amazing dream.

Vocal Vases.

The ancient Peruvians must have understood something of the laws of atmospheric pressure, else how could they have constructed some of the very curious jars and vases they left behind them? One of these pieces of pottery was ornamented with the figures of two monkeys, and when water was poured into or out of the vessel sounds like the screeching of monkeys were heard. Another similar vessel had the figure of a bird, which uttered appropriate notes; another was ornamented with a cat which mewed, and another with snakes which hissed. A most ingenious water jar bore the form of an aged woman, upon whose cheeks tears were seen to trickle, while sobs were heard, when water was poured from the jar.

Satisfied With Her Work.

It was noticed that the woman devoted many more hours to mirror gazing than formerly. "I can't tell," she said, with dreamy satisfaction, "how many times I have caught people, especially women, snapshotting me recently."

"I shouldn't be so puffed up about it if I were you," said the brute of a man. "It wasn't your good looks that attracted them. They were taking pictures of your dresses, so they could copy the best points in their own clothes."

"In that case," said the woman after a moment's visible disappointment, "I feel more highly complimented than if they had photographed me. Nature is responsible for me, but I designed my clothes myself."

PETERBOROUGH FIREMEN HAVE VERY FINE QUARTERS

Mayor, and Fire, Water and Light Committee Inspected the Brigade—Men Have New Uniforms—Upstairs Decorated

Have you seen the fire hall since the new brigade got busy fixing it up? If not it will pay you to make a call on Chief Howard and his men who are at home every afternoon. The mayor, Mr. H. Rush, and the Fire, Water & Light Committee met at the fire hall yesterday afternoon for the purpose of inspection. The chief had the men don their brand new uniforms, which were made by Mr. Huff, and lined them up in front of the fire hall where the city fathers had a good look at them. They are a fine lot of men and the new suits are of the best and add much to the appearance of the men.

Next the chief sounded the gong and both teams were hitched and sent out on a little run. The hose wagon went to the first hydrant, and threw off a few lengths of the new hose, while the firemen attached the new controlling nozzle, and showed the mayor and aldermen the advantage of it over the old ones. The men made excellent time and after several members of the committee tried the new nozzle they pronounced everything very satisfactory.

While the men were putting the apparatus away the aldermen went upstairs and looked over the new apartments, which have been fitted up by the men themselves.

The large room on the south side will serve as the sleeping room. It contains the men's cots, and everything is very clean and bright. The walls and ceiling have all been painted a pretty blue, while an attractive border has been put on the wall. The halls and the smaller rooms have also been painted, and fixed up by the men and they did a job which is certainly a credit to them. That the city fathers appreciate the interest Chief Howard and his men are taking in the fire hall, was evidenced by the fact that the men were called upstairs, and the mayor and all the aldermen extended hearty congratulations.

Labor Conditions Were Favorable in Peterborough Districts

During August activity prevailed in the city and district. Outside work, particularly in the building trade, was more active than in any previous month of the year. While none of the industries were rushed with work they were all running full time, and in nearly all instances employing full staffs. Many public improvements under way. A considerable number of houses and barns are being erected throughout the district. The Normal and Collegiate school buildings are now completed and ready for occupation, but the armouries are still under construction, also the Roman Catholic Church. The contract has been let and work started on the construction of a new Methodist Church a few months time is also under construction. The boats plying here were very busy. Banks reported conditions active, and business was becoming so with grindstonemen and retailers. Market quotations on some kinds of lumber were reported less than at the beginning of the season. The labor market was free from any unrest. A number of immigrants were returned to Great Britain.

CONDITION OF LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

Agriculture.—Farmers have been very busy harvesting and threshing; a good yield was reported in nearly every part of the district.

Lumbering.—Conditions were active. Owing to trade this year not being as good as in previous years, there will not be so many camps; this will materially affect the employment of a number of men.

Manufacturing.—In some lines manufacturing was fair, but in the iron trades dullness prevailed, and it has been a task to keep the shops running full time.

Mining.—Conditions were dull. In the northern part of the county a large shaft is being sunk.

Railroad Construction and employment.—Work consists chiefly of repairing. Engineers have completed the surveying of the new branch line of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Parry Sound to the lime here.

CONDITION OF PARTICULAR TRADES

Active conditions prevailed in the building trades, with stonecutters busy. Iron workers and helpers were active, with a large number employed at other occupations; this condition also applies to machinists. Steam engineers, electrical workers, linemen, bicycle workers, horseshoers and jewellers were active, but others engaged in the metal trades were more or less inactive. Activity was the rule in the woodworking trades excepting that the coopers were busy and upholsterers somewhat dull. Dullness prevailed in the printing and clothing trades, but prospects were improving with the former. Activity was the rule with boot and shoe workers, and in the food and tobacco, leather, miscellaneous and transport trades, excepting with furriers, theatre employees, cabmen, hackmen and carters, who were somewhat dull. Unskilled labour in the majority of cases, was well employed, although a number were unemployed.

DISTRICT NOTES.

Bobcaygeon.—Work is steadily progressing on the canal, giving employment to about 60 men and teams. Work is also progressing favorably on other sections of the canal.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A New Serial Story

"The Plow Woman" by Eleanor Gates, is the title of a new serial story which will be published for the first time in the Morning Times on Monday morning. Watch for it. Read it. Then tell us what you think of it.

It is a story of the winning of the West; of the way and ways of the savage chiefs; of brave soldiers and frontiersmen; of a stubborn hero coming down from the Civil War; of love tender, brave and true. He who reads shall know that a tale of Dakota of thirty years ago may kindle and inspire as much as any story of remote times; that the days of romance are near, not far off. The narrative begins quietly and rises steadily in interest to a climax as absorbing and inspiring as has been presented in any novel or drama, old or new.

Watch for Monday morning's Times and start with the first of the story.

Conservative Candidate Gets Great Reception at Country Meetings

Mr. J. H. Burnham, the Conservative candidate, has opened his series of meetings, throughout the rural districts, and he is receiving a most enthusiastic welcome on all sides. At Bensfort on Thursday night there were fifty at the meeting and last night over 125 turned out to hear him. Such a gathering at Bailieboro has not been known for many a year, and the enthusiasm with which the candidate is received is indeed encouraging. The Conservatives throughout the riding are working hard and predict a victory for Mr. Burnham.

The chair at Bailieboro last night was taken by Mr. Henry Wicks, and the speakers were Mr. J. H. Burnham and Mr. Asa Hendry.

Mr. Burnham in opening his address, remarked that this was pre-eminently the era of corruption. Graft! Graft was the increasing cry all through our Ottawa administration. There can be no more authentic source of information than the reports of commissions of able men appointed by parliament to investigate. He noticed that his opponents kept carefully away from all those reports, which was natural, seeing that nothing more damaging and scandalous had ever been penned than the Civil Service Commission's report. "Let us look at it," the speaker said "I hold in my hand the actual report as printed by parliament, and what does it say?" Mr. Burnham then read the following quotation from the report; "As a rule your commissioners found in the outside service, that politics enter into every appointment and politicians on the spot themselves, not only in the appointments, but in subsequent promotions of officers — the politics of the party is of greater importance in making appointments and promotions than the public interests of the Dominion." Then again "a list of prices paid in Quebec was, in February last submitted to the manager of the shipyard at Sorel, for comparison, and in his reply he stated that the prices generally were about 50 per cent higher than the prices being paid at Sorel."

A vote of thanks was tendered the chairman, and the meeting closed with cheers for the candidate and the King.

Advises Investors to Purchase Alliance Stock

Capt. Pauley Says Cobalt is the Richest Mining District in the World

Capt. R. J. H. Pauley, Banker & Broker, and owner and editor of Cobalt's new newspaper, The Cobalt Star, the publication of which is now under way, was visiting Cobalt at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, yesterday to a group of his military and city friends. In the course of his conversation he said, "I have visited during the past 15 years almost every mining district in Canada, and in many parts of the world, and have seen many rich propositions, but nowhere anything to equal the fabulous richness of the Cobalt region. It is simply marvellous. One stands amazed at the output and the purity of the ore. It is great advertisement for Canada. The stories told about Cobalt are not exaggerated. The Nipissing, Temiskaming & Hudson Bay, the La Rose, Crown Reserve and other shipping mines are producing wonderful wealth. On going behind it he knew anything about the Alliance Cobalt & Larder Lake properties, he said: — "I should say I do. I consider it one of the best undeveloped properties in the Cobalt district and all it requires is development to make it just as valuable as the Temiskaming & Hudson Bay, which is only a few acres away from it. The [illegible] mine also, in Larder lake, is a fine property, as evidenced by the rich ore from it, brought down and exhibited at the Toronto exhibition recently. Capt. Pauley in speaking of their Cobalt business said: The reason of our large business for the past that every effort be made to protect the interests of the customers of the firm, as in doing so we are protecting our own interests. We receive every day many propositions to handle or finance mining properties. They come to us from every conceivable channel and from people who fully believe in them and from many others who fully appreciate the fact that were we to advertise the purchase of their stock at this time many of our customers would follow our advice. About three years ago the land about Cobalt would not have sold for twenty cents an acre. To-day some of it would bring $100 a square inch. There is also some parts of it which is simply a granite formation and suitable only for building lots, and while we fully appreciate the fact that if we handled some of the propositions that are brought to us, our profits would run very high. We also appreciate the fact that it would mean, unless the properties made good, the total destruction of our record as it stands to-day; that not one of our customers has lost a dollar by buying cobalt stocks on our advice, on the contrary, they all wear the smile which would gone not. Continuing he said: "Alliance will prove another winner to add to that list of good Cobalt propositions, and if you people down here had the slightest conception of the value of that district, you would not sleep until you had some Alliance stock put away in your inside pockets.

Navvies on Trent Canal in a Fight

The village of Frankford was the scene of an exciting episode on Thursday morning of last week. From what could be learned, pistols and knives were freely used, and as a result one man is in a serious condition and not expected to recover. Two men were shot and two stabbed. The affair took place between a number of Hungarians, Hungarians and Italians, working on the Trent Valley Canal construction between Frankford and Glen Ross. There had been signs of bad blood between the different races, which broke out in a regular battle, when fists, knives and guns took a prominent part.

Three Magyars who lived together, called at the boarding house where the Hungarians and Italians were quartered, and attempted to hold the place up. A Hungarian and an Italian were stabbed while two other Italians received bullets. One was shot in the back of the head, the bullet coming out at the neck, and also shot in the thigh.

Dr. Gray will Not Stand for This

Says Light Must Not be Moved from in Front of His Place

Dr. J. W. Gray was before the committee in reference to the Fire, Water & Light Committee's proposal to remove the light from in front of his place to the corner of Sherbrooke and Bethune streets. He was accompanied by a petition signed by all the residents in the neighborhood. He raised very strong objections to the light being removed, and threatened to take out an injunction preventing it.

This riled Ald. Johnston and he was very emphatic in stating that the council should do what it thought was right in spite of Dr. Gray's threat.

Several of the aldermen took part in the discussion and it was finally decided that the matter be left in the hands of the Fire Water and Light Committee.

Ald. Turner said that the arc light in front of Dr. Gray's be moved to the corner of Sherbrooke and Bethune street, and that an incandescent light be put where the arc light is now. The matter was left in the hands of the Fire, Water & Light Committee.

Water Front Question is Not Settled

Mr. R. R. Hall Out of The City—Will be Dealt with Again

A special session of the Committee of the Whole Council was held last night for the purpose of settling if possible the claim of Mrs. Rogers re the water front. But Mr. R. R. Hall was out of town, and as he was the only one who could speak for the Canada Flakes Co., nothing could be done.

Those present were Mayor Rush, Aldermen Phelan, Davey, Neill, Turner, Johnston, Morgan, Elliott and McIntyre and Morrow. Mr. W. H. Moldrum represented the Peterborough Canal Co., and Mr. R. E. Wood represented Mrs. Rogers.

His worship announced that the council was endeavoring to settle a claim for damages Mrs. Rogers has against the city. A conduit was to have been put through the Peterborough Canal Company's property, and the city property to Mrs. Rogers' property. This was not done and a law suit has resulted with costs, which already amount to $250. Mrs. Rogers agreed to settle at the time for $1100. The total is now some $1750.

Mr. Moldrum's company has signified his willingness to pay $350, and the C.P.R. $650, and the city will have to pay the balance.

City Engineer Hay reported that to put in a pipe drain now would cost probably $1250.

Mr. Moldrum stated that if the city was to take over the Collier-Cunning Co., in lieu of the Peterborough Cereal Company, that company would pay for the lot, viz., $1000, or pay the $350 to Mrs. Rogers, and then pay the council $650 and get a deed for the lot. He stated that his own view was to not pay anything but let the lot go by default. Mr. Moldrum stated however, that he had no authority to speak for the company, but that Mr. R. R. Hall would be home Saturday noon, and advised that the mayor see him at once.

This was decided upon and another meeting of the committee will be called at an early date.

A Policeman's Lot

May be a Happy One After All

An Ft. Ex. Chief of Police found an easy and safe way out of the ills caused by tea and coffee. He says:

"I suffered intensely from heart trouble and nervousness for five years, and although treated by some of the best physicians in the city, did not get permanent relief until I changed to Postum.

"A friend of my family was visiting at our house and seeing my condition, insisted that coffee was at the bottom of my trouble. I confess I was skeptical, but promised to try Postum in place of coffee.

"It was nearly three weeks before I noticed much of any change, as my case was a bad one. Then I saw that my nervousness was gradually disappearing. A little later I was able to sleep a part of the night on my left side, something I had been unable to do for 6 years at least.

"I kept on using Postum, and the result is, so far as heart trouble and nervousness are concerned, I am a well man.

"The best proof is that I am writing this with my own hand, a thing I was unable to do for several years prior to the change from coffee to Postum."

"There's a reason."

Smith Street Bridge in Better Shape Now Than It Has Been

Smith street bridge is today in better shape than it has been for some time past. But even at that if is not satisfactory and is liable to become unsafe at any time. The bridge must be rebuilt and that at the very earliest opportunity, and in face of the report of the city engineer, the Committee of the Whole decided to submit a bylaw to the people at the January municipal election. The new bridge will cost from $40,000 to $49,000. The report of the engineer and the opinion of the aldermen will be found below;

Ald. Neill stated that according to the report just read, the bridge was still dangerous, and his thought that the city was taking great chances of a farmer with a load of wheat going through. He asked if it would pay to have a man there all the time to prevent any heavy loads going over. In fact the bridge was not safe and the city would be liable.

Ald. Johnston moved that the bridge be placarded prohibiting any heavy loads going over the bridge, and to have the bridge inspected frequently. Seconded by Ald. Turner.

Ald. Morgan stated that in his opinion the bridge was all right until such times as it could be rebuilt. He did not want to see any placard put up.

Ald. Phelan stated that so far as the Board of Works is concerned, everything is in shape to have the bylaw submitted. The whole question is, when is the best time to put the bylaw to the people.

Ald. Morrow said that it was up to the council to prepare to submit a bylaw as soon as possible to provide for the erection of a new bridge.

To Ald. Johnston's motion was added that a by-law be submitted at the January election to build a new bridge and it was carried.

MR. MARTIN'S REPORT

Wm. J. Martin, on October 7th, reported to City Engineer T. A. S. Hay as follows;

"Since the repairs which I have done on this structure, I have made a thorough examination of the bridge, and beg to report as follows;—

"All parts showing any signs of weakness were repaired, but further weakness is liable to develop at any moment, and the bridge will have to be inspected repeatedly.

"I consider Smith street bridge is in better condition today than it has been for some time back."

ENGINEER'S REPORT.

The city engineer reported to the chairman of the Board of Works on Oct. 7, as follows;—

"Temporary repairs to Smith St. Bridge were completed by Mr. Wm. J. Martin, and the bridge opened to traffic on Saturday, Oct. 3rd.

"In removing the defective parts referred to in my report of August 17th, these were found to be more extensive than anticipated, requiring more material and labor than estimated. All apparent weak spots were repaired.

"A month ago I had the side walk removed from the south side in order to lighten the structure as much as possible. The removal of this extra weight, allowed of the truss rods and braces being drawn up, and with the repairs recently made, the bridge is in better condition than it has been for some time, and is safe for light traffic, but further weak points will develop before long, so that it is imperative that action should be taken to rebuild it in permanent materials, as soon as possible. I have cautioned Messrs. Curtis Bros. not to draw heavy loads across the bridge."

COST OF BRIDGE.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay reported to the council on Aug. 31st, in reference to the cost of rebuilding the Smith street bridge as follows,—

"If plan for 18-foot roadway, and two six-foot walks is adopted, the estimated amount will be $40,000.

"If 24-foot roadway, allowing space for car track, and two six-foot walks, the estimated amount will be $49,000.

"Work on the foundations cannot be undertaken before July, 1909, at which time, it is expected, the walk will be down to normal level."

Mr. Stratton's Enthusiastic Meeting at Selwyn Village

The largest political meeting that has been addressed by Hon. Mr. Stratton in twenty years in the village of Selwyn, assembled in the Temperance Hall on Thursday night to listen to Mr. Stratton and his friends in a discussion of the political issues of the day, and a presentation of the reasons that should influence the electors of West Peterborough in returning Mr. Stratton to the House of Commons at the present contest.

At eight o'clock the meeting was organized by the election to the chair of Mr. Fred McKee, who in a few pleasant remarks called the meeting to order and invited Mr. T. G. Gillespie, who made a brief but vigorous speech in favor of Mr. Stratton, in which he said that, as their friend, their old representative, Mr. Stratton, he only trusted and believed that the people of this district would be found united and enthusiastic on October 26, in rolling up a big majority for W. H. Stratton in his old constituency of West Peterborough. He had no sympathy with the methods that characterized the campaign so far as it had been conducted on Mr. Burnham's behalf, and by that gentleman, himself.

R. H. Leary followed and said that he was always ready to get up and say a good word in a good cause, and they would all agree with him that in wanting for the return to the House of Commons in this election of their old, tried and true representative, J. R. Stratton, they were engaged in a good cause. He had known Mr. Stratton for a good many years; in fact, they had been small boys together, and, as they knew, he was the same old Jim Stratton today that he was when he was in knickerbockers. He (Mr. Stratton) had made himself as well known in every quarter of this county, by his personal activity in looking after its interests, that his name was a household word. And they all knew what he was personally—kindly, unaffected, accessible to every decent man, and always ready to do a favor to anyone who asked it. If it was a just request. As they well knew Mr. Stratton, while their representative, had secured for them good roads, had procured the construction of bridges and other public works of benefit to them, and had looked after their interests in every way possible. He had done more for the welfare of the people of West Peterborough than any other man who had ever represented it. And when such a man came before them, it was up to them to get together with a hearty good will and show what they thought of him by rolling up a big majority for Hon. Mr. Stratton, on October 26th.

Mr. F. D. Kerr spoke at length in favor of the policy of the government and the claims of Mr. Stratton.

Hon. Mr. Stratton on coming forward was received with a demonstration that gave convincing testimony to his popularity in this quarter of his old riding. He made an able address on the political situation, and the claims of the administration, and of himself upon the good will and support of the farmers of West Peterborough, in the course of which he said that now there was no really political questions upon which to divide as of old. It was simply whether they preferred the present prosperity to the prospect of a return to the old conditions of stagnation and depression; whether they preferred capacity and enterprise in their public men, or the restoration of the rule of careless incompetence; and as to which of the two men before them could better serve the business interests in which their welfare and future progress were bound up. And in a candid review of these considerations we can appeal to their common sense as to what was best for them, and who could best serve them. He thought it could safely be said that J. R. Stratton would be the next member for West Peterborough.

A vote of thanks was then tendered to Mr. McKee, and the meeting closed with three cheers for J. R. Stratton and three cheers for the King.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a supreme invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with a tendency to chronic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weak and condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa (suppressed or absent menstrual periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and hydræmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, we may be sure a course of Golden Seal root, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which is most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D. of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. * * * In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

P. C. I. Field Day of Sports Held Yesterday

At the Nicholls Oval yesterday afternoon the Peterborough Collegiate Institute held its annual field day of sports. All the pupils of the school including their nearest friends and relatives and also all the teachers of the staff were on hand to witness an afternoon holiday of clean sport. The field day this year was the biggest success since they were first started.

There were altogether about twenty-two events including the senior and junior races, and all were carried off in lightning fashion.

About 2.30 o'clock the sports began, and after three long hours of running, jumping, pole vaulting, etc., the contestants journeyed to their homes, each to do justice to his avaricious appetite. The winners of the various events are as follows;—Hall, Conroy, Hatton, Fessenden, Carlisle, Rankin, Hayne, Lees, Parks, Minorgan, Sheehy and Girvan.

One of the features of the field day was the needle threading contest among the fair sex. There was no one managed to win as all the girls finished at the same time. The committee are very much indebted to H. S. MacDonald, esq., for the MacDonald Cup, to A. Gibson for the promise of Medals for the senior and junior championships, to J. H. Burnham for the promise of a medal for the senior cross country race, and to J. H. Adams for the promise of a medal for the junior cross country run.

The following is a list of the officers who so kindly gave their utmost attention to see that the games were carried off successfully;

Sports' Committee—S. Anderson, R. Kelly, G. Howson, T. Campbell, H. Hickey, G. Rankin, P. Clark, F. Ackerman.

Judges of Track Events—S. Anderson, P. Clarke, Dr. McPherson.

Judges of Field Sports—S. J. Stubbs, G. F. Adams, R. Kelly.

Announcer—J. E. Hodgson

Timer—A. Gibson.

Senior Starters—M. Debbin, W. J. Petit.

Junior Starters—S. W. Collings, R. N. Merritt.

Scorers—E. C. Sarigley, H. Hickey

President—E. Hall.

Vice-Pres.—M. Debbin,

Secretary—M. O'Brien.

and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

Death from Heart Disease

A Case of Neglecting a Weak Heart and Tired Nerves.

If your heart flutters, be careful. An attack is liable to come on at any time. Excitement, over-exertion or emotion may cause it.

If blood rushes to the head, if palpitation and short breath are noticeable, there's cause for alarm.

If you want a good honest remedy try Ferrozone. We recommend Ferrozone because we know it's just right for heart trouble. It cured A. F. Beattie, who lives at Alton Hotel, Bay City, Mich. See if your symptoms resembles these;

SYMPTOMS OF WEAK HEART.

Nervousness, Trembling, Sinking Feeling, Short Breath, Palpitation, Dizziness, Heart Pains, Weakness.

Mr. Beattie says;

"I was weak and miserable.

"I was subject to heart palpitation and dizziness.

"As I grew worse I began to have trembling and sinking sensations.

"Ferrozone strengthened my heart gave vigor to my nerves, soon made me well. It's a great rebuilder."

By strengthening the muscles of the heart, giving proper circulation and causing a general rebuilding of the whole system, Ferrozone is bound to do grand work in heart trouble; try it. 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

THE POWER OF THE PAST

While the country that boasts no history may be happy, its beautitude must be akin to the bovine—to the contentment that is a drag on the hand of achievements, a brake on the footsteps of progress. Absence of history must be synonymous with absence of incident, whether for weal or woe. Canada is but an infant in the family of nations and her archieves reach no further back than a yesterday, when compared with the grandeur of the European and the Asiatic races. Like a young bear her troubles—and her joys—lie all before her. But abet as bear been the part played hitherto by her on the stage of Weltpolitik, she can still boast a historic past, in the light of which she may go forward to high empries. We believe that one of the most potent influences on Britain's greatness of today is wrapped up in the hoary annals of the race. Like the code of honor of the man of the world, those annals may not always have been of the highest spirit, but they breathe, in the very most of them, an ambition and a stirring which, though often in suspended animation, have resisted the meaner agencies of the passing hour, and survived as the essential motive power of the nation. A sentiment, perhaps, but a sentiment such as that which holds closely to the traditions of the forefathers the salon of some noble house, where the parvenu might fall for lack of inspiration. It is good then, in these democratic days, to resurrect from the musty centuries, those records which give Canada and her provinces a history; a foundation of derring do for an edifice of achievement. And every true Canadian must endorse whatsoever steps are taken to bring to general knowledge those incidents of the Dominion's past which do honor to her pioneers and herself. We believe that the furbishing anew of the dim treasures of Quebec and Abraham's Heights has brought about a keener public appreciation of what those stirring times meant to Canada, and in less intrinsic but no less significant measure do we believe that any steps taken to revivify the work of the old-time explorers and pioneers must find their echo in an emulation worthy of the days that were.

Our mountains, our rivers, our very streets whisper the names of great men whose memories live after them. More and more are we beginning to realize that those names are something more than a name; that their memories live for a purpose higher than the merely sentimental. And we welcome, all of us to whom the future of our country means more than selfish and personal aggrandisement, any efforts put forth by public-spirited men, to bring to light the glories of the past and set them up as a golden beacon for the future, fed with the oil of present opportunity.

GERMANY OR AUSTRIA?

It is possible that the conjecture offered in some quarters that Germany is put behind the precipitate action of Austria, is true. Of course, Germany will be compelled to support Austria now that the only sure ally in Europe has led off; but it is conceivable that it was precisely this certainty which tempted Austria to make the plunge (without consulting anybody. Unfortunately Austria has long coveted the Provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina. They would add considerably to her territory and eventually augment her military strength. Now Austria might have suspected that Germany would not regard this as an opportune moment to make the plunge because of the "entente" between Britain, France and Russia; and consequently might have omitted the consultation of Berlin before committing herself—and practically her ally—to the policy of annexation.

Still there will be more "takers" for the theory that Germany inspired the police. Germany has believed herself to be the object of a ring-fence policy engineered by Britain and France; she has seen in the "entente" which these powers have been establishing, an intention to isolate Germany in the midst of Europe, with Austria as her only possible ally. In Morocco, she found it impossible to break through the ring. Italy and Russia went with France and Britain; and Austria was her only "second on the duelling field." But she may well believe that in the Balkans she can break up this combination. Russia is now acting with the other two powers in calling an international conference; but that is no guarantee that she will act with them in the conference. Her interests have always favored the breaking up of the Turkish dynasty, and it is not at all likely that she will feel a reluctance to pursue this policy just now for fear of stifling the cause of liberty in Turkey. A constitution in Turkey might be a bad example for the Russian mouzhik.

Then Bulgaria is, in a sense, the petted child of Russia. If there is a war waged to crush the independence of Bulgaria, as well as to drive Austria out of Russia, it will be most difficult for Russia to be anywhere except at the back of the Bulgarians. To imagine Russian troops marching to the support of the Turks against the Bulgarians, is to find our historical probabilities (in the "Wonderland" of "Alice". Thus Germany may have calculated that to put herself at this crisis on the side of those who would dismember Turkey, while uTrkey is in the hands of the revolutionary party, would be to detach Russia from France and Britain and break through the "ring." If this be the German policy, it is clever; and it is too soon yet to know how it will succeed. Obviously Britain will exert all her force to stamp out any conflagration in the Balkans, and so leave the way open to some sort of a compromise.

The danger zone at present is that occupied by the excitable population of this northern tier of Turkish provinces. Servia is said to be eager for war, it long having been the ambition of its people to add to their country the Servian population in Bosnia, and so make (of themselves a powerful member of the Balkan group. Bulgaria talks peace, but is getting ready to fight. Much will depend on how things go in Macedonia under the new regime. A Persian battle might arise there very easily. Then there will be the restlessness of the Turkish army as it sees provinces being wrested from the empire under the impression that the new government is impotent. Europe will spend some anxious weeks until things settle down and the conference completes its work. A firebrand has been thrown into the biggest pile of dry inflammables on the Continent and it is not certain but that some of the powers are pouring oil on the flames instead of water.

Go to the blood. If you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Sheep, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-on's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Sheep's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

WE ALL USE PE-RU-NA IN OUR HOME

Who is best able to judge of the value of Pe-ru-na? The housewife who has used it in her home for years, or prejudiced, sensational writers who have never used Pe-ru-na in their lives? It will not take any fair-minded reader a minute to decide which is the best evidence. The mothers of the United States believe in Pe-ru-na. The half million women who praise Pe-ru-na receive no pay for doing so, and the half dozen editors who disparage Pe-ru-na get big pay for doing so. Which is the best evidence?

Sore Throat for Years.

Mrs. C. Dashel, 324 Irving Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Curator Natural History Society, writes:

"I am glad to be able to recommend Peruna for chronic sore throat. I had been troubled with sore throat for years, but could find nothing to help me. I had an awful gagging in the morning and was subject to dizzy spells. I could not draw a free breath and life had no pleasure for me. My throat was dry and parched.

"I supposed I was doomed to spend the rest of my days in this condition, when I heard what good Peruna had been to others, so I tried a bottle of it. After using it I was much better and six bottles of it cured me.

"I cannot say too much for Peruna, and I hope that some poor sufferer like myself will see this and give it a trial."

New Eats and Sleeps Well.

Mrs. Annie Tesch, 327 33rd Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "When I wrote to you for advice, my health was a total wreck. I could not sleep and thought I would die, as there seemed to be no help for me. But I followed your advice and took Peruna and Manalin.

"I am now cured. I can eat and sleep well, and enjoy life.

"I never will be without Peruna, should any of us be sick."

Catarrh of Worst Form.

Mrs. Amanda Long, 7207 Sealey Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I believe that I am cured of catarrh of the worst form and of long standing.

"I was almost a total wreck. I tried almost everything and doctored with a number of doctors, but they did me no good.

"I tried Peruna as a last resort, and by the time I had taken one bottle I could see that it was helping me, and so I continued taking it. I can say now that I have not felt the slightest symptoms for three months, and I think there is nothing like Peruna. I still keep it in the house, and think there is no medicine like it. I cannot praise it too highly, and bless the day that I learned of it."

Mrs. Judge J. F. Boyer, 1431 Sherman Avenue, Evanston, Ill., writes that several complications united in pulling her down, and she thanks Peruna for new life and strength.

Pain in the Stomach.

Mrs. Mois Pariseau, Ste. Julie de Vercheres, P. Q., Canada, writes that she suffered five years with pain in the stomach. The pains extended through her body, and she also had difficulty in breathing. Her husband heard of Peruna and bought five bottles. This treatment virtually cured her.

Acute Indigestion.

Mr. John C. Russell, 810 County Street, Portsmouth, Va., writes regarding his wife's case as follows:

"I thought it would be doing but justice to your great medicine to tell you what it has done for my wife.

"Two years ago the doctor called at our house, on an average, three times a week, in attendance upon my wife, who was suffering from acute indigestion. Her suffering was so great that nothing but morphine would give her relief.

"While on a visit to some friends in Norfolk she had an attack and I prepared to go for the doctor, when our friend proposed Peruna. I gave her a dose, repeating it in a half hour, and her pains passed away. Since that time my wife has gained thirty pounds.

Gained Thirty Pounds.

"We are never out of Peruna. When the children or I have a cold we take some of mamma's Peruna. I find it has cut my doctor bills down to almost nothing."

Pe-ru-na for Her Children.

Mrs. Alice Bogle, 803 Clinton St., Circleville, Ohio, writes:

"I want to inform you what Peruna has done for me.

"I have been afflicted with catarrh for several years. I have tried different medicines and none seemed to do me any good until I used Peruna. I have taken six bottles and can praise it very highly for the good it has done me.

"I also find it of great benefit to my children."

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. He may also do so by living with father or mother, on certain conditions. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with his parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Another Way Out of It.

Nobody had ever had reason to accuse Abel Pond of being dishonest, but he was as sharp a man in a bargain as could be found in the county. When the building committee applied to him for a site for the new library he was ready to sell them a desirable lot, but not at their price.

"I couldn't feel to let it go under $600," he said, with the cold obstinacy that characterized all his dealings with his fellow men. "It wouldn't be right."

"You ought to be willing to contribute something for such an object," said the chairman of the committee. "If it's worth six hundred, why not let us have it for five hundred and call it you've given the other hundred?"

"It's—no, I couldn't do that," said Mr. Pond, stroking his chin, "but I tell you what I will do. You give me seven hundred for it, and I'll make out a check for a hundred and hand it over to you, an' you can hand the list of subscriptions with a good round sum and kind of make up folks to their duty."—Seattle Companion.

A Real Apology.

"When the late Joel Chandler Harris was an editor here among us," said an Athenian, "I called on him one day and found him very willing to correct an error about me that crept into his columns.

"We talked about newspaper contradictions, public apologies and the like, and 'Uncle Remus' took down a scrapbook and read me an apology that was an apology indeed. It had happened, he said, in a Transvaal paper. I'll never forget it. I agreed with Mr. Harris that it was the finest specimen of the public apology and retraction extant. It said:

"I, the undersigned, A. C. du Plessis, retract hereby everything I have said against the innocent Mr. A. P. Bezuidenhout, calling myself an infamous liar and striking my mouth with the exclamation: 'You murderous mouth! Why do you lie so?' I declare, further, that I know nothing against the character of Mr. G. P. Bezuidenhout, I call myself, besides, a genuine liar of the first class.

"A. C. DU PLESSIS."

His Cough Cure.

"In my boyhood there came to our town," said a clergyman, "a gentle minister who, the very first Sunday of his incumbency, stopped effectually his coughing congregation.

"It was a congregation, too, singularly addicted to coughing. Rattling volleys of coughs ran over it every few minutes. The minister, indeed, that first Sunday could hardly make himself heard. He had rather a weak voice.

"Well, after his sermon had proceeded for ten or twelve minutes, now audible enough, now drowned under great waves of coughs, he took a resolution, and when the next outbreak was at its height he ceased preaching.

"At once the coughing ceased. There was a profound silence. The minister smiled.

"'My friends,' said he, 'it seems that when I stop you stop.'

"From that day in that church they coughed no more."

Things to Remember.

He who would pass his declining years with honor and comfort should when young remember that he may one day become old and remember when he is old that he has been once young.—Addison.

In the course of a few years the body attains its full growth, but the heart may grow forever. It is a pity that so few hearts enjoy the privilege.—Albany (Tex.) News.

Burma's Popular Sports.

A form of speculation very popular in Burma is bull racing. A certain native sportsman is the owner of one of these bulls, for which he has refused an offer of 10,000 rupees. It has won several races and is looked after and as carefully tended as a Derby favorite. The owner values it at 25,000 rupees, and, it is said, it brings him an annual income of from 12,000 to 15,000 rupees. It is carefully guarded by four men lest it may be got at and "doctored."

Burmans also patronize boxing eagerly, but the art can scarcely be practiced according to Queensberry rules, for we are told by a provincial reporter that he has observed that "even the best boxers strike out with their eyes tightly shut, and if they do hit each other it is more by chance than anything else."—Calcutta Statesman.

The Wrong Lady.

Some young idlers had been enjoying the fun of hailing passing chorygirls with rather doubtful compliments, and from some of the answers returned it was evident that not all of those addressed were taking things kindly. Presently one of the older boys, seeing it was going too far, spoke up. "Look a' here now, fellers," he added, "youse might think youse is wise guys an' all that, but just keep on an' the wrong lady'll come along, an' she'll break yer face, see?"—Argonaut.

A Parthian Shot.

"Even though you are my brother's son I am obliged to discharge you. But I am sorry for your mother's sake."

"Oh, that's all right, sir. Mother says she don't see how I've got on with you as long as I have."—Judge.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Nerve Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is real, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden, tiny little nerve that really kills at last. This obedient nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more powerful strength. Without that the heart cannot help to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have their same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a positive, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop has found the cause of all this painful, palpitating, pulsing heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—the popular prescription—is to be directed to these vital and vitalizing nerves. It gives them strength; it gives real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion, strong kidneys, these nerves must be nourished, vitalized, fed.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative
"ALL DEALERS"

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Gentlemen,—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough to enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully prosecuted.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bensfort bridges, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of South Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan much also serves to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to drive over to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shorter and easier way of access to the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Eigenau bridges, and requiring that geographical municipalities by the city and the counties of Peterborough and Victoria, in case residents of the district, to assume shares of liability thereunto, on town and city lines.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the irrigation between Peterborough and Victoria counties, which has cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and amongst benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and dairy, and later a permanent bridge, to Jack Connell's Narrows, is a short saving on the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was instrumental enough to induce the Ontario Government to hand to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservations along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a real advantage, which has been much greater by being filled in by the dredgings on the river, at once beautifying the water line and elevating water for manufactories, etc., etc., to be invested with wharfage now under consideration.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number five canal, which made possible the establishment of the Quebec Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the same furthest up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the southern part of the district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Cereal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course as a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticised for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as in the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at art, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offensive and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 54 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 25 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 13 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, there was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,220,020. During the 15 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,766, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 39 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the Ingoli shoe and northern waters.

These, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $35,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $8,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and remedy of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advantage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the look is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the look and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. It found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. . Stratton.

Important to Ladies

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dureenwood of Toronto, is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently them up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at the Oriental Hotel, Friday, Oct. 16

What Every Woman Requires for Headache Langour

Mrs. Mary Flanagan Gives Advice that is Sound, Useful and True.

Has your strength given out? Do you feel languid and tired this spring?

Are you pale, nervous, nervous, finding it hard to do your housework? Thousands feel just the same—feel the enervating influence of spring, whether that brings out latent symptoms of disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flanagan of Bog near Junction — here is her experience, "I will never again suffer the torture of deadening spring illness — never will I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I lived through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, Hattean—Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite—I relished my meals and grew strong. Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Women who are continually pale, tired and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, aching muscles, bearing down pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that surely need Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c at all dealers.

COBALT

A RECORD WITHOUT PARALLEL:--

Those who have ever bought Cobalt shares from us on our advise have never made a loss. We investigate and make a specialty of handling first issues of legitimate Cobalt stocks. Have a reputation of 18 years standing in the financial world. Three and a half years in the Cobalt district and make the biggest and quickest profits for thousands of clients. Those who purchased Cobalt Nipissing, Buffalo and Crown Reserve through us are now receiving handsome dividends in addition to a tremendous profit on their investment and Cobalt Nova Scotia will enter the dividend paying list this fall.

WE ARE NOW RECEIVING ORDERS FOR THE FIRST LIMITED ISSUE OF COBALT.

WE HANDLED COBALT NIPISSING SHARES at 14.50 and they advanced to $32.75.

WE PLACED COBALT BUFFALO Shares at $1.40, now about $3.00; WE RECOMMENDED COBALT NOVA SCOTIA shares around 30 cents, now over 50; and our recent favorite COBALT CROWN RESERVE ADVANCED IN A FEW WEEKS FROM 10 CENTS TO $2.00 Our record and our judgement is backed by our own capital, that's the reason we see that our propositions are properly developed, resulting in profits and dividends to those who invest through us.

ALLIANCE

At 25c a share ($1.00 shares)

What we wish to impress on our friends and clients is the fact that if Cobalt Nipissing and other Cobalt Companies can pay 12 per cent. dividends upon capitalizations as high as $6,000,000.00, how much per annum will COBALT ALLIANCE shareholders receive upons capitalization of practically only $375,000, when this company starts shipments from its two big mines to the smelters. The ALLIANCE SILVERMINE IN COBALT almost adjoins the famous Temiskaming and Hudson BayMine. (THREE CARLOADS OF WHICH ORE NETTED OVER THREEHUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS! Which pays 3½ per cent. monthly dividends; and whose stock of One dollar par value is selling to-day at Two Hundred Dollars a share.

The ALLIANCE is also in the same rich belt as the famous TRETHEWAY, BUFFALO and CONIAGAS MINES known for their fabulous richness throughout the mining world. The Alliance Company also has a splendid property situated in Larder Lake (60 miles north of Cobalt) SHOWING FREE GOLD, and with these two mines in the noted rich mineral towns of Cobalt and Larder Lake, ALLIANCE shares especially at the first inside price of 25 cents offers advantages to the investor unsurpassed by any proposition in the camp. We unhesitatingly recommend the immediate purchase of COBALT ALLIANCE at the present market quotation of 25 cents asked, 24 1-2 bid, as at this price we know the stock presents a tremendous opportunity for

A PERMANENT DIVIDEND PAYING INVESTMENT

Read again our record and remember we say that Alliance stock is going up. That as the development work goes on and the showing of ore increases in value, so will the price of the stock increase. Bear in mind, also, that the number of Alliance shares we have to sell at 25 cents is limited, that it is only necessary to place a small proportion of development stock, before a mine is on a paying basis in the Cobalt district, and that if you invest in Alliance you are joining with some of the best known capitalists and representative merchants in Canada, who have investigated the proposition and have invested in it.

We know that Alliance is a buy at this time, and we expect to see it selling between $3.00 and $4.00 per share, and we advise you to buy it at once at the present prevailing price.

Wedding Bells

RACE—ELLIS.

A wedding of interest to Stony Lake summer cottagers and visitors was solemnized on Thursday afternoon at four o'clock in the residence of Rev. J. R. Webb, 344 Rubidge street, when Dr. J. H. Race, of New York, was united in marriage to Miss Mary Ellis Sloan, also of New York. Dr. Race has spent the past twenty-five successive summers at his cottage at Beechnk, where he was very well known.

They were unattended at the wedding, and afterwards left for New York, where they will reside.

JOHNSTON—O'CONNOR.

Enniskmore, Oct. 9.—St. Martins church, Enniskmore, was the scene of an extremely pretty wedding, the contracting parties being Miss Katie O'Connor, daughter of Mr. Maurice O'Connor, Enniskmore township, and Mr. John Johnston, son of Mr. Robt. Johnston, Antrim street, Peterborough. The bride was attired in a gown of blue tamaline silk, trimmed with cream applique and lace, and was assisted by her sister, Miss Mary Ellen, who was also prettily attired in blue. The groom was supported by Mr. John Dorpey, Peterborough.

The nuptial mass at 9.30 o'clock, was celebrated by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, after which the young couple were driven to the home of the bride's parents accompanied by more than 50 guests, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will reside in Ashburnham, where their many friends join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

BORETT—CAIN.

At St. Augustine's church, Toronto, Wednesday morning, the marriage of Miss Loretta May Cain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Cain, to Mr. Osborne W Borrett, manager of the Sterling Bank at Haliburton, took place very quietly, F. G. Plummer, rector, officiating. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a pretty traveling dress of striped Wedgewood blue cloth and hat to match and bouquet of white roses and lilies. The bridesmaid, Miss Florence Cain, wore pale blue and white plumed picture hat, with touch of blue velvet. Mr. Arthur Botterill was best man.

Obituary

JOHN W. TROTTER.

The death occurred yesterday morning in the Nicholls Hospital of Mr. John W. Trotter, aged 44, and who lived at 294 Smith street. Mr Trotter has been for some time a foreman with the Cavendish Lumber Company. A particularly sad feature in connection with his death is that his mother is ill in the hospital and his sister at home.

The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere, a clever Candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for feverish children. Take Preventics at the slightest stage to head off all colds. Box of 48—25c For sale by all dealers.

Supt. Wise in Lindsay

Superintendent Wise of the Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough, was in town last evening and attended a meeting of the Cemetery Board He gave them considerable information regarding the new chapel and vault, the construction of which is under consideration by board. He gave them some valuable pointers regarding the keeping of the grounds in good shape. It is expected that Lindsay will have one of the finest cemeteries in Ontario if the improvements talked of are completed.—Watchman-Warder.

A. O. U. W. Open Meeting

Last Friday afternoon, Faith Lodge No. 123, met in Colborne and were addressed by District Deputy Master J. J. Turner of Peterborough. During the afternoon tea was served by the ladies, and the evening was spent in a song and story style. The meeting of all the grand officers of this society will be held in Toronto in March

Special Offer to Ladies

I will send ten days' treatment of the famous Orange Lily FREE to every sufferer who writes for it. This home treatment cures without the aid of a physician. It cures female weakness, leucorrhoea, tumors, cancers, in their earlier stages, displacements, lacerations, painful periods, pains in back, sides of abdomen, bearing down sensations, and all irregularities. Read the following letters and be convinced of the efficiency of this truly wonderful remedy.

Merlin, Ont., March 27, 1902.

Mrs. K. F. Currah, Windsor, Ont.,

Dear Mrs. Currah, your letter of the 24th received today. Please find enclosed $5.00 for 6 box s of Orange Lily. I would not think of discontinuing its use, and I know that 6 more boxes will produce a permanent cure. Even now I am an entirely new creature since using O.L. At present I know of two other cases the same as mine (long standing leucorrhoea) and as you give some trial boxes free, if you would send me a few I would gladly hand them to my friends, for I know it will produce the same good results in every case. I intend sending you my photo and testimonial letter later, for I feel we cannot say too much in favor of Orange Lily, and know if more of same was used among suffering womankind the surgeon's knife would be cheated of its many baptisms in the blood of suffering women. Hoping God may ever bless and prosper you and Dr. Coonley in the noble work, believe me, ever your sincere friend, Miss R. McK., Merlin, Post Office, Kent County, Ont.

Kingston, Ont., July 15, 1903.

Dear Friend,—Some time ago I wrote and told you the great good your wonderful medicine had done for me. Since then I have continued to use it, and after five years of terrible suffering and undergoing three operations, I am completely cured by Orange Lily, after using it for eight months. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Knowing, as I do, that so many women in this city suffer as I did, and knowing what it did for me, I would like to take the agency. Will you please send me instructions and terms (agents)

Gratefully yours.

Two Great Meetings Greet Hon. Mr. Hanna and R.R. Gamey

Grand Opera House and the Market Hall were Packed—Splendid Addresses by the Provincial Secretary, Mr. Gamey, and Mr. Burnham--Many Ladies Present

The two largest halls in the city of Peterborough, viz., the Grand Opera House and the Market Hall, were filled and overflowed on Saturday night with the people of West Peterborough, who wanted to hear Hon. Mr. Hanna, the Provincial Secretary, and Mr. R. R. Gamey, M.P. P. for Manitoulin. Ever since the campaign opened there has been a desire on the part of all classes to hear Mr. Gamey, and the Conservative candidate succeeded in bringing him here. The people were glad when they learned of his coming and men and women in all parts of the riding, talked of little else than Saturday night's meeting. There was a curiosity to see the man who has figured so prominently in the politics of the province for the past four years. Everyone knew the particulars of the case which brought him before the public notice, and it was not so much to hear again the old story as it was to see the man who fought his battles alone, and who has since been welcomed by the people of the province, that brought out so many thousands of people. When first the meeting was arranged the Conservatives were unable to secure any hall except the Market Hall. The opera house was engaged and the Brock street rink was also not obtainable. But the party made arrangements with Guy Bros. minstrels to cancel their night engagement. This provided a lot more accommodation, and enabled 1500 more people to hear the two speakers. Even the opera house and Market Hall together were not nearly large enough and had it been possible to hold another overflow meeting in Brock street rink it would have been filled too.

The people began to gather at seven o'clock and at half past seven the doors of the opera house were closed and all the seats in the Market Hall were taken and there were fully 1500 more who crowded into the standing space in the market. The two meetings were a great tribute to the Conservative candidate and the party and policy which he represents. Never before was there so much enthusiasm shown in this riding.

The Peterborough Band escorted the speakers from the Oriental Hotel to the Opera House, where the program was arranged. Mr. Jas. Kendry occupied the chair and he announced that Hon. Mr. Hanna would address the audience in the Opera House first and that Mr. Gamey would go to the Market Hall and return later in the evening. The two visiting speakers were enthusiastically cheered when they appeared on the platform as was also Mr. Burnham.

A most noticeable and pleasing feature of both meetings was the very large number of ladies who were present and who showed such a keen interest in the addresses. The ladies are enthused and are taking no small part in the campaign.

CHAIRMAN'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Jas. Kendry acted as chairman and as he arose to open the meeting he introduced Hon. Mr. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, and Mr. R. R. Gamey. Hon. Mr. Hanna was to speak in the Opera House first, and Mr. Gamey would address the audience in the Market Hall first. When Mr. Gamey's name was mentioned, the audience cheered enthusiastically. Mr. Kendry went on to speak of the secret ballot, which was to be used at this election, and everyone could vote as they pleased and there was no way of anyone finding out how their ballot was marked.

THE CANDIDATE.

Mr. J. H. Burnham was given a very warm welcome and as he opened his remarks he stated that it was with no little emotion that he faced so vast an audience. He expressed his very sincere appreciation of the many kind words which had been spoken on his behalf during the past few weeks. Continuing he said that there was in the country a great public opinion, which governed the country and that public opinion today is that the rule of graft in the Dominion House must stop. The people were awakened and they would no longer stand for it. Mr. Burnham predicted a great Conservative victory. Not only would the two Peterboroughs be on the Conservative side, but throughout the Dominion there would be a big turnover.

Be it far from me to criticise my fellow countryman so far as his private citizenship is concerned, but when it comes to a public business we are free to criticise those men who represent us or are supposed to represent us, and sometimes it is necessary for us to severely criticise those men, in order to prevent the people being satisfied away blindfolded. Mr. Burnham then touched upon the immigration policy of the Dominion Government and he referred to Hon. Geo. A. Cox's speech at a luncheon in Calgary when he strongly favored the importation of Oriental labor. On the other hand the speaker pointed out the many reasons which this country should keep out all Oriental cheap labor and protect the Canadian white laborer. The first way to get rid of the Oriental labor and to prevent the further importation of such undesirable people was to get rid of the people who take for themselves what belongs to the nation at large. These people are what is known as grafters and the civil service commission of the Laurier Government, said in their report that there was little else than graft! graft! There is, it is said, more money spent on graft, and in keeping Liberal members firm in their constituencies than is spent on administration.

In speaking of what he would do when he got to parliament he said that he would not presume to do very much, but since he has been able to write or speak, he has written and has spoken as best and earnestly as he could for the benefit and uplifting of the masses. (Cheers.) He would promise to continue to do so. He was in favor of cheapening municipal transportation, so that the masses, who are building up this

Old Lankmark Passed Away at Early Hour

One of the old landmarks of Peterborough, passed away early this morning in the person of Mrs. John McWilliams, of Roger street, Ashburnham. The deceased lady is the relict of the late John McWilliams, who passed away about a year ago. She has been ailing for the past couple of years, and her demise was not unlooked for, although she will be greatly missed by her many friends. She was born in the township of Smith, over eighty years ago, and was a resident of this city nearly all her life, where she was widely known and highly respected. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and in her younger days was a faithful attendant and worker. Those who survive her are, Mrs Constance, of New York, who is now in the city; William, of Winnipeg; Adam, Bridgenorth; Mrs. Carter, Miss Mary, and John, all of this city. Mrs. Rombough of Toronto, is the only sister living. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

He Denied All Connection with Orwell Case

(Times Special)

Aylmer, Oct. 11.—At a public meeting held in the town hall here last night, Mr. W. W. Rutherford, the Reform candidate for East Elgin, disowned all connection with the resurrection by the Toronto Globe of the Orwell charges.

War Clouds Clearing, Danger Point Passed for Present at Least

Times Special.

Belgrade, Oct. 11.—After a secret session lasting for more than twenty-four hours the Narodina-Skupshina, or National Assembly, adjourned without any definite decision. Another meeting will be held tomorrow, and will be open to the public. According to the most reliable information no vote was taken. The session was very stormy and was interrupted by frequent recesses.

War was demanded with Austria-Hungary, but the leader of the war faction cooled down after War Minister Milovanovics made a lengthy statement explaining why hostilities were impossible. The chief reason is the scarcity of ammunition at the batteries. It is now being transported to the batteries but has been detained on the Austrian lines.

The leader of the party complained that the government's protest to the foreign powers against the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina was not couched in sufficiently strong terms. The foreign minister, however, eventually succeeded in convincing the house of the correctness of the cabinet's attitude.

It is expected tomorrow the assembly will adopt a vote of confidence in the government.

For the moment the danger is passed, and Servia is expected to content herself temporarily by instituting a boycott against Austria-Hungary's commerce.

It was stated today that Milovanovics will shortly proceed to London, Paris and Rome to lay Servia's claims before the powers.

A representative of the French foreign office has arrived here on a special mission.

Despite the warlike language of the Crown Prince on Saturday, when he declared before the thousands that assembled before the palace that soon all would be able to offer their lives for thy fatherland, the demonstrations in the streets, are less numerous and less serious. The people are beginning to realize that war would annihilate Servia.

The reports published abroad of the general mobilization of Servia's army are incorrect. Only the first reserves have been called and it is not intended to summon the other classes yet. Only 400,000 men are under arms altogether.

Must a Married Woman Under 14 go to School?

Times Special.

Windsor, Oct. 11.—The Michigan authorities are trying to figure out whether or not they can compel a married woman who is only 14 years of age to go to school. For several days a truant officer of Bay City has been looking for Bertha Groves. She had been reported absent from school. Later she was located here, but the officer lost his nerve completely when she informed him that she was married to John Black, a lad, 18 years of age, who is living in Windsor.

Caught Wholesale Thief with Cargo of Spoils

Times Special.

Whitby, Oct. 11.—Frank Charles, a wholesale burglar and thief, was arrested here today. He was caught on a gasoline launch, which had been stolen from R. W. Clemens of Toronto. He also had a canoe and both were ladened with the spoils of many thefts. The cargoes included gold watches, furs, valuable rugs and wearing apparel, also some gramophone articles taken from the R.C.Y.C. club house and picture post cards addressed to Toronto people.

The thief was taken to the lock-up and placed behind the bars. The constables went down to the boats to secure the spoils, and while they were away the prisoner escaped by tearing up some boards in the floor of the lock-up. The constables are now telegraphing to all centers of Ontario for the police to be on the look-out.

Further Trouble Expected with American Fishermen

Times Special.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 11.—Further trouble between the Canadian officials and the American fishermen who were fired on a couple of days ago, is threatened. It is said a party of fishermen came to the city last night and secured a number of rifles and ammunition and left later in the night. The boat is reported to have bullet holes in it, alleged to have been received in the last battle.

Game Warden L. A. Land of the Canadian Soo has returned. He says he was not with Game Warden Calbeck when the fight took place, but he had heard about it.

"Women Possess Greater Degree of Intelligence than Men," Said Rev. Mr. Pogue

"Why men need the church," was the subject of a sermon delivered by Rev. Robt. Pogue in St. Paul's church last night, and which attracted a large number of the male sex. The reverend gentleman dealt with his subject in a very able and interesting manner. In opening his remarks the pastor stated that conditions in Peterborough and in Canada were vastly different from what they are in any other part of the world. He instanced Chicago where only seven per cent. of the men went to church at all, and of every hundred of these twenty only twenty-three took any active part. This is not, to say the least, at all complimentary to the men.

It is common everywhere that women are more active in the work of the church. This is not only because they are better and purer than men, but the reverend gentleman said he could prove that it was because of their greater intelligence, and for a man to say that "Only woman and children go to church," only proves himself less worthy of a woman.

The men who are doing the greatest work in the church, both in christian and heathen countries, are those possessed of the very highest degree of intelligence. Men need the church and the church needs men.

Corner Stone of St. Jame's. Church was Laid Saturday

Saturday afternoon the impressive ceremony of the laying of the corner stone of the new St. James' Methodist church was performed. A large number assembled at two o'clock to see it "well and truly laid," and to listen to the addresses of those in charge of the ceremony.

It had been arranged to have the Hon. Geo. A. Cox of Toronto, present, to perform the important duty, but owing to his inability to be there his place was taken by Mr. W. H. Morrow of Peterborough. Rev. Mr. McCulloch of Omemee, the president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, and Rev. H. J. Keith, president of the Peterborough Ministerial Association, assisted in the ceremony.

The land for the new church, was purchased from Mr. D. W. Dumble for $1,800, and the entire cost of building and ground is estimated at between $16,000 and $15,000. The contractors are Messrs. Finnie and Gordon, who sublet the stone work to Messrs. Sherwood and McFadden, the brickwork to Messrs. Goodwin and McFadden, the painting to Mr. Ralph Cartan, and the plastering to Mr. W. J. Henry. The work is expected to be finished by March 1, 1909. Mr. H. C. Stabler has been appointed inspector by the committee who have charge of the work. The personnel is as follows—Messrs. H. C. Stabler, chairman; D. W. Dumble, A. W. Cressman, B. F. Ackerman and Geo. Morrow. When the church has been placed on a firm footing after its opening, this committee will it is understood, resign in favor of members of St. James' church.

The silver trowel with which the corner stone of St. James' Methodist church was laid this afternoon was obtained from Mr. F. S. Schneider, the George street jeweller, and is a splendid piece of work, attracting much attention while on display in the window of the establishment during the past few days. The trowel bears the following inscription; "With this trowel Hon. Geo. A. Cox laid the corner stone of St. James' Methodist church, Peterborough, Oct. 10, 1908."

Locals may play Palmerston for Ontario Championship

The baseball season may not be closed in Peterborough until another game has been played here. The St. Andrew's of Toronto, will not be here, although the Potes are willing to go to Toronto, and give them a game. But it is understood that negotiations are on foot for home and home games with Peterboro. That town has a team which put it all over the St. Andrew's East ern Leaguers on Friday, and they are undoubtedly the best amateur team in Ontario outside of Peterborough, and it is a good batting proposition which of these we are the better.

Corney Burns has written the management of the Palmerston team and expects to hear from them shortly. There is no doubt but that such a game would be a drawing card.

Liberals Saturday Night Rally

There was an impressive assemblage of the Liberal workers on Saturday night at Mr. Stratton's headquarters on Simcoe street.

Mr. MacFarlane occupied the chair, and opened the proceedings in a breezy speech.

Mr. J. J. Hartley dwelt at length upon the recognition that had been accorded labor since 1896, the fair wage stipulation in public contracts and the general advance in wages that had resulted from prosperity being secured for the manufacturers through the intelligent adoption of the tariff to the conditions of the country.

Mr. William Yelland said he had always voted for Mr. Stratton, and he had never regretted it. Although they had sometimes differed in their judgment, Mr. Stratton had been a faithful and valuable servant of the people of Peterborough, and he should command their individual support. He hoped to see him elected in this constituency by a big majority.

Mr. Thos. Reid of Toronto, spoke of Mr. Stratton's recognized position in the great financial world, and the confidence which was felt in his ability and integrity in the big monied institutions. If they had such a candidate in Toronto they might have a hope of that city. He did not see how any intelligent constituency that was fortunate enough to have an opportunity of securing the services of such a man in parliament, could hesitate for a moment. He had no doubt of Mr. Stratton's return by over 1000 majority.

Mr. R. R. Hall made an energetic and eloquent speech in support of the policy of the government, and Mr. Stratton's candidacy.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, who received a demonstration of applause, discussed the issues of the day at length. He said his election was a foregone conclusion, but he asked every voter to his duty, and roll up such a majority as would forever silence the tongue of slander, and demonstrate that the confidence which they had always so generously extended to him, was in no degree abated. He would, when elected, devote all the energy and ability he possessed to see that Peterborough interests were given fair consideration in the departments at Ottawa, and received a fair share in the distribution of the expenditure for public improvements.

The meeting closed with cheers for the candidate and the King.

The 18-months-old child of William Baker of Lindsay, fell into a pail and broke its neck.

Chicago Won Second Match from Detroit by 6-1

(Times Special).

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 11.—A crowd of nearly 18,000 people saw the second game of the world's championship series played here today with Detroit. The game was anybody's up to the eighth innings, when Detroit went all to pieces, and the Cubs touched the plate six times.

The score was;—Chicago 6, Detroit 1.

A Case of Emergency

A doctor spending a rare and somewhat dull night at his own fireside received the following message from three fellow practitioners: "Please step over to the club and join us at a rubber of whist."

"Jane, dear," he said to his wife, "I am called away again. It appears to be a difficult case—there are three other doctors on the spot already."

Mothers Must Have Abundant Strength

No Mother Can Bear a Healthy Child Unless She is Strong Herself.

A woman's anxieties multiply tenfold about the time the new baby is expected.

If her strength is exhausted and her blood weak, it goes hard in the hour of trial.

Ferrozone should be used because it makes the blood nutritious and rich. By instilling new strength into every part of the body, it uplifts your spirits at once.

Childbirth is certainly made easier by Ferrozone. The following statement expresses the earnest gratitude of Mrs. M. E. Duckworth, of Durham. It is a woman's story,—of her own case—told that other women may profit by her experience;

"Before baby was born I was in a weak, miserable, nervous state. I had no reserve strength. I tried to build up, but nothing helped me. I looked upon the coming day with dread, knowing I was unequal to the occasion.

"Ferrozone braced me up at once, gave me strength and spirits, brought back my nerves and cheerfulness. From my experience with Ferrozone I recommend it to all expectant mothers."

There is more concentrated nourishment in Ferrozone than you can get from anything else. It supplies what weak systems need. Simply take one tablet at meals and you'll feel benefitted in a thousand ways.

Ferrozone makes healthy, virile, vigorous women; try it. 50c. per box of fifty tablets, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

Only a few weeks ago Emperor William in a speech that was widely commented upon, declared that the peace of Europe was entirely secure. This assertion was the more significant and encouraging since at that very time the Moroccan question was assuming a threatening aspect and developing a disagreement between Germany and France. So fine was then thinking of the Balkans and the near eastern problem, for everything seemed to be quiet in that "storm centre", and the general good will toward "the new Turkey", the Turkey of toleration, liberty and order, seemed to be an adequate guaranty of stability and peace.

What a dramatic and portentous change the situation has since undergone, not only in the Balkans but throughout Europe! Minor incidents, such as the Constantinople diplomatic banquet and the seizure by Bulgaria during a strike of a section of a railway owned by the Turkish government but operated by a private company, incidents that under ordinary circumstances would have been adjusted without difficulty, have been utilized or "exploited" to promote dangerous and far-reaching designs. Bulgaria, doubtless with the secret approval of some of the powers having aims of their own to grind, has repudiated Turkish sovereignty and defied the "European concert", she is clearly prepared to defend her proclaimed independence with all the military resources at her command, and in the ruling party at Constantinople shall decide on war, as it may, it may not prove possible to "localize" the conflict and prevent other Balkan states from jumping into the arena. Austria, too, "the whirlpool of Europe", with a superabundance of racial and political troubles on her hands, chooses this moment as a suitable one to violate the treaty of Berlin and annex the Turkish provinces which she has administered under a mandate of the concert. She does this knowing that other powers will either demand "compensating gains" or enter an indignant protest against a deliberate breach of faith and insist on another European congress to revise the treaty of Berlin, and also knowing that the young Turks are anxious to set their house in order and to satisfy the just claims of the races heretofore persecuted and subjected to all manner of outrage.

Already England has issued a strongly worded note of warning and admonition which is aimed at Austria even more than at little Bulgaria. France and Russia are certain to support England and decline to acquiesce in the Austrian "coup". Meantime the Turkish constitution and New regime are admittedly placed in jeopardy. The war with Russia in the "seventies" killed the first Turkish constitution, and another war, especially an unsuccessful one, would certainly endanger the second constitution, for there are reactionaries and plotters in the sultan's army and court as well as in the Russian army and bureaucracy.

The issue involved in the Balkan crisis are indeed grave and fateful.

JAPANESE MARINE INDEPENDENCE

The change in policy initiated by the management of the most important of the Japanese steamship companies, operating lines between Asia and this Continent, whereby European commanders of its vessels are to be supplanted by Japanese, is not one to cause surprise. The Japanese are not the people to admit that they are not equal to those of other nations in the conduct of commercial and industrial enterprises, whether on land or sea. There are special reasons also for the change to which we are referring. Questions of economy are involved, the Japanese commanders being willing to serve for smaller remuneration and accepting less favourable conditions in other respects than their European rivals. It is also said that latterly there has been a marked disinclination among the Japanese officers and crews of these vessels to serve under foreigners—a resentment against anything savoring of inferiority to other nations that has become noticeable in many ways in Japan since the war with Russia. It has yet to be seen, however, whether the disappearance of the European commander from the bridge of these vessels may not have a prejudicial effect on the passenger business, as far as foreigners are concerned.

AN UNFOUNDED PANIC

It is altogether too soon to cry out as some panicky press correspondents do, that there will be no conference of the powers, no possible plan of settlement, and no probable escape from war. The excitable Balkan population may be ready for war; but Europe will want to think the matter well over before it permits a conflagration to commence under its eyes. Once fighting begins in the Balkans, no man can tell where it will stop. A shot fired on the Servian frontier may be heard in the North Sea.

Russia naturally wants to re-open the question of the Dardanelles if there is to be a revision of the Berlin Treaty. Britain is said to be irrevocably opposed to such a step. But the British foreign office keeps its secrets pretty well; and it may be that Britain—secure in India—will no longer insist upon this bar to the Black Sea. It could hardly pretend to fear any Russian fleet that might issue thence. But there is, of course, the opinion of Turkey to consider; and Britain has suddenly appeared again as the defender of Turkey.

Austro-Hungary may not be willing to submit to a conference of the powers the question of the permanence of her annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina; but she might be willing to submit to them the matter of compensation to Turkey. Obviously Turkey has been subjected to loss by both the independence of Bulgaria and the final loss of the two Austrian provinces; and it would be no more than paying a decent regard to the properties to at least discuss whether she ought not to be compensated. Bulgaria could not give back her independence without a struggle; but she might be willing to recognize that Turkey has a claim against her that she could not meet with a cash payment or a trade treaty. Austria, for her part, would never argue that one nation may quietly annex a couple of provinces belonging to another nation without thinking of compensation. She has provinces of her own which might be taken.

Thus there are questions which might come before a conference of the powers without asking Austria to consider the possibility of giving up her "quarry" or demanding that Bulgaria shall think of pulling down her flag. That a deadlock should arise so soon, is thus absurd. The diplomats are only beginning to make their first moves. They will hurry a bit for fear of an explosion in the Balkans; but they will not admit failure until every resource has been exhausted.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

The Business Outlook

The most interesting and encouraging incident in the financial and commercial record of the week was the announcement of an increase of $46,000 in the earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway over the corresponding week in 1907. Now that the decline in the weekly earnings of that great road has apparently been checked, it may be reasonably anticipated that succeeding weekly returns will continue to show an improvement over those of last year. It is a satisfactory incident also from the circumstance that it would indicate that farmers are willing to sell their grain and thereby contribute to the financial relief that the proceeds of their crops will bring about by their sale. While the benefit that this will bring about will be most directly felt in centres like Winnipeg, indirectly it will have favourable effect on business in the East by the liquidation of debts incurred in the past.

Although there is little change in the local business situation, the fact that the bank clearings for the past week show a small increase over those for the corresponding week in last year—the first time for twelve months that a decrease has not been shown—must be regarded as an encouraging feature. In considering this matter the fact should not be overlooked that the range of price for many commodities is lower than it was a year ago, thus enabling business to be done with less money and thereby decreasing the aggregate amount of the cheques passing through the Clearing House, although the bulk of the commodities dealt with may be equal to or even greater than that of it was a year ago.

The Autumn trade throughout the country is likely to be satisfactory according to the reports reaching the wholesale centres from the outlying districts, and this applies to both Canada and the United States. There is, however, a disposition to take a conservative view of the immediate future and such a course is undoubtedly a wise and prudent one. The pending elections in the two countries exercise a quieting influence on general business, and there is a general disposition to await the results of the electoral contests before embarking on new enterprises. At the same time there is a consensus of opinion that things will improve in the New Year, and the existence of such a sentiment is itself a factor in bringing about an improvement.

While the condition of things in the United States has an effect on affairs on this side of the line, it is an influence that is decreasing with the development going on in Canada and the growth of that industrial independence which is being brought about by the progress being made in different lines of manufacture. The home market, which is now protected to a very great extent through the operation of the National Policy is becoming increasingly valuable to the Canadian manufacturer (with the growth of population, and the latter is sensibly stimulated by the influx of population into the North-West. That portion of the Dominion is exercising an influence on the course of events throughout the country far beyond what might be assumed from a consideration of the proportion which its population bears to that of the rest of Canada. The flow of immigration into that section is, therefore, a matter of no little interest. Although from various circumstances there has been a partial check to the influx during this year, there are already indications that the volume of the immigration next year will be large, both from Europe and the United States.

More Interest in the North West

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—The high grade and volume of the crop this year has been the means of further increasing the number of inquiries received by boards of trade throughout Western Canada, from all over the United States and Eastern Canada, asking for information in connection with openings for manufacturing and commercial business.

Real estate has been more active and several large deals in farm and city property are reported through the Western Canadian Real Estate Association here, an organization that practically covers the realty interests from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Coast.

A few of the more important sales were: 6,00 acres, Southern Alberta, to an American syndicate for $34,000; the Lansdowne Hotel at Regina for $160,000, sold by Mr. Alex. Bell, who purchased the property less than one year ago for $50,000. In Edmonton, 100 feet near Edmonton Club, sold for $25,000, and in Winnipeg an 80-foot frontage on Donald street has been sold for $35,000.

Mayor Darcy Scott of Ottawa, assistant chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners, will continue his mayoralty duties until the end of the year.

MADE IN HEAVEN.

By T. BLAIR EATON.

Copyrighted, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

The bishop had just landed a blue fish. It was a big fish, and before it was finally hauled into the cockpit of the Sally B. it had displayed undoubted qualities of gameness that had warmed the cockles of the bishop's heart.

Therefore, as Jim Crocker, who always took the bishop out when he fished in Sepenaessett bay, flattened down the sheet and headed the little catboat for the ripe once more there was a seraphic smile on the bishop's intellectual face.

He stood with one foot on the seat, paying out his line astern, his eyes taking in delightedly the sparkle and flash of the water and the little white clouds creeping up above the horizon.

Those clouds whispered of a smart breeze later on, and with the wind freshened a bit it would be an ideal day for fish. Anon the bishop turned to survey his latest catch, and each time as he did so he gave a little chuckle of satisfaction.

Suddenly there was a mighty tug at the line; astern was a flash of blue and silver as the fish leaped from the water. The bishop took a firmer hold on the line, and his eyes glowed with excitement.

"Ease her up a bit, Jim," he called to the man at the tiller. "Look at the fellow I've hooked this time. He's the father of them all!"

So engrossed was the bishop with his fish that he did not hear the quick panting of a gasoline engine, nor did he see the power boat tearing toward them, sending up twin waves of white spume at its bow.

Just as the second fish—and it was considerably larger than the first—was hauled aboard the Sally B. the coughing exhaust of the engine ceased and the power boat shot alongside.

There were two men in it—a big, athletic young fellow with clean cut features who stood beside the wheel in the bow and a small, dark man, evidently the engineer, perched on the seat by the engine amidships.

"THAT'S THE MORNING BOAT TO THE ISLAND."

"Hello!" the big young man hailed them. "Is this Bishop Carrington's boat?"

"I am Bishop Carrington," said the bishop.

"Good," said the other, with much relief. "Bishop, I wish to goodness you'd have spread the news abroad last night that you were down here. It would have saved me no end of worry. As it is, we've time enough yet. I'm going to ask you to do me a favor, if you will—a very great favor. My name is Devereaux—John Henderson Devereaux. I think you knew my father very well."

"Look here," said the bishop, "are you Billy Devereaux's son?"

"The same," young Devereaux grinned.

"My boy," said the bishop heartily, "come aboard."

"There isn't time," said the younger man. "Bishop, as I say, I am going to ask a favor of you."

"Don't hesitate to do so," said the bishop graciously.

"I want you to come with me in the power boat to Dark island."

"Well, well, well!" said the bishop, the while a frown wrinkled his brows. "That will be an hour's run in that boat of yours. Another, too, to get back here, and the fishing this morning is particularly good. Am I very necessary to your plans, whatever they are?"

The young man in the power boat leaned forward eagerly.

"Bishop," said he, "I just watched you land that last fish of yours, and the manner in which you did it told me—pardon my frankness—that you have a bit of sporting blood in your veins. Therefore I think this favor I am going to ask of you you'll grant me. I can get you to Dark island in this craft in forty-five minutes by driving her, and we can get back home in the same time. I'll promise you won't be away from your fishing over two hours. Will you come?"

"You are Billy Devereaux's son," mused the bishop. "For that reason I consent. Nothing else, I assure you, would take me from this fishing."

Reluctantly he climbed into the power boat. "I'll be back in two hours, Jim," he called to the boatman. He turned to the young man at the wheel. "Now, then, my fine kidnaper, make all speed for Dark island, and while we are getting there suppose you tell me what is at the bottom of all this."

"A lady," said Devereaux simply as the boat went tearing across the bay.

"So I surmised," said the bishop dryly. "Do you mind telling me her name?"

"You probably know her," said the other. "It's Marguret Sterling."

"Yes, I know her," said the bishop. "Now a few details, if you please."

"Of course you know her aunt, Mrs. Bradbury?" said the younger man.

"I do," said the bishop, with a certain grim emphasis.

Young Devereaux pointed to a trail of smoke just above the southern horizon.

"You see that smoke?" he asked. "Well, that's the morning boat to the island. On that boat are Margaret's aunt and Sir William Winterham, with all his titles trailing him. He arrived from England yesterday, and Mrs. Bradbury is bringing him up here to the Crags. The rest is obvious. Mrs. Bradbury's word is law with Margaret, who has lived with her aunt all her life. It's a splendid match from Mrs. Bradbury's point of view."

He paused.

"Go on," the bishop commanded.

"Well, I have different views on the subject," said Devereaux, with a sudden squaring of his broad shoulders that filled the bishop with secret admiration, "and down in her heart I am sure Margaret has too. When Mrs. Bradbury and Sir William, with all his distinctions, land at the steamboat pier, which is just in front of the Crags, I want Mrs. John Henderson Devereaux to be the first to greet them. That is the favor I want to ask of you. You catch my meaning, I trust?"

"Well, bless me!" said the amazed bishop. He sat silent for a time. Then "Bless me!" he said again. "The impudence of you—the astounding impudence!"

He began to chuckle softly.

"Is this boat going at her best speed?" he asked. "We've got to make Dark island ahead of that steamer. I say we've got to."

The steamer was whistling off the island when the power boat shot up to the pier by the Crags, and the bishop and young Devereaux, scrambling out, hurried up the path to the big house among the pines. As they reached the piazza a radiant girl came forward to meet them. Devereaux, breathless, but with shining eyes, wasted no time in greetings.

"Margaret," said he, "this is my father's oldest friend, Bishop Carrington. He is here to marry us—at once, before that steamer docks."

"Oh!" said the girl, flushing beautifully. "Oh!"

For the moment she seemed utterly bewildered. Then she turned to the bishop with a smile of comprehension.

"Are you quite ready, bishop?" she asked with quiet pride, taking her place by the young man's side.

"Dearly beloved brethren, we are gathered together here"— began the bishop in sonorous tones, when the steamboat whistle, sounding close to the pier, interrupted him.

"We had best abbreviate," he said hurriedly. "The boat will be in before we can finish the complete service."

Five minutes later the bishop was congratulating the happy pair before him.

"And now," said he, a bit uneasily, "if you'll lend me your power boat and your engineer, John, I think I'll get back to the bay. The fishing is simply wonderful this morning, and—er—besides, I think it would perhaps be prudent under the circumstances for me to meet Mrs. Bradbury a little later."

Two Opinions.

Lawyer Smart—Good morning, Mr. Gall. What can I do for you today?

"I want to get your opinion on a matter of law."

"Yes."

"My hens got into my neighbor Brown's yard, and he poisoned them. What I want to know is, can I recover damages?"

"Certainly. It was malicious mischief on his part, besides being a destruction of your property."

"Thanks. But hold! I stated that wrong. It was Brown's hens got into my yard, and it was I who administered the poison."

"Ah, yes; I see. That puts a different color upon the transaction, and it is clear that he, in the person of his hens, was the trespasser, whereas in leaving the poison on your premises you were quite unaware that his fowls would eat it. It was purely an accident, so far as you were concerned."

"Thanks. How much?"

"Thirteen and fourpence."

"Why, that's just twice what you asked for a legal opinion the other day!"

"I know it; but, you see, I have given you two opinions today."—London Tit-Bits.

The Celtics and Amen.

I once witnessed a phase of prompt evolution of practical and of devotional religion in Scotch sheep dogs on a communion Sabbath among the mountains. The churchyard was crowded with shepherds, accompanied by their dogs, which lay quietly asleep at the feet of their masters. The sermon was finished, the psalm had been sung, the final prayer was being offered, and there was no sign of impatience, but the moment the benediction commenced the devotional doggies all roused themselves, and before the "Amen" they were in marching order.—"Herman Hall—An Autobiography."

... The ... Coward

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyrighted, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

"I must give you back your freedom. I will not tell you why, because you would call my reasons absurd. In justice to you it must be so. Try to forgive me." So wrote Jack Brierson when he broke his engagement, and Miss Abernethy pressed her white lips together scornfully and sent back the betrothal ring by registered mail in a very practical manner.

Then because the long, enervating spring days had robbed her cheeks of their wonted bloom and the germs of a convenient "malaria" had dulled the brightness of her brown eyes Rose Abernethy's guardian aunt carried her bodily away into the bracing Adirondack region, where they lived the simple life of the woods and inhaled vigor and peace with the sweet air.

Gradually the cynical lines faded from Rose's face, and when the summer brought a greater influx of visitors to the large hotels she found herself back in that whirl of pleasure of which she had always necessarily been a part.

One afternoon she went to her favorite retreat on the brink of the Falling hill, where a huge bowlder under the pines afforded a comfortable seat.

Here she had come every day to witness the glorious pageantry of the sunset, and her joy in its recurring splendor was always tinged with dread of the sheer precipice that yawned at her feet.

Now she was reveling in the solitude of the spot when slow, hesitating steps broke the silence. She turned as a man came into view, parting the bushes with a familiar brown hand. It was Jack Brierson.

Apparently he did not see her, for he continued his faltering advance almost to the very edge of the hill. Then he stopped and looked away toward the west with level eyes and a face so stilled from all emotion that its very tenseness was eloquent of pain.

Rose Abernethy's face paled as she watched him curiously. It seemed very strange to be watching Jack at this remote distance with that empty feeling in her heart and brain. She didn't even hate him. Some girls might have done so after being jilted, but somehow she didn't care. She leaned forward breathlessly as he suddenly raised the light stick which he carried and made another step toward the brink of the precipice.

"LET GO!" HE SAID HOARSELY. "YOU ARE RISKING YOUR LIFE!"

"Don't!" she cried involuntarily, and she stepped around the pine and held out a protesting hand.

Brierson turned sharply, and his blank gaze met her own—unrecognizing, indifferent.

"I thought I was alone," he said courteously, removing his hat.

"I—I thought you did not see that you were so near the edge of the precipice," she said in a low tone and with burning cheeks.

He felt about with his stick in a clumsy, unseeing manner and dislodged a stone, which went hurtling down the steep incline with an alarming crackle of twigs and earth. He stood in a listening attitude until the echoes had died away, and then he extended one hand with a helpless gesture.

"I am sorry to trouble you, madam, but—I am blind. Will you kindly turn me about into the safe path?"

Something warm came into the girl's heart as he spoke, and her lips quivered painfully. She laid a small hand on his coat sleeve. As she did so the turf crumbled under his feet, and, with a startled cry, he sank away from her over the brink of the precipice.

Strengthening her grasp on his sleeve as his weight pulled her downward, she threw her strong young body on the ground and clutched with her free hand at the tough branches of a stunted cedar.

"Let go!" he said hoarsely. "You are risking your life!"

"I shall not let go," she replied decisively. "Except for your blindness you are a strong man?"

"Yes," he said impatiently, "but you must release me at once, madam! If I have been foolish enough to jeopardize my own life you must not sacrifice yours!"

"If you are strong you can pull yourself up by the aid of this cedar tree. I will bend it down—so—there! Now, draw yourself up, and I will help you on to firm ground."

Five minutes later he lay panting on the ground at her feet. "I am very grateful"— he began eagerly, when her crisp, cool voice stopped the words on his lips.

"I am more than repaid," she said, with cruel emphasis. "I never met a coward before!"

"A—coward!" he stammered, sitting up and turning his sightless eyes toward her.

"A coward!" she repeated firmly. "You see—I know—Rose Abernethy."

"Ah, you have the advantage of me, madam. Your flattering words indicate that you have some knowledge of my affairs."

His face was very red, and his black brows were drawn together in an angry frown.

"I know enough—to form an opinion," said Miss Abernethy coldly. "I will tell you why I believe you to be a coward if you wish."

He smiled grimly.

"You have been good enough to save a very worthless life. Go on."

"You are a coward because you are afraid to let Rose Abernethy know that you are blind. You denied her the right to share your affliction and to let her money make things easier for you. She would gladly have shared her paltry dollars with you."

"You don't understand, whoever you are," he said shortly. "I am a poor man. I had just reached a point where my fortunes depended upon the keenness of every faculty, and this blindness came upon me like a stroke of lightning. I could not ask Rose—beautiful, bright Rose—to play nurse and Lady Bountiful to a miserable blind beggar." He dropped his face in his hands and, forgetful of her presence, groaned bitterly.

"You have forgotten her. She had some rights. You could never have really loved her, Mr. Brierson."

He lifted a ghastly face.

"God knows I did, I do, I always shall, but I could not ask her to wait on indefinitely, and I know her unselfish nature, capable of any sacrifice. She would lose youth and everything that goes to make up her joy in life. I could not—I had not the courage to face her and tell her the truth. You are quite right. I am a coward."

There was a long silence after that, while the sun sank behind a distant range and long, cool shadows fell over the two sitting among the pine needles. The man sat with his hands clasped about his knees, while his countenance settled into that impassive calm with which he had first faced the sunset.

The girl watched him with pitying eyes and trembling lips. Twice she parted them to speak, and each time her voice died away in her pretty, white throat.

"And the doctors said?" she asked at last.

"That the sight might return as suddenly as it went or a costly operation might effect a cure. Overstrain has paralyzed the optic nerves," he replied without moving.

Rose sprang to her feet, and for the first time that afternoon her voice rang out clear and sweet:

"It is growing late, Jack. Will you take me back to the camp?"

Brierson was beside her instantly, with groping hands.

"Rose, Rose," he cried joyfully, "it is you! It has been you all the time?"

"Yes," she said, withdrawing from his touch with a confusion he could not perceive. "You must let me show you the way, and then"—

"And then"—he echoed breathlessly, "and then—you will not leave me—you will forgive my mental blindness and my cowardice?"

"You do not need me," she ventured wistfully.

"Ah, dear heart, I did not know how much I needed you!" he cried remorsefully. "You will forgive my brutality and show me the way to happiness once more?" He turned appealing, sightless eyes and beseeching hands toward her.

She placed her hand in his. "Come, Jack," she said.

Laughing Gas For Poets.

Sir Humphry Davy was the first to inhale nitrous oxide. His experiment was the result of a report published by a brother chemist that laughing gas, called by him oxide of septon, was the cause and basis of all contagion. Cautious experiments made with the diluted gas produced no ill effects, and Davy proceeded to inhale considerable quantities of the pure gas. Contrary to his expectations, the effects were highly pleasurable. Thrills of pleasure pervaded his body, and his mind was filled with ideas and emotions of the most exalted kind, which, however, were very indistinct when the effect of the gas passed off. It occurred to Sir Humphry Davy that the gas might be useful in promoting poetic inspiration, and he accordingly tried writing verse while under its influence, but the recorded result hardly shows a close connection between the diving afflatus and nitrous oxide. Davy's experiments had the effect of making the inhalation of laughing gas for a time highly fashionable, so that in 1802 a French writer alludes to it as having become a national vice in England.

Woman's World

MRS. HERBERT ASQUITH.

The Brilliant Wife of the Premier of England.

It would probably be no exaggeration to say that Mrs. Asquith, wife of the premier of England, is the most brilliant woman in England. As a girl she was so brilliant that young men fought shy of her, and she was always to be found surrounded by elderly statesmen or middle aged men of tremendous learning and sparkling wit. There was nothing of the bluestocking about her, though she could talk entertainingly on any subject. She was dashing, volatile, spirituelle, delightfully inconsistent and possessed a fund of deep womanly sympathy that endeared her to men who were really great. The friends of her girlhood were such men as Gladstone, Tennyson and Balfour. The German emperor rode with her in Hyde park and danced endless waltzes with her at

MRS. HERBERT ASQUITH.

Buckingham palace, and she was a friend of the czar of Russia.

Margot Tennant was the third daughter of the late Sir Charles Tennant, who made an enormous fortune in Spanish copper mines and in the manufacture of chemicals.

Most people predicted that Miss Tennant would never marry. She had been engaged by the rumor mongers of society several times, among the men with whom her name had been linked being Lord Rosebery and Arthur Balfour, but she reached the age of thirty and was still a maid. Then, in 1894, society was amazed by the announcement of her engagement to Herbert Asquith.

Mr. Stead was truly prophetic then when he wrote of "helping a statesman to climb the steeps that lead to the premiership of the empire," for Mrs. Asquith has guided her husband's course with so sure and skilful a hand that he is today, thirteen years after Mr. Stead wrote those lines, premier of the empire.

How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure.

Mrs. Sarah S. Jackson in the Designer has a talk on how a beautiful figure may be acquired, and this is what she says:

"One of the best ways to obtain a graceful carriage and beautiful figure is by practicing deep breathing in conjunction with various exercises.

"The modern woman, whether she be in the crowded city or the smaller towns and country places, does not exercise enough, and as a consequence her body suffers. Or perhaps she does exercise vigorously in one particular direction, thereby developing one portion at the expense of another. This is wrong. She should be symmetrically developed throughout."

The writer then gives the following exercise to be tried in the morning when you first get up:

"Begin by bending your head over to the right side as far as it will go, and while holding it in this position slowly turn it to the back, to the left and to the front. Now reverse the movement, keeping this up about ten minutes."

For enlarging the arms she recommends playing ball for ten or fifteen minutes a day. Besides being capital fun, you'll soon have lovely rounded arms and be able to wear short sleeves.

Another exercise, called the fan exercise, is for reducing the waist. It is also a good general developer of the whole body. It strengthens the back, benefits the lungs and makes the whole body supple. This is the method:

Secure two little Japanese paper fans and, standing in front of an open window, draw a deep breath, filling your lungs to their fullest extent. Now, holding your breath, raise your arms straight above your head, holding a fan in each hand. Keep your knees perfectly straight and bend over until the fans touch the floor; then recover original position and exhale.

This is to be kept up for ten or fifteen minutes unless you are very tired. It is well to bear in mind that vigorous exercise, and a great deal of it, must be the order of the day. In the development of the chest there are many ways of obtaining the desired extra inches, but massage and deep breathing are all that is necessary, and if practiced for six weeks by the thin chested girl the result will be surprising.

Living to Scale.

"A recent editorial in a magazine devoted to women is headed with the words "Living to Scale."

"Life is a relative proportion," says the writer, who shows how this is true not only in the adjustment of time and strength, but in the disposal of money as well.

To live successfully one must live to a scale—that is, things must be so proportioned that they will come out right in the end. To give point to his theory, the writer quotes the experience of a young lawyer and his wife whose one extravagant wish was the possession of an automobile.

Their income was not large, but they bent every energy to the desired end and before long were able to purchase the costly machine which was to be their one luxury.

But having an automobile which accommodated four people meant that they often took their friends about, either to the theater in town, since they lived in the country, or out for a week end to their home, with frequent drives and pleasant little supper parties en route. Aside from the constant cost of repairs and running, the machine proved to be the means of much expense.

The point is the possession of the machine brought them up on to the wrong scale. The mere purchase of it had not been as disastrous to their financial ship as had the more lavish scale of living into which it had plunged them.

This living to scale, and the right scale at that, is one of the hardest things that a woman has to do, for it is very largely the woman, who conducts the home, who sets the standard of living.

The Plain Girl.

Volumes could be written about the unnecessary sorrows of the plain girl. Not one girl in a thousand is ugly, but a large proportion are what might be termed badly turned out. Now, if the plain girl only knew it, this is her golden age. Things have advanced since the days of our grandmothers, when the pensive, delicate creature that sighed and arched her brows and was wonderfully fair to look upon not only demanded but commanded the slavish worship of men. After all, there is no phase of femininity so attractive as the plain girl that is as neat as a new pin and whose wits have been sharpened by the fact she has no beauty to trade on or foolishly offer as a substitute for brains. Of course there are men who always will follow in the train of prettiness, but it may be taken almost as an invariable rule that if happiness does not come to the plain girl before marriage it comes to her after marriage, for the plain girl usually wins the discriminating man, the man who is fully awake to the truth that beauty is only skin deep. In the ranks of society within the last few years the plain girl has had things practically her own way. She has defeated her lovelier sister time after time in fair competition for desirable matches, and she has done it simply because the plainness which is her secret sorrow has driven her to mental alertness.

Weeds or Flowers?—A Word to Girls.

Nothing but plenty to do can possibly keep our minds fresh and sweet and wholesome and strong and hence strengthening for others. Feeling is the only part of a woman's nature which will develop of itself. Her mind will not grow unless definitely cultivated, and no more will her conscience, but if she leaves the field fallow weeds of foolish feelings and fancies spring up on all sides.

This is why it is your duty not to allow yourself to be idle, not only because God expects you to bring your sheaves with you at the last day, but because your field cannot stand empty. If good grain is not there, weeds will be. And manual work—gardening or housework—gives more fresh air to the mind than anything else.

If you ever, as Punch expresses it, "find your doll stuffed with sawdust," if life seems a disappointment and you are a prey to foolish fancies, and have lost your spring, then try being really tired out in body by useful work and see if you do not find it an effectual tonic.

A Backhanded Compliment.

The following backhanded compliment, paid to Dr. Edward Everett Hale, is said to have been very much enjoyed by him:

In his younger days he was about to leave a parish, and a good old lady was bewailing the fact and insisting that the church would be ruined thereby. Dr. Hale, says Judge, flattered by her words and manner and wishing to console her, said:

"But, sister, the man who will succeed me is a fine preacher and a splendid fellow. You'll soon see that everything is all right and get used to it."

"No, no, I won't," she answered tearfully. "I don't get used to this changing. I've seen six changes in preachers now, and it's got worse and worse all the time."

Pear and Orange Preserve.

A dozen pears, a cup of sugar, the juice and a little of the rind of an orange. Peel and cut the pears and place in the kettle. Put sugar and juice over them, then another dozen, another cup of sugar and juice and rind, and so on, as many as you wish to use. Fix them at night and let them stand all night. In the morning put on the stove and cook until the peel is tender. Do not put in one drop of water. Two and a half dozen Bartletts will fill about six pint jars.

At a Japanese Auction.

Japanese auctions are conducted on the silent plan. Each bidder writes his name and bid upon a slip of paper, which he places in a box. When the bidding is over, says Home Notes, the box is opened by the auctioneer and the goods are declared the property of the highest bidder.

The Plow Woman

By ELEANOR GATES,

Author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl."

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY.

A story of the winning of the west; of the ways and wiles of the savage Sioux; of brave soldiers and daring frontiersmen; of a stubborn hate coming down from the civil war; of love tender, brave and true. A story with a group of heroes—a tender fledgeling from West Point; a storekeeper with good nerve and a big heart; an old evangelist who dares all perils for the love of God and man; a young girl with courage ample for paraship, danger and renunciation of more than life; an Uncapapa chieftain, degraded to wear the garb of a squaw and herd with the dogs, who shall seek to earn again the plumes of a warrior. Two animals, even, a young bull and a thoroughbred mare, shall play daring parts of no mean importance. He who reads shall know that a tale of Dakota of thirty years ago may kindle and inspire as much as any story of times remote; that the days of romance are near, not far off. The narrative begins quietly and rises steadily in interest to a climax as absorbing and inspiring as has been presented in any novel or drama, old or new.

CHAPTER I.

THE coulee was a long scarlet gash in the brown level of the Dakota prairie, for the sumach, dyed by the frosts of the early autumn, covered its sides like a cloth whose upper folds were thrown far over the brinks of the winding ravine and, southward, half way to the new cottonwood shack of the Lancasters. Near it, a dark band against the flaming shrub, stretched the plowed strip, narrow, but widening with each slow circuit of the team as the virgin grass grown land was turned by the mold board to prepare for the corn planting of the coming spring.

The sun, just risen, shone coldly upon the plain, and a wind, bearing with it a hint of raw weather and whirling snow, swept down the Missouri valley from the north, marshaling its frost hosts of gabbling ducks and honking geese that were taking noisy flight from a region soon to be buried and already bleak. Yet, with all the chill in the air, Ben and Betty, the mules, steamed as they toiled to and fro and lolled out their tongues with the warmth of their work and the effort of keeping straight in the furrow, and Dallas, following in their wake with the reins about her shoulders and the horns of the plow in a steadying grasp, took off her slouch hat at the turnings to bare her damp forehead, drew the sleeve of her close fitting jersey across her face every few moments, and at last, to aid her in making better progress, as well as to cool her ankles, brought the bottom of her skirt through the waistband front and back and walked in her red flannel petticoat. As she traveled she looked skyward occasionally with a troubled face and, resting but seldom, urged the team forward. Clear weather and sunshine would not long continue, and the first field on the claim must be turned up and well harrowed before the opening of winter.

"Come, Ben, come," she called coaxingly to the nigh mule. "If you don't dig in now, how d' you expect to have anything to eat next winter? Betty, Betty, don't let Ben do it all; I'm talking to you too. Come along, come along."

Ben and Betty, lean and gray with age, bent willingly to their labor at the sound of her voice. Their harnesses creaked a monotonous complaint with their renewed efforts; the colter came whining behind them. As Dallas gently slapped the lines along their backs now and then to emphasize her command clouds of dust which had been gathered as mud in the buffalo wallow where they went each evening to roll ascended and were blown away. Faithfully they pulled, not even lifting an eyelid or flapping an ear in protest when Simon, the stray yearling bull that had adopted the claim as its home and tagged Dallas everywhere, bellowed about their straining legs or loitered at their very noses and impeded their way.

Plowing was strange work to the patient mules and to the girl who was guiding them. To her the level prairie, rank with goldenrod, pink flowered smartweed and purple aster, was a land of wondrous growth. For twenty years her home had been an arid mesa far to the south, where her father captained the caretakers of a spur railroad track. The most western station house in Texas, standing amid thorny mesquite, was her birthplace and that of her sister Marylyn. The gray plateau across which the embankment led was their playground. There they grew to womanhood under the careful guidance of their frail northern born mother.

And then two casualties, coming close upon each other, had suddenly changed their life. Their father was brought home one night so maimed and crushed by the wheels of a flat car that he could never hope to take up his work again, and while he lay, bandaged and broken, fighting to keep the soul in his crippled body, their mother bravely yielded her life to a lingering illness.

Many months later, when Evan Lancaster's wounds were at last healed, Ben and Betty were unhitched from a dirt laden scraper on the siding and put before a white topped prairie schooner. Then the old section boss, with his crutches beside him and his daughters seated in the all but empty box behind, said a husky farewell to the men crowding around the wagon and started the mules along the road that led northward beside the rails.

He gave no backward glance at the wind battered house where he had brought an ailing bride. Instead, eager to leave that plain of flying sand and scanty grasses, he drove the team rapidly forward, bound for a country where there were wells and not water cars, where rain fell oftener and where food, both for man and beast, could be got easily from the earth. But Dallas, seated in the schooner's bed, her weeping sister held soothingly against her breast, watched, dry eyed, as a mound by a giant mesquite faded slowly from her sight and saw her girlhood's home give way, as a lighthouse sinks behind a speeding vessel, until only its gray sprinkled roof showed through the scattered trees. Then, after pillowing Marylyn's head on a Navajo blanket beside the swashing water cask, she climbed forward to the driver's seat and took the reins from her father.

It was April, and when the mesa was left far to rearward a world almost forgotten by the crippled section boss burst in new, green loveliness upon his desert children. Towering pines and spreading oaks, lush grass strewn with blossoms, clear running streams and gay feathered birds replaced thirsty vegetation, salt lakes and hovering vultures. They traveled slowly, each day bringing some fresh delight to ear and eye, until one evening in the waning Dakota summer they camped beside a great crooked split in the prairie, on a flat peninsula made by a sweeping westward bend of the muddy Missouri.

Across the river from their stopping place, where an amber sun was going down, the horizon was near. High bluffs, like a huge windbreak, stood upon the plain, leaving at their feet only enough space for the whitewashed frame buildings of Fort Brannon. But to the east the paralleling bluffs lay at a distance and broke their ridgeback far up the scarlet coulee; from where, southward, stretched a wide gap—ten broad and gently undulating miles—that ended at the slough studed base of Medicine mountain. Even Lancaster, as he stood bareheaded under the unclouded sky, looked about him upon acres heavy with tangled grass and weeds, and pleased with the evident richness of the untouched ground and with the sheltered situation of the claim on the bend, swore that the white topped schooner, with its travel stained crew of three, had found on the yellow billows of that northern prairie its permanent moorings at last.

The felling and hewing of cottonwoods for the shack had occupied the first few weeks that followed, citizen carpenters from Brannon doing the heavy cutting and lifting. But when the little house stood, its square log room and dirt floor open to the sun, Dallas performed her part of the building, and thatched the hip roof with coarse grass from a meadow. Next, the well was dug, and the barn built as a lean-to, for the Lancasters knew little, but had heard much, about the blizzards of the territory. Then, while the elder girl covered the slanting rafters over Ben and Betty's stalls, the section boss hauled a scanty stock of hay and provisions from Clark's, a cattle camp and settlement to the northeast. And finally, when shack and barn were alike done, Dallas put the mules to the end of an oak beam and took up the task of plowing.

Now she was winding at a black mat that was gradually growing upon the brown carpet of the prairie. Up and down she walked, her whiplash trailing behind her like a lively snake, her hands striving to guide the cleaving share she followed, a look of deep content, despite all fear for bad weather, upon her sun browned face.

But while working the morning hours slowly away she gave full attention to the nodding mules and the young bull straggling at their head, she did not stop to watch the flocks winging by above her or to look off to where the plains fell away from the pale azure line of the sky, so she failed to see, at the middle of the long forenoon, a group of dark figures that came into sight to the eastward and moved slowly forward in the direction of the bend.

Toward noon, however, the furrows were turned less regularly. Ben and Betty were so tired that they no longer drew evenly, but wavered from side to side. Again and again the off mule and value advanced from 10 cents per share to $5.00. That is what an investment in a California Mother Lode mine did for me. My great regret now is, and has long been, that I did not secure a larger interest.

But now our Company owns outright one and one-half-miles of the same California Mother Lode and its promise is better than the other was at the same stage. It can be reached any day from San Francisco.

Power and hoisting machinery is installed and paid for. Development work is done exposing a quartz ledge 20 feet wide at 170 feet depth extending laterally and down indefinitely. Assays of this immense body of ore prove up a great mine. The usual mining risks are therefore practically eliminated.

We need and want milling equipment immediately, and are therefore offering a block of stock at the sacrifice price of ten cents per share (par value $1.00) for quick sale.

Write immediately for full particulars. Local agent wanted.

The gold mining property owned outright by the company consists of 7 claims, 4 in the Rawhide district of Nevada, and 3 in the Dulzura district of Southern California.

The Rawhide district to-day is more famous than Goldfield, Tonapah, Bullfrog, or Searchlight were at the same stage of exploration and development. The Dulzura discovery is one of the most sensational in the history of California.

Ten samples of ore which were among the first assayed, ran as high as $7,401.57 to the ton, and all ten averaged over $1,600 a ton.

In both camps we located early, and our locations are choice. Our own officers will superintend the mining.

Simon Fraser's 100 Years

New Westminster has just celebrated the centenary of Simon Fraser. One hundred years have elapsed since this great explorer, one of the few pathfinders of the Western Hemisphere who can be claimed as a Canadian, went down the Fraser River to the sea. It is true that Fraser, like most of the men who penetrated the West in the first quarter of the Nineteenth century, was of Scottish birth, but he came to Canada as a child, and silent though the medium of his long life in the land that now acknowledges its great debt to him. Not in Canada alone that salutes the memory of Simon Fraser, for at the New Westminster ceremonies were men of science and men of affairs from the United States, as well as Governor Meade, of the State of Washington. The presence of the visitors from the other side suggests the reflection that if Fraser had been an American his daughter would not have been permitted to pass the last years of her life in a charitable institution. It is not good to think that it was not until Miss Fraser was breathing her last that the new seame to her of British Columbia's tardy recognition of her claims upon the province in the shape of an annuity of $660.

THE YOUNG FUR TRADER.

Simon Fraser was born on the Hudson River, his father, a captain in the British army, having been thrown into prison after Burgoyne's surrender, where he was joined by his devoted wife. Soon after the death of her husband the mother took her child and fled to Canada, settling in Cornwall, where her son spent his early youth. It was not possible in the poverty-stricken condition of the little family, to give the boy much of an education, for he had early to shift for himself and support his mother. He was sixteen when he went to Montreal and entered the service of the North-West Trading Company. He worked as a clerk for some years, but was soon transferred to the West, where he served his masters so well that at the age of twenty-six he was chief factor for the company and a partner in the business.

ON TO THE PACIFIC.

Before 1806 the great fur traders had stopped at the wall imposed by the Rocky Mountains, but in this year it was determined to carry the business beyond to the Pacific slope, and Fraser was appointed to take charge. He entered the Rockies by way of the Peace River, and explored the region thus opened up. On a stream which he called the Stuart, after his faithful assistant, Fraser built a post which he called New Caledonia, the name later spreading until it included all British Columbia. Fourteen years before, Sir Alexander Mackenzie had crossed the Rockies, and had followed for a considerable distance the course of a mighty river which he mistook for the Columbia. He left the stream at a point where Fort Alexandria was afterwards built. To take up the course of the "Columbia" from this point was the next task set before Fraser. This he accomplished, and as David Thompson was at the same time following the course of the Columbia for the North-West Company, it was discovered that the river on which Fraser was at work was a hitherto uncharted water course. It was, in fact, the Fraser we now know by his name.

DOWN THE FRASER.

The descent from the mouth of the Stuart River to the sea occupied forty-two days, but on the way back the explorers cut down the time by nine days. Even to-day from the safe vantage point of a Pullman car the route that Fraser, followed seems appalling, and a century ago it was surely one of the wildest, toughest journeys ever undertaken. Fraser's diary gives an account of many a thrilling adventure, but the obstacles served merely as a spur to the explorers, and they passed safely to the sea and back again in ten weeks. Fraser remained in the position of chief factor in the West until 1821, when he retired, and, returning east, married a Miss McDonnell, of Matilda, Ont., thereafter residing some years in Montreal. Later in life he returned to the Township of Cornwall, where he had passed his childood and died at St. Andrew's, in Cornwall Township, at the age of 86, in 1862. His nearest living relative is his niece, Miss Charlotte Fraser, of Hamilton.

HONOR THE PIONEER.

Simon Fraser is remembered in the great river, which bears his name. From far inland, through fearful by the feet of great mountains, the Fraser runs. On one shore is the Canadian Pacific, bearing witness to the progress of the country. On the other is the old road to the goldfields, testifying to the energy of the pioneers. So long as the world lasts this waterway will tell Simon Fraser's story.

"The Plow Woman,"

(By Eleanor Yates)

A New Serial Story

"The Plow Woman" by Eleanor Gates, is the title of a new serial story which will be published for the first time in The Morning Times this morning. Watch for it. Read it. Then tell us what you think of it.

It is a story of the winning of the West; of the way and wiles of the savage Sioux; of brave soldiers and frontiersmen; of a stubborn race coming down from the Civil War; of love tender, brave and true. He who reads shall know that a tale of Dakota of thirty years ago may kindle and inspire as much as any story of remote times; that the days of romance are near, not far off. The narrative begins quietly and rises steadily in interest to a climax as absorbing and inspiring as has been presented in any novel or drama, old or new.

Watch for Monday morning's Times and start with the first of the story.

Warships to be Fast and Better Armament

St. Petersburg, Oct. 12. — The naval budget was submitted to the duma today. It amounts to $44,067,500, an increase over last year of $616,000. The construction account is $8,135,000, of which $3,771,000 is for new construction. This decrease is due to the fact that the appropriation for construction of 1906 has not been touched, as no decision regarding the design of new battleships was reached. The present programme includes the building of four battle ships of 23,000 tons each, five torpedo boat destroyers to have a speed of thirty-five knots, and three submarines. The original estimates of the cost of the battle ships have been increased by one-third owing to the greater speed and better arament provided for.

ROBBERS GET $35,000.

It came out to-day that the proceeds of the train robbery near Vilna eight days ago were very much greater than was at first estimated. The robbers got away with a little over $30,000. Of this amount $150,000 was in registered letters, mostly bank correspondence.

The trial has begun in this city of a band of swindlers, who, by means of forged documents, were successful in securing the savings of a number of the Russian sailors who perished in the battle of the Sea of Japan. Among the criminals are several officials attached to one of the ministries.

CHOLERA IS DECREASING.

The cholera in St. Petersburg continues to decrease. For this twenty-four hours ended at noon to-day, there were 111 cases and fifty-eight deaths in the municipal hospital. There have been ten cases and two deaths in the hospital of the palace at Gatchina, the residence of the empress dowager. The empress dowager is now in Denmark.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.
Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, making the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, causes nerve to excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

St. Thomas, Oct. 9. — Following closely upon the publication of the story about what is known as "The Orwell Hotel Affair," in which it is alleged, an Orwell farmer named Mahlon Boughner, sought to ruin the reputation of the Liberal candidate in the last bye-election in East Elgin, the village of Orwell has again come into prominence through a fire early Tuesday morning, which is causing considerable talk in this district.

The fire broke out before daylight in a public hall, and in a very short time the four lamps of Mahlon Boughner was burning. Boughner, who is now a friend of revealing party secrets, lost all his season's grain and hay. The villagers are asking: "Was the fire of incendiary origin?"

Those who were on the scene first, and who say that the fire could then have been put out, had they some water, declare that the blaze was running up on the outside of the roof. They also say it could not have originated from the stove, which had been used by a tea meeting the evening before, because the stove was at the other end of the building.

The hall was the property of the Good Templars, but there has not been a lodge there for some years. There is an I.O.F. court there, which lost its charter and regalia in the fire. The temperance hall was used mainly by the church, but it was free to all, and what motive one could have for firing the building the community is at a loss to understand.

Western Newspaper Enterprise

Booth Tarkington says that in no state have the newspapers more "journalistic enterprise" than in his native Indiana. While stopping at a little Hoosier hotel in the course of a little hunting trip Mr. Tarkington lost one of his dogs.

"Have you a newspaper in town?" he asked of the landlord.

"Right across the way, there, back of the shoemaker's," the landlord told him. "The Daily News — best little paper of its size in the state."

The editor, the printer, and the printer's devil, were all busy doing justice to Mr. Tarkington with an "in-our-midst" paragraph when the novelist arrived.

"I've just lost a dog," Tarkington explained after he had introduced himself, "and I'd like to have you insert this ad for me: 'Fifty dollars reward for the return of a pointer dog answering to the name of Rex. Disappeared from the yard of the Mansion House Monday night.'"

"Why, we were just going to press, sir," the editor said, "but we'll be only too glad to hold the edition for your ad."

Mr. Tarkington returned to the hotel. After a few minutes he decided, however, that it might be well to add "No questions asked" to his advertisement, and returned to the Daily News office. The place was deserted, save for the skinny little freckle-faced devil, who sat perched on a high stool, gazing wistfully out of the window.

"'Where is everybody?" Tarkington asked.

"Gawn to hunt th' dawg," replied the boy, without removing his gaze from the distant fields.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this, with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ou's, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients, gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity, to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by all dealers.

The German Kaiser In Quiet Retreat

During the recent German military manoeuvres in Alsace-Lorraine it had been the intention of the German Kaiser to cross the frontier into France. That he did not do so has been officially explained by the fact that his motor car broke down. Since the event rumors have been afloat at Belfort that the real reason was his fear of anarchists who, he learned from the police, had determined to assassinate him on French soil. It has even been announced that two Alsatians left their factory at Mulhausen for this avowed purpose. This phase of the episode has been investigated by a correspondent of Le Journal, of Paris, with the following result:—

It had all along been understood by the French authorities that it was the Kaiser's intention to proceed across the Hoheneck by motor car, enter French territory and return by train from Epinal. The local police commissary at Epinal was therefore ordered to increase the number of his gendarmes and to give the distinguished visitor, who would be incognito, every available protection. The commissary therefore posted eighteen gendarmes at Schlucht, and had a special train made ready to meet the automobile.

He also had the German and French flags hoisted in the Villa Hartmann. At the Villa Altenberg, on the German side, Herr Petri, the German commissary, had the same thing done, and a room was prepared there where the Kaiser might substitute his uniform for civilian dress.

All had been prepared, when suddenly Herr Petri received a telegram which threw him into consternation. He announced to those waiting that after all, the Kaiser's visit might be postponed. He was even uncertain as to whether the Kaiser would go to Villa Hartman. Nevertheless, the Kaiser arrived there, and in full uniform.

He had stopped at the Altenberg Hotel with the intention of donning mufti, but on receipt of a message from Herr Petri he had left immediately without even tasting the refreshment prepared for him. When His Majesty reached the villa he read the telegram from Mulhausen, which had been sent on, crumpled it up and threw it on the floor, whence it was swept into a dust bin. It was, the writer avers, afterward picked up and read by a Frenchman whose curiosity had been excited, several other persons looking it over in his company.

After he had perused the telegram the Emperor studied a map in which all the paths leading from the Schlucht to the Hoheneck were given, and perceived that it was impossible to insure security from any a tempt on his life, as the road was too long and there were only eighteen French gendarmes to guard it. So His Majesty sent for M. Cochet, who at first hesitated to cross the frontier, but finally decided on going to the Villa Hartmann.

A Complete Explanation

A gentleman who was buying a turkey from old Uncle Ephraim asked him in making the purchase, if it was a tame turkey.

"Oh, yais, sir, it's a tame turkey all right."

"Now, Ephraim, are you sure it's a tame turkey?"

"Oh, yais, sir; dere's no sort o' doubt 'bout dat. It's a tame turkey all right."

He consequently bought the turkey, and a day or two later, when eating it, came across several shot. Later on, when he met old Ephraim on the street, he said, "Well, Ephraim, you told me that was a tame turkey, but I found some shot in it when I was eating it."

"Oh, dat war a tame turkey all right," was Uncle Ephraim's reiterated rejoinder; "but de fac' is, boss, I'm gwine to tell yer in confidence dat dem 'ere shot was intended for me."

Stratton's Address to the Electors of the Riding of West Peterborough

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH.

Gentlemen.—I have been unanimously selected as candidate, in the Liberal interest, for the representation of West Peterborough, at the elections to be held on October 26th, and I hereby solicit your vote and influence, feeling that, as a supporter of the Liberal Government of the Dominion, I can render the city and riding at large, good, faithful and fruitful service.

All who know me, and after nearly twenty years of representation of the riding, that should include the majority of the electors, know in what manner I have discharged my duty to West Peterborough.

Aside from the policy of the Government on whose behalf a candidate is appealing for support, the determining factor in deciding an elector's support should be the fitness of the candidate to give efficient representation. The elector should therefore, choose the man whose known qualifications and record assure the exercise of effort and influence on behalf of the advancement of the interests of the riding, and to procure to it that measure of Government attention to which it is fairly entitled.

Therefore in setting forth below what has been done under the Liberal representatives of West Peterborough in enlisting the good will of governments in securing substantial benefits, an adequate idea can be formed of how greatly to the advantage of this constituency will be the election of a candidate in sympathy with the Government, which has the power to vouchsafe advantages that may be faithfully presented.

I may, therefore, be permitted to point out a little of what has been accomplished for West Peterborough, through its representatives, by Liberal governments. First, as my own share;

The work of procuring the construction of the Bunsfort bridge, south of the city, is the equivalent of securing distinct benefits to residents of south Monaghan, through shortened distance to reach the market in Peterborough, and to the latter by facilitating the visits of the township people to the city. The building of a road through the township of North Monaghan north also served to lessen the distance the people of South Monaghan had to traverse to reach the city.

The procuring of a grant to assist in digging the Cavan drain, meant a much shortened way of access for the residents of northern Cavan to the Peterborough market, to the mutual advantage of themselves and Peterborough merchants and the reclamation of some thousands of acres of previously valueless swamp lands.

The procuring of large sums to be spent in the construction of new roads in Harvey, Cavendish, Galway, North Smith and Ennismore, represents conveniences to the people of these townships of no little value.

The procuring of legislation for the buildings of Chemong and Pigeon Creek bridges, and requiring their perpetual maintenance by the city and the Counties of Victoria and Peterborough, in the interests of the district, is another means of facilitating exchange of town and city trade.

The procuring of Government assistance to build the Kinmount bridge of stone and steel, was a means of settling the question between Peterborough and Victoria Counties, which had cost and promised to cost enough to build a bridge, and another benefit was the removal of a cause of constant friction between the two counties.

The construction of approaches and ferry, and later a permanent bridge, to span Gannon's Narrows, is a shortening of the distance to the city appreciated by the residents and farmers and land owners concerned.

I was fortunate enough to induce the Ontario Government to deed to the city—then town—of Peterborough, the government reservation along the river front from the C.P.R. bridge to the Hunter street bridge, a great advantage, which has been made greater by being filled in by the dredgings of the river, at once beautifying the shore line and creating sites for manufactures, etc., etc., to be fronted with wharfage now under contemplation.

I will, I believe, be credited with having been instrumental in procuring the lease for Number Five dam, which made possible the establishment of the Quaabee Power Company, and led to the establishment of the Peterborough Cereal Works, and also led to the development of power at the dams further up the river for the use of the Lakefield Cement Works. For this I received at the time no little abuse and imputation of false motives in a course in which I had at heart only the good of the city, without the slightest personal advantage.

I may also fairly take credit for inducing the Ontario Government to consent to the transference of the waters of the northern part of this district to the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, whose measures for conservation of water have created a steady flow the year round in the interests of canal navigation and power production, whose importance cannot be well over-estimated in relation to our manufacturing interests.

I may perhaps be permitted to suggest that the strong opposition to the legislation necessary to establish the Quaker Oats Canal Company in Peterborough, with all the advantages and attendant benefits, would, I believe have been successful, if I had not used all my efforts and influence to secure the passage of the necessary influence, which was bitterly opposed in Committee, and in the Assembly.

My interest in Peterborough, and West Peterborough, and the advance of their material welfare, has not been confined to my course in a representative capacity. In the interests of the city and of its working men I have fortunately been able to be instrumental in reorganizing the Peterborough Lock Works on a prosperous and permanent working basis, and to be of assistance in promoting the establishment of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company. As the publisher of the Examiner, I have made it the medium of advocating and aiding all public measures and private enterprises calculated to upbuild Peterborough city and county. In this enterprise, and in the publication of three creditable class journals, The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and the Canadian Horticulturist, employment is given to about 100 persons, and Peterborough is given the dignity of a publishing centre.

When the Edison, now Canadian General Electric Works, were being established in Peterborough, and the council was being criticized for the assistance the town gave. Owing to the assistance of the council and citizens, the works were established, and have grown and prospered, and I gave not only my moral support, but became financially interested to the extent of my ability.

I trust I may claim, as is the fact, that in the discharge of my representative duties, I have tried to represent the whole riding, irrespective of party affiliation, and that I have met and dealt with all conditions that arose during my several terms, without regard to party feeling.

In all these things, if there be any merit, I have only done a duty to be expected of any representative, with the interests of his constituents at heart, and discharged the duties of a citizen; and if, through your support, I am given another opportunity, the assurance may be accepted that what little I have been able to do for West Peterborough, will be supplemented, the best of my ability, and the extent of my influence, with the Government, and in the world offlinance and affairs.

However, the benefits to West Peterborough, from Liberal representation and Government liberality, or rather justice, and deference to fair claims, are not all confined to the realm of the Provincial Government, but the Dominion representative and Government have contributed an important share.

To give prominence to the most prominent and most widely beneficial exercise of administrative functions, the work of Trent Canal completion, by the Dominion, may be cited. When the Liberal Government took office in 1896, there were only 51 miles of navigable canal completed. Now there are 160 miles completed, embracing in this distance access to a thousand miles of shore line, and there are 26 miles under contract, leaving only 15 miles of unfinished canal between Georgian Bay and Trenton. During the 18 years of Conservative rule and in all the years from Confederation, here was spent by that Government in canal construction work the sum of $1,230,030. During the 12 years of Liberal rule, there has been spent, including works under contract and construction, the sum of $4,891,768, out of the $6,121,117 spent since Confederation, or in other words in 12 years of Liberal administration, more than four times the amount spent in the preceding 30 years, has been expended, and, among other things, has given Peterborough steamer connection with the back lakes and northern waters.

Then, in the past twelve years large sums have been used in providing complementary works—to give the fullest benefits from canal construction—such as wharves, capable of enlargement, along the river and Trent waters, in dredging operations at various points. Particular reference might be made to the wharf at the street railway terminus, and the Wolfe street wharf, on which the work of construction will begin immediately.

Other measures in the interests of the riding due to energetic representation and fair government recognition of our claims may be cited.

A sitting of the Tariff Commission was secured for Peterborough, and the claims of Peterborough manufacturers heard and heeded. Representative influence met a ready response from the Post Office Department for the improvement of postal facilities; the interior accommodation of the building was enlarged and improved, city delivery provided, street letter boxes more than doubled in number, with more frequent collections, in addition to reduction of drop letter postage from two cents to one cent, not to speak of the opening of several new post offices, and the increased frequency of mail service.

The Peterborough Armouries represent not only an architectural ornament to the city and a large utility to the several forces of our militia, but a substantial advantage to the city in connection with the acquirement of a site for the Collegiate Institute.

The construction of a new $50,000 dam at Buckhorn, included the building of a new permanent county bridge, at a cost to the county of only $3,000 in lieu of $50,000, if as good a bridge had been built by the county.

The assumption by the Dominion Government of the county swing bridges, and their maintenance and operation, made a saving of about $2,500 per year to the county for all time.

The cold storage act of the Dominion Government intended to promote the construction of cold storage buildings, the Government giving as bonus a grant of a percentage of the cost, was instrumental in the establishment of a first-class cold storage warehouse in Peterborough, a great boon to dealers in dairy products, fruits and perishable articles, and instead of Lindsay and Belleville, which had such warehouses, being the distributing center, that advanage rests with Peterborough.

The replacing of the old wooden bridge that formerly spanned the locks at Young's Point, by a new steel bridge, placed so as not to impede wheel traffic while the look is in use, the construction of a new pier, and the deepening of the lower waters of the lock and channel from five feet to nine feet are obvious advantages.

The procuring of a parliamentary appropriation of $100,000 to meet claims for damages to lands flooded by the erection of dams in the course of Trent Canal construction, means the settlement of claims, some of them outstanding for nearly forty years, and is a measure of justice due to a Liberal Government, which appreciated the claims of the owners of drowned lands, which are being adjusted with all possible expedition.

All these things bear testimony to the importance and necessity of having a representative of West Peterborough alert and alive to the promotion of its interests.

I need not make any definite promises as to my course if elected. I will only say that I will do as I have done in the past, and serve West Peterborough to the best of my ability.

I think I am justified in saying that it will be to Peterborough's best interests to send a member in support of the present Liberal Government of the Dominion.

Under this Government the country has grown and prospered as it has never done before. If found, on taking office twelve years ago, the tide of prosperity at a low ebb; trade was dull, industry languishing; employment scarce and fitful; the finances were in bad condition, with large yearly deficits. All these things were changed under the Liberal Government; the tide of prosperity began to rise. The revenue, under a lessened tariff rate, grew, and funds were available and used with wisdom and enterprise to provide the means of development we see reflected in an advance of Canadian trade from 230 millions in 1896 to 650 millions now. Much of this is due to the Government's masterly dealing with the transportation problem involving cheap and rapid transport of produce from farm and factory to market, and, to crown all, the conception and construction of the Transcontinental Railway, which will roll back the map of Canada a hundred miles northward and double the cultivated and peopled area of the country. The Government which has done so much to build up Canada in all its varied interests to the status of a nation is sure to be returned to power as a result of the coming elections, and this will ensure another parliamentary term of nation-building, which will witness the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific, of the Hudson Bay Railway, and of the Trent Waterway.

I respectfully ask the assistance of your vote and influence to secure my election. If by favor of your kind support I am elected, I shall give my best efforts to all measures that will promote the interests of the country at large, and especially those of Peterborough and West Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. Stratton.

Turkey Gets the Aid of British Battleships

Powerful British Warships Sail for the Mouth of the Dardanelles—Try to Overawe Excitable People

Valetta, Island of Malta, Oct. 9—A British fleet will leave here this evening for the Aegean sea. Its actual destination is believed to be the Turkish island of Lemnos. The sailing orders are sealed.

The fleet will consist of four battleships, four cruisers, and four torpedo boat destroyers, and it will be under the command of Vice-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenburg.

Lemnos is an island of the Grecian archipelago, about 50 miles west of the entrance to the Dardanelles. It belongs to Turkey. The population mainly is Greek.

AT TURKEY'S REQUEST.

London, Oct. 9.—The foreign office and the Admiralty have confirmed the press cablegram from Malta saying that British warships have been ordered to the Aegean sea.

It is explained that these vessels are sent out simply to watch events, but it is understood from other sources that Turkey intimated she would welcome this appearance of the British fleet as likely to calm the population and put an end to the spoliation of the empire.

MILITIA TAKES OATH.

Canea, Island of Crete, Oct. 9.—The members of the new government took the oath of loyalty to Greece yesterday, as did also the officers of the gendarmerie and the militia.

The consular body protested in principle against the declaration of union, but will confine itself to submitting the matter to the four protesting powers, Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy.

Crete's withdrawal from Turkey's suzerainty is the latest development in the Balkan situation, for though Crete is not in the Balkans herself, being an island, in the Mediterranean, she accepts impulses that have their origin in that turbulent land. It would appear from this distance that in the case of Crete Turkey could afford to take no action. Beyond calling the attention of Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy to the extraordinary move on the part of the rebellious little island, Crete is an autonomous province under Turkish authority, but since 1898 the Ministers at Rome of Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy have directed her foreign affairs, and have been responsible for her foreign policy. In the language of the street, it is "up to" them to deal with Crete. Turkey's correct attitude would seem to be one of grieved passivity.

AN ISLE OF MYTHOLOGY.

How Crete came to be a Turkish province is a story that began some hundreds of years ago. It has been Crete's fate to always belong to some powerful neighbor. The island's earlier history is lost in mythology. Probably the Keftoo of the Egyptian inscriptions and the Caphtor of the Old Testament are identical with the Crete, or Candia, of to-day and with the kingdom over which Minos, the son of Zeus, resigned. In Homer's time the island was famed for its fertility, and was thoroughly settled by Greeks, who had succeeded the Phoenicians and Egyptians, who were its first historical tenants. Because of its friendship with the Sicilian pirates Crete got into trouble with Rome, and was captured in 68 B. C., after two years' stubborn resistance. When the Roman Empire was dismantled Crete was thrown in as a make-weight for the Byzantines, who held it until 823. Then a swarm of Arabs fresh from conquests in Andalusia settled down on it, and held it for a hundred and forty years.

WHEN TURKEY CAME.

They were driven out, and the island recaptured by the Byzantines. They held on until the Latin Empire of the East was established, when Crete was given to Boniface of Montferrat. Boniface sold out to the Venetians. In 1669 the Turks, after a siege of 21 years, captured the fortress of Candia, and proceeded to conquer the land. By 1715 the last vestiges of Venetian occupation had been removed, and Crete settled down to the existence common to Christian communities under the Sultan's rule. A mere statement of the racial divisions of the population tells the whole story. By the Cretan census of 1900 there were 267,408 Greeks out of a population of 303,273, the centre being Mussulmans and Jews. The Christian percentage, overwhelming as it is now, was even greater in the earlier years of Turkish conquest. Insurrections were frequent, especially about the middle of the nineteenth century.

A PERIOD OF CONFLICT.

In 1866-68 a prolonged and desperate uprising sprung from the Sultan promises of reform. These remained unfulfilled until 1878, when, spurred on by the Treaty of Berlin, he gave Crete a charter, and appointed a Christian Governor-General. As he appointed at the same time a Moslem military governor, in whose hands remained the real authority, the Cretans felt that they had been tricked. So once more, in 1889, they rebelled, and once more was the rebellion crushed, but for five years the country was in so sullen a mood that a military occupation was necessary. Then the powers intervened, and the Sultan made more promises, also unfilled. In 1895 another rebellion broke out. This time the Greeks, who had long looked with compassion on the sad lot of their compatriots in Crete, turned in and landed troops on the island.

Inventor Prefers Criminal Life

With inventive genius unsurpassed by a dozen mechanics in the world, John Edwards, now in a Philadelphia prison, prefers a criminal life and glories in his exploits as a burglar rather than in his many remarkable and useful inventions. The police records of the country know this man as John Swetak, Kingsley, Stevens, Reeves and many other aliases. In trying to escape from the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia, on Aug. 26, he fell from the prison wall, a distance of thirty feet, and broke his leg. He has more than ten years of prison life before him, taking no account of detainers from cities in all parts of the United States.

Edwards is a machinist of really marvellous attainments, and has perfected a device that he claims will remove all the present objections to electric automobiles. He has also perfected and disposed of an attachment which not only increases the speed of the operator, but reduces the cost of operation. He says that a shoe manufacturer near Boston has agreed to buy a device of his with which to make shoes for the government. Edwards says this device will reduce the cost of making a pair of shoes fully 20 per cent.

EARLIEST INVENTION.

Some of the claims made by Edwards are extravagant, but all of his devices are improvements upon machines invented by other persons. The fact that his patents covered only betterments he always found it to his advantage to sell his plans to those in control of the basic patents, and thus get his reward in a lump sum, instead of in the form of royalties. His earliest invention was a device for splicing carpet rags. This instrument was not unlike a knife blade, and with its use a child of ten or twelve years could prepare ten pounds of rags for weaving while an experienced sewer would be busy sewing two pounds. He then perfected two or three minor attachments for bicycles, but failed to produce a chainless wheel of real commercial value. He admits that he drew the plans for his chainless wheel while serving a term in a western penitentiary. He developed a clutch or hook which is now used as an attachment to steam shovels, and he also perfected a sewing machine attachment which is in general use.

ALWAYS BEING HUNTED.

Any one of these inventions would have made Edwards a rich man had he been able to sell them as patented devices are usually sold, but as he was always being hunted and hounded by the police he was always compelled to sacrifice his inventions and to divide the proceeds with innumerable agents who negotiated their sale.

Edwards says he has draughted the plans for a device that will turn railway switches from the cab of the engine regardless of the speed of the locomotive. The records of the patent office show several such devices, but Edwards claims that his plans have not yet been submitted. He asserts positively that working models have been made and used, and that he will live to see the railroads utilize his device.

SILENT QUEEN AMELIA

KING CARLOS' WIDOW HAS A BITTER BATTLE TO FIGHT.

With Her Son She Is Struggling, Says London Correspondent, to Bring Order Out of the Chaos That Reigns In Portugal—Could Point to Husband's and Son's Assassin, But Fears Riots and Insurrection.

Why is it that Portugal's great trouble is hardly ever referred to in the British press now? asks a correspondent to a London paper. A few months ago, and our newspapers were crammed with sensational revelations of her upheavals. Now we have forgotten her.

I have spent the last few weeks in Portugal, and I'm not sorry to be home again. The land of cloudless skies and summer days is a sad place now. The country is torn asunder by internal intrigue and strife. Her various political parties are fighting tooth and nail for the mastery, each confident that its course is the one course for the nation, and each in its blindness making the nation's power totter as the tall oak totters when the woodman lays his axe to its roots.

And amid all this turmoil creep Queen Amelia and her son, King Manuel, struggling, as well as their fettered hands will allow them to struggle, to bring order out of chaos, light out of darkness.

What a burden is this lone woman bearing! There is a story told in Lisbon that the Queen did she dare, could point an accusing finger at one of the highest political leaders in the land, and say, "You are the man responsible for the death of my husband, King Carlos."

But Queen Amelia knows only too well what the result of her words would be—more political riots, confusion worst confounded.

This story, I say, is told in Lisbon—and Lisbon knows.

When the assassins fired upon the occupants of the royal carriage on that fatal first of February, Queen Amelia, as she instinctively arose to shield Prince Luis with her body, looked straight into the face of a man standing a little beyond the crowd, who was in the act of drawing a carbine from beneath his cloak. For one second their eyes met in mutual and horrified recognition. Then the man stepped back, and the struggling mass of police, soldiers and citizens hid him from view.

Other men besides Buica and Costa fired upon her husband and sons—men who seemed to be standing in wait, ready to aid the active assassins in their escape, but who, at the crucial moment, also drew their carbines and fired into the carriage. Queen Amelia's description of the scene is verified by the Duke of Oporto, who was also present. Both are convinced that Buica and Costa were but the tools of prominent conspirators, some of whom were present to see that the murderous work was thoroughly done—to aid in it if they deemed it necessary.

And Queen Amelia has recognized in the man with the cloak and carbine a prominent political leader.

A little time back there were rumors of a fresh plot to destroy the royal family. Arrests were made by the dozen. No one pretended to know facts, but each political party accused the other of having a hand in the plot; the Government even went as far as to declare that the first plot was aided by the Republican party, and stated the sums that the regicides, Buica and Costa, were to receive for their work.

And, as I say, 'midst all this turmoil, dear, lovable Queen Amelia lives her life of sorrow. Lives it for the King, her son, and for the nation. For once let the monarchy show signs of weakness, and Portugal will awake to find their King again assassinated, and in his place a republican president.

Dogs As Dowries.

Everywhere is the dog the friend of man, but in Manchuria he is more strictly the friend of woman. The dowry of a young woman does not consist of hard cash as in Europe, but in a certain number of sleek dogs with thick fur or silken hair. The girl's status may almost be guessed by her wedding portion of dogs. If she receive six she is poor; if a dozen, her parents are in easy circumstances; and if twelve tosen may be taken that she comes from a rich family. They are carefully fattened for their savoury flesh, and their skins after death become coverlets, peliases, vests for hunters, bedside carpets which scarcely ever wear out. Even to its fur the devotion of the dog is warm and lasting.

Sun and Earth.

The sun's greatest distance from the earth, about July 1, is nearly 95,000,000 miles; his least, about January 1, rather less than 91,000,000 miles; his mean distance is about 93,333,000 miles. It may serve to give some idea of the vastness of this distance to say that a ball fired from a thirteen inch gun at the sun would require thirteen years to reach the mark, supposing its velocity to remain unchanged throughout the journey. The sun's diameter is 866,000 miles, exceeding the earth's about 109 times. The sun exceeds the earth in surface 11,750 times and in volume 1,300,000 times.

Rice Culture.

The best of all rice known in the market for size and quality is grown in South Carolina. The year 1694 is the earliest in which rice is known to have been grown in the country. Rice culture is as old as history, having been known in India from time immemorial. The wild rice, still plentiful in the marshy tropical countries of southern Asia, is undoubtedly the plant from which all forms of cultured rice have been derived.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

The Wooing of Wilhelmina.

By Cecily Allen.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Of Wilhelmina's taste in dinner giving and the quality of her hospitality there could be no question. The first was above reproach; the second, like that of mercy, was not strained.

Of Wilhelmina's ability as an artist, however, there was very grave question indeed. Those who had no desire to defer to her dinners were very apt to pronounce her pictures daubs, which will explain why Dobson drew Remington aside and reviewed the situation. Dobson was taking Donald Remington, who had just returned from a year in England, to enjoy one of Wilhelmina's Sunday night dinners.

"You see, she hasn't had a fair chance yet, but she's awfully ambitious, and we all have hopes."

Remington nodded understandingly. He knew the type of artist, though the rosy colors in which Dobson had painted the dinner prospective had rather confused him.

"They lived on a farm—her folks had all kinds of money, blooded stock and all that—and they sent her to boarding school. You know how those finishing schools kill one's style."

"I WANT TO BE YOUR TEACHER," HE SAID GENTLY.

"From finishing school to studio, eh?"

"Not much. You mustn't make any mistake. She isn't exactly a spring chicken. She'll never see thirty again. But we call her Wilhelmina because she likes it—makes her feel as if she was one of us."

"So does art defer to appetite," murmured Remington as he lighted a fresh cigarette.

"Well, you wait. She went back home from school and took care of both the old folks till they died, three weeks apart. Then she sold out everything in Indiana and set up her studio here in New York. She's brought along a lot of the family heirlooms, mahogany, hand woven stuff and all that, and it's the greatest spot ever"—

"How about her pictures?" interrupted Remington good humoredly.

"Well, say, you want to be careful about those. She took the correspondence course in art after she went home, and you know what that means. She's an impressionist, and"—

"Never mind harrowing details. I am prepared for the worst."

Three minutes later he was standing, stricken dumb, in a most gracious presence. As he looked into her clear gray eyes, well set beneath a broad white forehead, he remembered having seen just one such face in his busy life. It was the face of an Englishwoman of title, whose peculiar gifts as a mother had made her greatly beloved of men.

"Did any one ever tell you how much you resemble the Countess of W.?" he demanded suddenly.

Wilhelmina flushed faintly and shook her head.

"You are so English that you don't seem to belong here at all!"

"Oh, but I do belong here, and I'm every inch American. I have a latchkey of my very own—and no English girl has that."

All during dinner Remington watched his hostess curiously. She seemed so utterly out of place among her guests, harmless, irresponsible chaps, hanging on the ragged edge of art's prosperity, ungroomed girls with enormous mops of hair and yellowed fingers which spoke of the cigarette habit.

"Looks like a Madonna among a bunch of dime museum freaks. It's a shame to spoil a good house mother to make a poor artist. Gad, what taste she had in hangings and fittings!"

For Remington was an architect and a good one. He could size up the refinement and true artistic instinct as stamped on a home, irrespective of cost or pretense, and he knew that so far as homemaking was concerned Wilhelmina Stevens was an artist.

Perhaps that was why, when he caught his first glimpse of her canvases, he almost groaned aloud.

"Those birches are wonderfully true," he heard Dobson explain, and he knew that the boy had picked out the one best point in what he felt was a landscape gone on a Saturday night's spree.

The pathos of her pose was to him fairly fascinating. Often after that he came to the studio, and always his heart sank within him as he realized how absorbed and determined was this lovable, young-old woman. She reminded him of a family friend who would sit enraptured at grand opera or concert and yet who could never strike a single true note or carry a tune and who wept because singing her babies to sleep was a boon denied.

Remington dropped in to see Wilhelmina oftenest when he was sure of finding her alone. He avoided her dinners and teas and chafing dish suppers. He found Wilhelmina's society a real inspiration in his work, for Remington had a mission. He wished to transplant to the suburbs of New York the lore of old English architecture which he had absorbed during his year in the English provinces. And Wilhelmina not only appreciated English architecture, but she seemed instinctively to grasp its fundaments' principles.

Remington had not dared to tell her how much he had depended upon her working out his plans for the cottage contest in the "ladies' round the year guest." That was why, with triumph lightening his heels and brightening his eyes, he rushed into her studio one stormy March day, the letter of supreme importance held aloft. And Wilhelmina sprang up abruptly from the mass of pillows on her divan and tried bravely but ineffectually to hide her tears.

Remington stopped, joy freezing on his lips at sight of her obvious grief.

"Wilhelmina, what has happened? Tell me at once."

"Daniels sent me home—told me to pack up my brushes and go away. His class was not for such as I."

The wretched truth was out. Daniels, whose special course at the academy was for the chosen few, the few with money to pay, had turned her out, money or no money. Like many a genius, he declined to teach those who gave no promise.

And Remington realized bitterly that the blow had been doubly hard because of the false hopes raised in this woman's heart by those who had feasted at her board.

Like a flash from the skies came his inspiration.

"I am sorry if you are disappointed, dear girl," he said, drawing her gently down on the divan and gripping her hand firmly in his, "but it gives me the courage to tell you what I wanted to say for a long time. Will you drop still life and the figure, oils and studio life—and dig hard into architecture and interior decoration? That's your gift. I've known it ever since the first night I stepped into this room and studied your hangings. And she who helps to build a home is as great as she who paints pictures for its walls. Will you?"

"Do you think I could really?"

His words had been balm to her aching ears. She raised those wonderful gray eyes to his brown ones, and her lips curved into a smile pathetically brave and womanly. And again Remington did the thing he had not anticipated. He bent over deliberately and kissed the lovely lips.

"I want to be your teacher," he said gently. "Not for a few weeks or months, but always. Why, you knew we've done those cottage drawings together and won! Here's the letter. We'll build one of these very houses on the site I was showing you last week. In the attic we'll have our studio. Think of the houses we can plan there, with the whole of New York harbor to inspire us! And some day when Daniels wants us to design a house for him we'll laugh and turn him down."

"Donald Remington," she said, sternly suppressing the dancing light in her eyes, "do you call this a proposal of partnership or matrimony?"

"Look me in the eye and ask that question again," he said.

Her glance fell before his.

"I am thirty-four tomorrow," she murmured faintly.

"You are the loveliest woman in the world and the only one for me. I knew that the first time I saw you. Besides, I am of age myself. Will you marry me tomorrow?"

"I will not!" gasped the astonished Wilhelmina.

"Why not?" argued Remington.

"Because I give a dinner tomorrow night to a crowd—and there is no time to call it off. It was to celebrate the coming of Daniels."

Just for an instant the shadow of regret fell upon her lovely face, and Remington, seeing it, took her in his arms.

"Bless the old bear! If he'd pronounced you a genius where would I have been?"

His Position.

"What is your name?" asked the justice.

"Leggitt Fergrubb, your honor," answered the prisoner, a red nosed specimen of the genus hobo.

"You are charged with vagrancy, having no visible means of support and being a common nuisance in the neighborhood. What have you got to say for yourself?"

"I hain't got no visible means of support, your honor, but that ain't my fault. I'm out of work."

"Have you tried to get work?"

"I couldn't begin to tell you, your honor, how hard I've tried."

"I suppose not. How long is it since you have had any occupation?"

"'Bout a year, or it may be two years."

"What was your last job?"

"I had a position in a barber shop."

"A position? What kind?"

"Juxtaposition, your honor. I was next."

"Six months in the workhouse" roared the police justice. "Call the next case!"—Chicago Tribune.

THE BERKSHIRES.

A Farmer Tells Why He Prefers Them to Other Breeds.

Writing of Berkshires in Rural New Yorker, F. D. Squires says: After trying nearly all of the various breeds I am thoroughly convinced from a business standpoint, in dollars and cents, that the Berkshires are the most profitable animals I ever tried. There are just four reasons why I should choose the Berkshires for the business farmer's business hog. And when I say the business hog I don't mean a hog for show, as I don't believe in show animals for the average business farmer. If by chance he should produce a show animal my advice would be to sell it for a show animal to a show animal man and invest it in an animal for profit.

First, activity, combined with strong digestive and assimilating powers, returning a maximum quantity of flesh for food consumed.

Second, their pigs are strong, active and vigorous at birth.

Third, their flesh is of the highest quality of pork, and their loins are much sought by butchers as being of finer quality than any other breed.

Fourth, they can be fattened at an early age on less feed than any other known breed.

The brood sow should be long and deep bodied, with ribs well sprung, jowls full and heavy, running well back on neck; shoulders smooth and even on top and in line with side; ham deep and thick; legs and feet short, straight and strong, set wide apart with hoofs nearly erect, and, above all else, she should have at least twelve well developed teats.

Treat her kindly and give her plenty of nourishing food, but not fattening, during farrowing season, and she will present you with a fine sample of her progeny, and at killing time you will never be sorry you selected the Berkshire for profit.

Pasturing Sheep on Alfalfa.

Every now and then the statement is made that sheep may be successfully pastured on alfalfa. In some instances they can. In other instances they cannot. Under some conditions they can. Under more conditions they cannot. In a very dry atmosphere sheep may be safely grazed on alfalfa when accustomed to it. If fed dry food early in the day, such as grain, they may safely graze on it.

But the fact remains that there is usually some danger that sheep will be lost through bloating more or less while being thus grazed. Moreover, the further fact remains that the sheep graze so closely that under many conditions they injure the alfalfa plant and shorten its period of growth. When the alfalfa grows with grass crops, the element of danger from bloat is practically eliminated.—Professor Thomas Shaw.

THE DAIRYMAN.

I used to have a lot of trouble feeding calves their milk, says a dairyman. So will anybody who sets a pail over the fence and lets the calves do with it as they have a mind to. But finally I woke up to the idea that stanchions are just as good to feed calves in as they are for cows. I picked up a few pieces of boards such as are to be had on almost any farm and fixed up a nice little pair of stanchions, with mangers to feed hay in besides. That ended my troubles in that line.

A Big Influence.

The bull is one half of the herd. The cows are the other half. The bull exerts his influence, his breeding, over every cow in the herd, whether it be for good or bad. If his breeding or pedigree is of the wrong sort—that is, for example, of a poor dairy sort—his influence is for bad, and the young stock will not be of the kind that develop into useful animals. This influence is not on one cow, but on all the herd. With cows it is different. If in the herd there be a poor cow her effects are felt only on her calves, while the calves of her sisters in the herd will be good or poor according to the individual cow. The good bull will make his good qualities felt in all the cows.

Protect the Cream.

A great deal of cream leaves the farm in fine condition for the creamery, but in being exposed to the sun on the road to the creamery or receiving station the development of souring germs rapidly begins. In delivering a can of cream throw a wet blanket over the can and a dry cover over the wet blanket. The dry blanket prevents the evaporation of water from the wet blanket and will enable the farmer to deliver cream only a few degrees warmer than when it left the farm.

Testing the Milk Giver.

The farmer can learn to operate a hand tester in a half hour. His results will not be accurate to a fraction, but close enough for all practical purposes. There is no way to determine the actual value of a cow except the milk be weighed and tested. It is worth many dollars a year to know what each cow is doing and is worth while to buy a tester and find out. The more a farmer knows about his dairy the better he will be pleased with the creamery treatment.

MONEY IN LAMBS.

When Well Bred and Well Fed They Bring a Good Profit.

The work done by the various experiment stations proves that sheep may be raised on corn lands at great profit. But they must have a care, says a writer in Breeder's Gazette, Chicago. It is conceded that so long as we have the range to draw from it will pay the farmer in many cases to draw breeding ewes from that source. Mated with mutton rams so that the lambs will come in March—and, as Professor Curtiss says, "the earlier in March the better"—the surplus will be ready to go to market long before parasitic invasion has had time to cause damage.

A somewhat striking instance of the value of early lambs in the corn belt came to the notice of the writer a few weeks ago in Iowa. A speculator had shipped in some 3,000 head of grade Rambouillet ewes due to begin lambing after the middle of May. A breeder with ample knowledge of the situation absolutely refused to make a bid, even at a bargain figure, on any of them for just that reason. Said he: "Lambs dropped after the middle of May are of no use to us here. We need them dropped in the end of February or the beginning of March to make us any money." He then went on to explain that the early lamb, while it cost something to feed him until grass came, was in proper shape to withstand the attack of the strongyles and make his growth to the point where the butcher could use him without setback or until new pasture had been provided for him.

The secret of making money from sheep in the corn belt is in breeding the best mutton rams to range bred ewes and having the lambs dropped in cold weather. Then be as good to them as possible, even to feeding them milk from a bottle if they need it. Right here let the point be emphasized that sheep are animals that love good care—the better the care the more they love it and the better they do. Of course new pasture on which sheep have not grazed before must be supplied them, and the most plentiful rations must be theirs at all times. Once and for all let it be remembered that the lamb which rushes in such a golden guinea harvest for the British farmer is not a product of poverty. Rather is he a delicately modeled and finished creature of affluence. If he gets the right sort of chance, the right sort of sheep, handled in the right way, rarely fail to return good money on the sum invested.

A little flock well tended on a little farm well tilled will rarely disappoint the faithful shepherd. We need more of them.

THE FEEDER.

Sheaf oats are one of the best feeds grown for young stock. Farmers Advocate thinks oats in the sheaf are worth more for feed than in any other shape. Cut early with a binder, stack well and feed in the barn. The cows and calves enjoy a little variety, and a feed of sheaf oats will be much relished.

Appetizers Not Needed.

A breeder says: "A farmer recently asked me to name some kind of appetizer for his calves, which for a few meals ate and drank well and again would eat and drink nothing. It is suspected that those calves were being overfed. Never feed an animal more than it will clean up well at each meal. Feed in such a way that the animal would eat just a little more if the feed were to be had. This feeding direction followed, no recipes for appetizers are needed."

Overfeeding and Underfeeding.

There is more danger of overfeeding colts than underfeeding. Either one, however, is disastrous. Overfeeding injures the digestive organs and leaves the system in a condition much more liable to disease and disorders. Underfeeding means a stunted condition, which is invariably a disappointment. Even with good breeding such a colt will not develop into a profitable animal. A healthy, vigorous growth is the ideal thing to be sought.

Skimmed Milk For Pigs.

Pigs like skimmed milk right from the separator, and it makes an excellent feed, especially when a proper amount of grain is added, as these animals should be kept growing and fattening at the same time, says a dairyman. The last of February I took a Chester white pig, weighing 115 pounds, alive, and put it in a pen alone where it was warm and dry. It was fed with the skimmed milk and one quart of mixed grain three times a day. It was fed thus for fifty days and then slaughtered. The dressed weight was 178 pounds. I calculate this was equal to two pounds of increase per day, live weight. Morning and night fresh separator milk was fed.

Clean Up Inside

Blood and System Cleansing in the Spring Makes Good Health all Summer.

In spite of all your careful rules is safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pale or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely bilious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years, says W. B. Sangster, of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite suffered from indigestion and gas, had some pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt dependent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They suited me exactly. In one week I felt like new. I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clean all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand tonic medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a perfect spring medicine; they destroy germs and poisons of every description and strength whereby the system rallies and the patient quickly enjoys the blessings of Perfect Health. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills—to-day—25c at all dealers.

CITY AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES REPORTERS.

Church Managers

The managers of St. Paul's church will meet in the Dominion Bank chambers on Tuesday evening.

Old Brigade Tonight

A meeting of the members of the old fire brigade will be held in the non-coms hall on Simcoe street tonight.

Reading Circle

The reading and social circle in connection with the Y.W.C.A. will meet this evening. Miss Weir of the Collegiate Institute will be in charge.

Dressmaking Class

The dressmaking class in connection with the Y.W.C.A. will be organized for the season on Tuesday afternoon. This is an excellent opportunity for young ladies to learn this very useful art

Y.M.C.A. was Open

For the first time the Y.M.C.A. parlors were open on Sunday evening after the church services, and a good number of the young fellows dropped in and spent a profitable evening.

Rain was Good

The shower of rain on Saturday night was welcomed by all, and will do much good. It did not, however, come early enough in the evening to keep the people home from the political meetings, so that no harm was done.

Young People's Social

The Ladies' Aid of St. Paul's church will give a social evening for the young people of the congregation, especially those who have recently arrived to attend the Normal school, or any of the schools or colleges, as well as those who intend to make Peterborough their home.

Anniversary Services

Rev. Robt. Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's church, will occupy the pulpit in the Presbyterian church in Stirling next Sunday, and will preach the anniversary services. The pastor from Stirling will preach here in the morning and the pulpit at night will be occupied by a Toronto gentleman.

Young Men's Banquet

On Friday night a banquet will be tendered to the Friendly Young Men's Bible class in the George street Methodist Sunday school.

Thank Offering

The annual thankoffering of the Young Ladies' Mission Band in connection with St. Andrew's church will be made on Tuesday afternoon at the regular meeting.

Load of Wood

The steamer Beaver arrived at the Wolfe street wharf on Saturday afternoon with a scow load of load wood for the Peterborough Fuel & Carriage Co. There were a hundred cords of good clean wood from Clear Bay, but it was impossible to unload until today on account of the construction of the new wharf.

T.A.S. Won

The second game in the city rugby league was played on Saturday afternoon by the T.A.S. and Y.M.C.A. teams, and it resulted in a win for the former by a score of three to one The play was a little inclined to be rough, although no one was hurt. The attendance was very small and unless it picks up considerably the financial end of the league will not be a success.

Suction Hose

Reference was made a few days ago to a defect in the suction hose on the fire engine. Chief Howard notified the company which supplied it, and on Saturday they sent a representative down to investigate The chief took the full brigade down to Spalding's Bay, for the purpose of showing the company's representative what was wrong That gentleman was satisfied and a new section of hose will be sent up in a day or two.

New Series of Sermons

Rev. J. G. Potter has begun a new series of Sunday night sermons on "The Life of Christ." Last night he dwelt on "His reception by the Magi" During the evening Mrs. Dixon Hall sang with much feeling, "Knocking at the door," and Mr. Gordon Wright took the solo in the anthem, "Wandering child come home."

—Mrs. Tilson of Toronto, who has been the guest of Mrs. H. LeBrun for the past few weeks returned to her home Saturday, accompanied by Mrs. LeBrun, who will visit friends in the city for a few days.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realise a gain. Sold by all dealers.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Diotca) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "in Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with pleucorrhoea; atonic (weak) condition of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhoea, suppressed or absent monthly periods, arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anaemic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhoea (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

Ald. W. J. Johnston Has Resigned

The great majority of those who are interested in labor conditions in Peterborough and vicinity, and who follow the reports published in the Labor Gazette, will regret to learn that Ald. W. J. Johnston, the local correspondent, has resigned. Last month's report will be the last from him which will appear in labors' official organ. Ald Johnston has filled his office for the past three or four years with ability and satisfaction. He has always been careful to secure correct information, and his place will not be an easy one to fill.

Saw British Columbia for the First Time

On Saturday morning Mr. and Mrs. Peter Campbell arrived home from a trip through the West. They were away about a month, and had a splendid outing They went through to the coast, and visited Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle and Oregon, and coming home they took the Crow's Nest Pass Railway for the purpose of seeing the great fruit belt through which that road runs. Referring to the condition of things in the west, Mr. Campbell said that the people seemed to be well satisfied with the crops this year, and generally speaking conditions were satisfactory It was Mr. Campbell's first trip west of Winnipeg, and he is greatly in love with the country and would like to live there.

Funeral of the Late J. W. Trotter

A large number of the members of Warsaw Lodge, No. 457, L.O.L., met at the Orange Hall, Simcoe street, yesterday afternoon, and attended in a body the funeral of the late Bro. John W. Trotter, which took place from his late residence, 284 Smith street, at 2.30 o'clock The funeral was a large one, and the services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Cragg, who was supplying for Rev. Mr. Henderson at Charlotte street church yesterday. Interment took place at Little Lake cemetery.

First of Series of Sunday Night Meetings

The first of the series of Sunday night Gospel Temperance meetings was held in the Crystal Theater last night and there was a good attendance. The chair was occupied by Mr. H. P. Lindsay, and Mr. Shiner lead the song service. During the evening, Mr. Percy Mulhern sang very well. "I will go where you want me to go."

Rev Robt. Pogue was the speaker of the evening and he took as his subject, "Gospel Temperance." He pointed out the great power of the gospel in saving men from the liquor. The address was very interesting.

Rev. Mr. Pearson closed the meeting with the Benediction.

Temperance Sunday and Speakers

A meeting of the ministers will be held this afternoon to complete the arrangements for the Temperance Sunday, which will be observed in all the churches next Sunday. The object of these services is educational along temperance lines and should be very interesting. The visiting speakers who will be here and the probable pulpits they will occupy are as follows:—

Rev. J. G. Lynch at St. John's and St. Luke's churches.

Rev. Nathaniel Smith at St. Paul's in the evening, and at Knox in the morning.

Detroit was Wild Over the Victory

Messrs Wm. Buntin and Wm. McIlroy, the G.T.R. and C.P.R. city ticket agents, arrived home Saturday morning from Detroit, where they spent the past week attending the annual meeting of the National Ticket Sellers' Association. The local representatives report having a fine time. The people of Detroit used them perfectly and provided lots of entertainment for them. The meeting itself was a big success. Everything passed off smoothly. Messrs. Buntin and McIlroy were again elected to the executive committee and that body will meet in January next, to decide on the next meeting place for the association.

Speaking of the entertainment Mr. Buntin stated that they were in Detroit the night of the baseball celebration. It was the greatest sight he ever saw. On the square known as the Hub, at least 30000 people congregated, as well as about 250 automobiles. The crowd included all classes and all ages and every one was making all the noise they could. The election in Detroit was nothing compared to the winning of the American League championship.

Two Big Meetings

country, could travel from their country or suburban homes to their work in the centre of commerce. When Mr. Burnham resumed his seat he was loudly cheered.

HON. MR. HANNA.

Upon arising Hon. Mr. Hanna was very warmly greeted. The immense audience cheered and applauded enthusiastically. He said it surely augured well for the cause of the Conservative party to see so many ladies taking part in the fight. Mr. Hanna dwelt upon an article in the Examiner on Monday evening, in which the writer invited some discussion on the late secretary's methods of conducting the business of the province in his department. Mr. Hanna said that the methods of the late Provincial secretary were no better in connection with the provincial affair than they were in connection with insurance affairs. (Loud cheering.) Mr. Hanna stated that he had not the least intention of referring to this matter at all until he was invited to by that three column article in the Examiner.

Mr. Hanna said that there never was a time when the Conservatives were so thoroughly united, and so thoroughly confident of winning the election on Oct. 26th next. He stated that he had been taking part in the campaign for the past four weeks, and predicted that Hon. Mr Borden, the cleanest man in the Dominion politics today, would be elected Premier of Canada. (Cheers.) He predicted that Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, would give Mr. Borden a substantial majority. From the Lake Superior west to the Pacific coast would give the Conservatives a majority. It was only today that Hon. Mr. Roblin had wired him that every Conservative in Manitoba was confident of victory, even Mr. Daly was sure that he would defeat Mr. Sifton in Brandon. (Cheers.) So far as Ontario was concerned, the speaker said that Mr. Borden would receive a support that would more than offset any help Sir Wilfrid Laurier would get in Quebec. (Cheers.) "On the 26th of October," said Mr. Hanna, "see just how near this mark my prophecy is." (Cheers.)

Mr. Hanna then took up the reasons why Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not the man to be Premier of Canada. He referred to the enormous annual expenditure which had jumped from $10 000 000 in 1896 to $132,000,000 in 1908. Sir Wilfrid appealed to the electors in 1904 on the policy of the Transcontinental Railway. He did not appeal to the people on his record as an administrator, or he would never have been returned. (Cheers.)

Mr. Hanna next took up the Transcontinental railway, and pointed out the great blunders of Sir Wilfrid. The first and the most unheard of blunder was the duplicating of the Intercolonial railway and especially east of Quebec, where the two roads run at a distance from each other of only nine to twelve miles, and it went through a country that was solid rock, and where there was no chance of developing local trade. The Conservative party opposed this scratch of the road and advocated utilizing the Intercolonial from Montreal east. The Laurier Government persisted mainly for the purpose of supplying cash and graft for party leaders. Mr. Hanna then took up some of the things which the Conservative party complained of and which Hon. Mr. Fielding on Oct. 2, a few nights ago, called tittle-tattle and slight irregularities. He mentioned such grafters as Fraser, Sifton and his clique, such as Brown, Turriff, Hitchcock, McGregor et al. "If these are slight irregularities and tittle-tattle," said the speaker, "then may the good providence protect us from the press Dominion Government demonstrating to us what criminal mismanagement of public affairs is." (Cheers.)

The North Atlantic Trading Company and the Laurier Government immigration policy were taken up and contrasted with Mr. Borden and the Conservative party's immigration policy.

In conclusion Mr. Hanna urged the voters of West Peterborough to reform the Government by turning out the Liberals and electing a Conservative Government.

R. R. GAMEY, M.P.P.

Mr. R. R. Gamey was given a reception that was indeed enthusiastic. In opening he said he had not intended coming to West Peterborough until he was urged to by Liberal-Conservatives. He said that he had no personal quarrel with the Liberal candidate for this riding. But, he said, he met the honorable gentlemann on the floor of the house and told him what he thought of him, and he told the people of the province what he thought of that particular gentleman, and (the speaker) was satisfied that the people of Ontario believe him. So the people of Ontario and what the people in West Peterborough think of him is another matter. He said that everyone knows the story that if anyone could vote for the Liberal candidate in the riding, it was his own funeral. Mr Gamey then took up some of the questions of the campaign, and in closing appealed to the electors to support a clean and honest candidate, which he said he have in Mr. Burnham, and in this way denounce graft which is the ruling principle in Ottawa.

The race is not to the swift, but to the competent.

The Council's Policy of Repairing Smith St. Bridge is Endorsed

Although the Dominion election is at fever heat in the city there are a few people who are devoting a little time to the less exciting topic of municipal politics. To these people local questions afford quite as much interest as do the greater problems of party politics to the politicians. One of the matters of considerable importance is the Smith street bridge, which the Committee of the Whole Council decided the other evening to replace with a permanent structure. A new bridge it is estimated will cost at least $40,000, the payment of which will be extended over a period of 20 or 30 years.

The undertaking is a big one and it has been given a lot of careful thought by a few people, one of whom expressed his views to The Times last night. He first gave credit to the present council, and to the aldermen during the past three or four years for adopting the policy of keeping the bridge repaired. It would be very much inclined to continue the same policy for a little while yet.

Taking the cost of a new permanent bridge at, say, $37,500, on a 4 per cent. basis for twenty years, the interest would amount to $1,480, and the sinking fund $1,308 or a total of $2,788 per year. The repairs during the past four years have been less than $3000., so that the saving to the city during that time is nearly $3000, so that the council during the past four years have spent on repairs, only about one half of what the interest above would have amounted to.

It was figured, in face of the fact that the street railway must sooner or later have access to Ashburnham and across the river, that it was better for the city to still have the bridge to build when some idea of the railway's requirements would be, than to have had the structure completed some time before there was any such information available. It would be unfortunate to put up a permanent bridge without provision for the street railway, and it would be expensive for the city to provide for the street railway before the railway was ready for it.

Then there is at the present time the Hunter street proposition which is worthy of more than a passing thought. It would be well to look carefully into the scheme and to use every effort to bring it to a successful head, with the idea of transferring the present bridge up to Smith street. If the city is prepared to spend $40,000 it would be better to spend it on the Hunter street structure, if there was any possibility of inducing the Dominion Government to come forward with substantial assistance. Everyone will admit that the overhead bridge at Hunter street, would be a great boon to the city and the present Hunter street bridge would answer at Smith street for many years.

If the council finds that nothing can be done on the Hunter street bridge then it is up to the council to deal with the Smith street bridge as they thought best. But in spending a large sum of money on permanent improvements, it is best to look several years ahead.

Damages were Given to Plaintiffs--Two Sad Cases

Times Special.

Hamilton, Oct. 12.—Two very sad cases were heard in the assizes here this afternoon before Mr. Justice Riddell. Mag Smith, a 19-year-old girl was awarded $600 damages against Thos. McFarlane, a young Peel county farmer, for seduction. The defendant swore that he was innocent and there was no much contradictory evidence in connection with the case that his lordship in his charge to the grand jury referred to the case, stating that some one should certainly be indicted for perjury.

$600 DAMAGES.

Richard May of Stony Creek, was awarded $600 damages against Norman E. Cook, a carpenter, 40 years of age, and who has been married for 19 years, for the seduction of the plaintiff's 19-year-old daughter.

Capt. Scott was Found Drowned

Kingston, Oct. 12.—Capt. J. H. Scott, formerly owner of the propeller Persia, was found drowned at seven o'clock this morning near Swift's wharf. He had put his baggage aboard the steamer Rideau King last night, intending to go to Ottawa.

At the time his body was found, the purser of the steamer telephoned from Kingston Mills, to find out why he had not come aboard, as his berth had not been occupied. Coroner Mundell stated that the captain had evidently taken a dizzy spell, and tumbled into the slip. Had he fallen in otherwise, his cries would have brought help.

The deceased was about 70 years of age, and was one of the best-known captains on the Great Lakes. Several years ago he retired.

He is survived by one son, who is a student at Queen's University.

GONE AWAY.

Hamilton, Oct. 12.—His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Gibson and Mrs. Gibson left last night for Colorado.

The Latest News from Servia

Crown Prince is Feared, Conference of Powers

(Times Special).

London, Eng., Oct. 12.—M. Iswolsky, the Russian Foreign Minister, has succeeded in impressing on Sir Edward Grewes, Secretary of Foreign Affairs for Great Britain, the necessity of a conference of the powers to settle the crisis in the near east, but this conference should also take under advisement other questions besides those involved by the annexation by Austria, of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the declaration of Bulgarian independence.

This change of front on the part of Great Britain, which has caused surprise was announced by the Foreign Office after the conference between Sir Edward Grey and M. Iswolsky, following the continued meeting this morning.

Sir Edward Grey's private secretary said;—"It may be affirmed with certainty that both ministers conceded in the necessity of a conference and that the Hour parlons at the Foreign Office, following as they do upon the Franco-Russian negotiations on the main question, has smoothed some of the difficulties in the way. It is now regarded that the latest events in the near east also necessitates the enlargement of the scope of the questions to be discussed.

Czar of Bulgaria Entered Capital

(Times Special).

Sofia, Oct. 12.—The "Czar of Bulgaria," made his triumphal entry into the capital this afternoon, and was given a great reception by all classes of the populace. Prince Ferdinand entered the city on horse back and was accompanied by a brilliant staff, amid a salute from the artillery.

Cruisers and Torpedo Boats

(Times Special).

Salonika, Oct. 12.—The Turkish cruiser, Medjidieh, and three torpedo boats, arrived here today, and proceeded to the island of Samos, which lies 10 miles south-west of Smyrna in Asia Minor. It is the nearest Grecian Island to the Turkish coast.

Tender Message to Crown Prince

(Times Special).

Belgrad, Servia, Oct. 12.—It is said in political circles that Britain and France have promised Servia their moral support if she maintains a peaceful course and has suggested also that Servia might be given the Sanjak of Novitzar, with Turkey's consent.

Prince Peter of Monte Negro, son of the reigning Prince Nicholas I., has wired the following message to Crown Prince George of Servia;—"I am delighted at the spirited and practical words you spoke yesterday to the enthusiastic gathering of our dear brethren. I cordially embrace you dear cousin, and pray God we may soon meet again on the crimson field."

Fear of Crown Prince of Servia

(Special to The Times.)

Vienna, Oct. 12.—The inflammatory speeches of Crown Prince George of Servia, who is inciting the people to war, while his father, King Peter, has observed an attitude of caution, causes considerable uneasiness in official circles in Belgrade, according to official despatches received here.

There is less fear of war than of a dynastic crisis and an attempt to place the Crown Prince upon the throne.

The Servian Premier has tried in vain to supress the Crown Prince for it is feared he may lead bands of volunteers against Bosnia or do some equally rash act.

Premier Hazen Sprung Sensation in Halifax Contractor Got $35,000

Times Special.

St. John's, N.B., Oct. 12.—At a meeting here tonight, four thousand people heard Premier Sir James Whitney and Premier Hazen. Premier Hazen created a great sensation by producing an affadavit from Mr. S. G. Mase of St. John's, who has just completed a dredging contract in the harbor. Mase states that in June, 1905, he tendered on this contract at 50c. per yard, but was not awarded the contract. Later on Hon. Mr. Pugsley, at that time Attorney-general, advised him to see Mr. Geo. McAvity, president of the Liberal Association, and one of the leading port managers. Mase and McAvity met by appointment in Ottawa, when the dredging contract was discussed. Mase said that he would tender again at 50c. a yard. "Why not make it 55c.," said McAvity, "and give me the extra 5c. a yard!" McAvity produced an agreement already prepared to that effect, and although Mase insisted that McAvity should share in the expense the agreement was made.

Under this agreement Mase states that he has paid McAvity $35,783. He further states that after he got the contract, Hon. Mr. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, asked him for $2500 or $3000, saying that he could assist him at Ottawa. Mase gave him $2000. This announcement has created a great sensation in St. John's.

Premier Hazen gives the dates for all of the transactions and he possesses one of Mase's checks with McAvity's endorsation on the back.

Mase has issued a writ for the return of the money paid to McAvity and against Mr. Pugsley for the $2,000.

Sleeping in Packing Case in Alleyway

A young boy, 12 years of age, who gives his name as Jones, was found sleeping in an empty dry goods box in the alley way at the side of The Times office. P. C. Meharry was making his rounds about 2.30 o'clock this morning, and as he passed the lane was attracted by the healthy snores of one enjoying a good sleep. The policeman lit a match, and was thus enabled to see the face of the little chap, who was covered up with old paper and packing. When awakened he told a sad story of having run away from home on Saturday morning. He said he had too much work to do, and was afraid he would be whipped. He slept Saturday and Sunday nights in one of the stables back of the Cavanagh House, and last night decided to change his boarding house. P. C. Meharry took him to the police station where he spent the rest of the night. He will appear before the police magistrate this morning.

True Bills on Murder Charge

(Special to The Times.)

North Bay, Oct. 12.—The Grand Jury today brought in true bills against Jas. Quinn and M. Morris, for murdering R. Frith Young, by stabbing at Iroquois Falls on May 20th last.

LOOKS LIKE SUICIDE.

Welland, Oct. 1.—The body of Jas. Shambruck, who disappeared last week, was found in a field yesterday, with a bottle of carbolic acid half-full, beside him.

What Do They Sure?

The above questions is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription."

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchia, stomach (as catarrhal dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous colitis), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerative stages of these affections it is often successful in effecting a cure.

"Favorite Prescription" is advised for the cure of one class of diseases—those peculiar weaknesses, derangements and irregularities incident to women only. It is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nervine. For weak women, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulæ of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines.

The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glycerin extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

Sir Wilfrid at Farnham, Quebec

(Special to The Times).

Farnham, Que., Oct. 12.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who is touring the province, arrived here today, accompanied by Hon. Sydney Fisher and Hon. L. B. Brodeur. They addressed a gathering of 5,000 people, who gave them a rousing reception. The weather was very cold and the crowd was evidently affected by the atmospheric conditions.

LOOKING FOR COMET'S TAIL.

Paris, Oct. 12.—The loss of its tail by the Morehouse and Borelli comet has astonished all the astronomers who were watching the course of the comet and the observatories are vainly searching the heavens for the lost member.

After a jury had been out an inordinately long time on a simple case, they filed into the court room, and the foreman said the judge they were unable to agree upon a verdict. The latter rebuked them, saying the case was a very clear one, and remanded them back to the jury room for a second attempt, adding: "If you are there too long I will have to send you in twelve suppers."

The foreman, in a rather irritated tone, spoke up and said: "May it please your honor, you might send in eleven suppers and one bundle of hay."

Tom—Oh! pshaw! Man is totally-unlike a carpet, for the more dust he has the less likely he is to get the shake.

HOME RULE IN CANADA.

Prof. Goldwin Smith says: Difference of principle between these warring parties there is substantially none. Nobody can tell what constitutes a Conservative or what constitutes a Liberal. Principles, so-called, are adopted or discarded just as the exigencies of the struggle require. The Liberal leader went into office an avowed free-trader. Now, he is having "a heart-to-heart conference with his friends the protected manufacturers." He went into office a strenuous reformer of the Senate, and the increase of Senatorial indemnities to carry the Autonomy Bill through that House shows to what his zeal for its reform has come. At present the two most important questions for the people practically seem to be whether a change of Ministry is likely to lead to greater purity of administration, and how far it is to be desired that the Government should be in French hands necessarily and visibly subject to the political influence of Rome.

Detroit Took Third Game of World's Championship Series by a Score of 8-3

(Special to The Times.)

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Before a cheering crowd of 15,000 fans, Detroit defeated Chicago in the third game of the series for the world's championship by a score of 8 to 3. Counting the world's series of last year the victory today was the first Detroit has won in eight contests for the world's highest baseball prize.

Mulbarn, who was selected by Manager Jennings to pitch for Detroit, was steady throughout the game, and held Chicago down to seven scattered hits and only passed one man to base on balls. Pfeister's left handed twisters did not seem to puzzle the men from Michigan. Besides issuing three passes to bases on balls, thirteen safe hits were scored against him, two of the cluster were doubles and six were in one innings. It was the 5th inning that gave Detroit the game.

The batteries were;—

Chicago—Raulbach, Pfeister and Kling.

Detroit—Mulbern and Thomas.

Man Cannot Steal His Own Clothes in Hamilton

Times Special.

Hamilton, Oct. 12.—Police Magistrate Jelfs refused to issue a warrant for the arrest of Jeff Brown, a race-track follower, who succeeded in stealing his suit of clothes out of a tailor shop without paying for having them cleaned. A county constable secured a warrant from a justice of the peace, and the arrest was made this morning. When Brown appeared in police court he was immediately dismissed. The magistrate took the view that a man cannot be charged with stealing his own clothes.

A Veterans' Association was Formed

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—The veterans from all parts of Canada formed a Canadian South African Veterans' Association, embracing all the local veterans' associations at the meeting here today. Col. Steele was elected president. A protest was made against the tax on the new land grants whereby the settlement duties must be made within six months of the location. A telegram of protest was sent to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

DEATH OF A BOTANIST.

London, Oct. 12.—John A. Balkwill, well-known throughout Canada as an expert botanist and horticulturist, and a highly respected citizen of London, died on Saturday.

Mothers Must Have Abundant Strength

No Mother Can Rear a Healthy Child Unless She is Strong Herself.

A woman's anxieties multiply tenfold about the time the new baby is expected.

If her strength is exhausted and her blood weak, it goes hard in the hour of trial.

Ferrozone should be used because it makes the blood nutritious and rich. By instilling new strength into every part of the body, it uplifts your spirits at once.

Childbirth is certainly made easier by Ferrozone. The following statement expresses the earnest gratitude of Mrs. M. E. Duckworth, of Durham. It is a woman's story,—of her own case—told that other women may profit by her experience;

"Before baby was born I was in a weak, miserable, nervous state. I had no reserve strength. I tried to build up, but nothing helped me. I looked upon the coming day with dread, knowing I was unequal to the occasion.

"Ferrozone braced me up at once, gave me strength and spirits, brought back my nerves and cheerfulness. From my experience with Ferrozone I recommend it to all expectant mothers."

There is more concentrated nourishment in Ferrozone than you can get from anything else. It supplies what weak systems need. Simply take one tablet at meals and you'll feel benefitted in a thousand ways.

Ferrozone makes healthy, virile, vigorous women; try it. 50c per box of fifty tablets, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13TH.

A NEW CONFERENCE OF THE POWERS

All Europe is talking of a new conference of the powers which took part in making the famous treaty of Berlin thirty years ago. One listens somewhat wearily to catch a suggestion that the court of arbitration provided at The Hague nine years ago, might now be utilized, but of that there is not a whisper. Instead there is a hum of diplomatic technicalities, of "fais accomplis", of "uti possidetis," and other imposing phases of the doctrine of might makes right. Turkey protests, Servia calls out her reserves, Great Britain intimates the need of a conference, but Austria is reported to hold that her treatment of Bosnia and Herzegovina is not a violation, is indeed but a logical and necessary completion of the principles of the Berlin Treaty.

Naturally the first thing to be done in regard to a conference is to agree as to the matters to be submitted to it. If Austria refuses to lay the assimilation of Bosnia and Herzegovina before the assembled Powers, and if Germany approves of that course, the conference becomes practically either impossible or futile, so far as concerns the one question now under discussion. Subsequently all that will remain for the Powers to do is to try to agree what other changes can be made that will be reasonably satisfactory to all concerned. The work of the conference would probably be not to enforce the Berlin Treaty, but to arrange for further infractions of it. That is not a prospect encouraging to those who had hoped that the principle of mutual obligation in international relations had made real progress in the last decade.

It may be said that it is better to negotiate than to fight. But here is a crisis in which there is involved the very basis of all international negotiation, the binding force of treaties on all who sign them. After what has taken place, wherein would a new treaty be of any more worth than the former one dealing with like questions and signed by the same Powers? Suppose the conference to be assembled, Count Aehrenthal for Austria-Hungary, accompanied by the smiling Buelow, for Germany, lays upon the table the treaty of 1878, torn down the middle, and invites the Powers to replace it. What would logically be the term of existence of the new agreement? Clearly it would not survive the moment when one or two of the Powers got ready to rend it as its predecessor has been rent. The situation indicates the state of affairs which for uncertainty and confusion is not palpably better than actual conflict. Apparently it is the state to which affairs are drifting.

SURGERY FOR LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

The statement made to the New York Academy of Medicine by Dr. Le Grand N. Denslow that he has effected cures in cases of locomotor ataxia by surgical methods suggests a most revolutionary departure in the treatment of that disease. The affection of the spinal cord known as tabes dorsalis of which locomotor ataxia is a development, is one of the most distressing and deadly maladies to which humanity is heir, and if the published reports of Dr. Denslow's discovery have not been exaggerated he has performed a remarkable service to mankind in demonstrating that the remedy is not medicine in combination with hygienic practices, but in the employment of surgical instruments.

The published reports of Dr. Denslow's new method are, unfortunately, a trifle vague. He is said to have found that locomotor ataxia is not due to systemic poisoning or to inflammation acting upon the spinal cord, but to a lesion or erosion existing "in a certain tract or duct in the lower part of the abdomen. What this duct is and its relation to the spinal cord have yet to be specified. This lesion, he says, produces a series of abnormal nerve impulses, affecting the lower part of the spine, and causing there a zone of destructive irritation. The disease of the duct can be removed by surgery, Dr. Denslow says, and cases are given by him in which tures were so effected.

Until more can be learned concerning Dr. Denslow's method, opinion as to its efficacy must be reserved. It is certainly entitled to a thorough investigation by competent practitioners before it can be either accepted as a really valuable curative or dismissed as one of the many supposed "discoveries" which deceive even those who honestly advance them as of permanent value to science. If it be all that is claimed for it in the newspapers the benefit of it to the world would be incalculable.

INDUSTRIAL ARBITROTION IN ENGLAND

It is well known that the British Board of Trade, a department of the government, has by timely mediation and conciliation prevented some serious and great strikes. It is not generally known that these interventions were not extraordinary. A statement issued by Mr. Churchill, the present head of the department, shows that in 1905 the board intervened in fourteen disputes, settling them all; in 1906 in twenty cases, settling sixteen, and in 1907 in thirty-nine cases, settling all but seven. In the first eight months of the present year no fewer than forty-seven cases of intervention occurred, and nearly all of them have been satisfactorily settled.

The board, in thus tendering its aid to industrial disputants, is acting under a law which gives it power to appoint a conciliator and arbitrator in trade controversies at the request of both parties. Sometimes the head of the board proffers his help in an extra-legal and informal way, and the influence of the great office secures a favorable response to his appeal. At any rate, the work of the department in this new sphere has so increased that Mr. Churchill has decided to establish a standing or permanent court of conciliation and arbitration. He can do this without waiting for or asking fresh legislation, and his plan has been widely indorsed. Even opposition newspapers speak well of it as another guaranty of industrial peace with justice and honor.

The court will be composed of three or five members, at the discretion and preference of the parties. Its fees and expenses will be paid by the department. The court will be nominated from three distinct panels—one drawn from permanent men in the employer class, another from the trade union leaders and representative workmen, and the third from the impartial and eminent citizens who are not directly connected with industry.

The court will have the help, where necessary, of technical assessors from the trade affected by the controversy before it. These assessors will have no votes, but they will sit with the court and explain obscure or unfamiliar points in the controversy.

The law provides for no compulsion in thus facilitating arbitration, and the progress of arbitration in England has been due to voluntary recognition of public interest and the fairness of the Board of trade. The setting up of a permanent court and the care taken to insure good judges should spell further advance toward industrial peace in England.

If Mr. Peter Smirlies, lessee of the Crystal Hall building, London, that was wrecked last year, will contribute $1,000 towards a fund of $8,000, a settlement can be reached in regard to the actions instituted against the proprietor, lessee, contractors and architect, who are defendants in damage suits involving $75,000.

Hackensack, N. J., Sept. 12. — August Eberhard, charged with the murder of his aunt, Mrs. Ottilie Eberhard, whom he shot and robbed on the tracks of the Susquehanna railroad on the night of July 18, will be placed on trial Monday.

The Business Outlook

The most interesting and encouraging incident in the financial and commercial record of the week was the announcement of an increase of $45,000 in the earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway over the corresponding week in 1907. Now that the decline in the weekly earnings of that great road has apparently been checked, it may be reasonably anticipated that succeeding weekly returns will continue to show an improvement over those of last year. It is a satisfactory increase also from the circumstance that it would indicate that farmers are willing to sell their grain and thereby contribute to the financial relief that the proceeds of their crops will bring about by their sale. While the benefit that this will bring about will be most directly felt in centres like Winnipeg, indirectly it will have favourable effect on business in the East by the liquidation of debts incurred in the past.

Although there is little change in the local business situation, the fact that the bank clearings for the past week show a small increase over those for the corresponding week in last year—the first time for twelve months that a decrease has not been shown—must be regarded as an encouraging feature. In considering this matter the fact should not be overlooked that the range of price for many commodities is lower than it was a year ago, thus enabling business to be done with less money and thereby decreasing the aggregate amount of the cheques passing through the Clearing House, although the bulk of the commodities dealt with may be equal to or even greater than what it was a year ago.

The Autumn trade throughout the country is likely to be satisfactory according to the reports reaching the wholesale centres from the outlying districts, and this applies to both Canada and the United States. There is, however, a disposition to take a conservative view of the immediate future and such a course is undoubtedly a wise and prudent one. The pending elections in the two countries exercise a quieting influence on general business, and there is a general disposition to await the results of the electoral contests before embarking on new enterprises. At the same time there is a consensus of opinion that things will improve in the New Year, and the existence of such a sentiment is itself a factor in bringing about an improvement.

While the condition of things in the United States has an effect on affairs on this side of the line, it is an influence that is decreasing with the development going on in Canada and the growth of that industrial independence which is being brought about by the progress being made in different lines of manufacture. The home market, which is now protected to a very great extent through the operation of the National Policy is becoming increasingly valuable to the Canadian manufacturer with the growth of population, and the latter is sensibly stimulated by the influx of population into the North-West. That portion of the Dominion is exercising an influence on the course of events throughout the country far beyond what might be assumed from a consideration of the proportion which its population bears to that of the rest of Canada. The flow of immigration into that section is, therefore, a matter of no little interest. Although from various circumstances there has been a partial check to the influx during this year, there are already indications that the volume of the immigration next year will be large, both from Europe and the United States.

The Mail has a report that Earl Grey has refused to assent to any public appointments till after the elections.

F. R. Head and John Randolph were fined $100 or six months at Schreiber for being ringleaders in a riot at Schreiber.

More Interest in the North West

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—The high grade and volume of the crop this year has been the means of further increasing the number of inquiries received by boards of trade throughout Western Canada, from all over the United States and Eastern Canada, asking for information in connection with openings for manufacturing and commercial business.

Real estate has been more active and several large deals in farm and city property are reported through the Western Canadian Real Estate Association here, an organization that practically covers the realty interests from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Coast.

A few of the more important sales were: 8,00 acres, Southern Alberta, to an American syndicate for $84,000; the Lansdowne Hotel at Regina for $168,000, sold by Mr. Alex. Bell, who purchased the property less than one year ago for $50,000. In Edmonton, 100 feet near Edmonton Club, sold for $25,000, and in Winnipeg an 88-foot frontage on Donald street has been sold for 485,000.

Mayor Darcy Scott of Ottawa, assistant chairman of the Board of Rail way Commissioners, will continue his mayoralty duties until the end of the year.

Richard Simpson of Bannockburn was acquitted at Belleville on a serious charge made by Mrs. Hugh De-

FOOLED BOTH WAYS.

The Experience of a Visitor in a Lunatic Asylum.

"I was staying," says a writer in the Liverpool Mercury, "with an uncle who was on very friendly terms with a doctor who kept a private asylum and who occasionally gave a dance for the patients, while also inviting some of his friends.

"During my visit we received an invitation, and on the appointed evening we arrived to find the room crowded with people all in evening dress.

"My first partner was a man whom I thought looked decidedly queer, such a restless, hunted expression in his eyes, and occasionally during the dance he stopped and glanced searchingly around. Dear me, how glad I was when the dance was over, and, making some excuse, I hurried away, only to run up against my hostess and to be introduced to my second partner.

"Ah, me, what a handsome man, and, girl-like, I fell head over ears in love. I put out my most bewitching ways and hoped I looked my best and took care that I helped him find a cosy corner for the sit-out.

"It was delightful, and I was just lamenting that it was about time for the next dance when, horrors, clutching hold of my hand and frantically waving his other hand, he started roaring out texts, when suddenly, to my relief and astonishment, who should come up, followed by two men, but my first partner, whom I found to be a doctor, while my handsome partner was a religious maniac!"

AUSTRALIAN RAIN.

When It Does Fall It Pours Down In a Perfect Flood.

How different things are in the old world from what they are in the far-away tropics!

"They had no rain here for a fortnight, and they called it a drought!" wrote an Australian from Scotland in a scornfully superior tone calculated to induce the belief that it never rains in Australia and that droughts last a hundred years. Not so. Australia is the land of contrasts. A drought has lasted for seven years. But what is there even in Scotland to compare with the persistency of Australian rain when it does see fit to fall?
